for their contributions to this year's Pro Preview

Dear 2012 NFL Magazine Reader,

WOW! Three years ago I decided to put out a full color NFL Preview Magazine and I could not have been more pleased with the results. I'm excited about this fourth edition and have received incredible feedback from those of you who have purchased a copy in the last three years. As you are well aware, I will continue to improve this product and feel I'm very close to becoming the NFL publication that "The Experts Cannot Do Without!".

Unlike my College Football Preview Magazine I do not write any of the 32 team writeups myself. This year the team previews were written by my office staff including Ron Spring, Sean Rhodes, Brandon Pertner, Martina Myles as well as Rick Korch. I did write the forecasts for each division using my 5 sets of Power Ratings (9 for college) and hope to match the success of years' past. I would also like to thank Dennis Hubbard for many of the photos seen throughout all of my magazines.

We strive to provide the most up-to-date and accurate information available in both our college and pro previews. As everyone remembers, last year the NFL suffered through a lockout that not only affected the front offices, players and fans, it affected publications like my own. I still felt that we had the most up-to-date preview available on the market. This year we were lucky to avoid such drama and actually sent the Pro Preview to press in early June, so it could be one of the first NFL Previews in your hands this season. Even if I waited until the day before the season started to publish my magazines, things are bound to change. Due to our print deadline all roster moves listed are as of June 1, 2012. Make sure you keep checking out PhilSteele.com throughout the season where we have the most current NFL information available. It's nothing but football 24/7/365!

I would also like to take just a moment to personally thank Erik Kuselias for his contributions to the magazine this season. If you flip to the Fantasy Section, you will see that Erik provided the writeups for all 32 NFL teams on those pages. I would also like to thank my staff, whose dedication knows no bounds. Your hard work and long hours never go unnoticed by myself or the readers of my magazines.

I do value your opinion and input. If you would like to see something added or expanded in 2013, please fill out the We Value Your Opinion questionnaire on page 288 and mail it in. I have added many features over the years and I am willing to keep expanding, so let me know what you would like to see added or changed. For example, this year we added our Strength of Schedule Rankings based on this year's Power Ratings and the NFL's Rankings are based on last years records. Your ideas and suggestions for my NFL Preview will help me to improve next year's magazine!

Thank you for purchasing my 2012 NFL Preview Magazine! Phil Steele

TURNOVERS = TURNAROUND

BY PHIL STEELE

Turnovers can have a big impact on games and on a team's season. They can also lead to many misleading final scores.

Every year in my College Football Preview I write an article entitled "Turnovers = Turnaround" and it describes how teams that have good fortune one year (plus double-digit turnovers) usually have a weaker record the next season. It also shows how teams that suffer misfortune (-10 or more TO's) usually have a much better record the next year. In the article, I go over many examples of how turnovers can have an impact on the college game.

Turnovers have the same impact on the pro game. The NFL record for TO's in a playoff game is 9 and that occurred in the Super Bowl. Buffalo outFD'd Dallas but of course was dominated on the scoreboard 52-17.

One of the best examples happened to Pittsburgh in 2002. The Steelers dominated with an amazing 24-3 FD and 422-47 yardage edge. As you would expect the game was a rout with the final score 24-6. Surprisingly, the team with just 47 yards (Houston) won! The difference was special teams and Pittsburgh's -4 TO margin.

In the 2008 playoffs the Ravens were outFD'd 21-9 and outgained 391-211 but won the game 13-10 thanks to 3 Tennessee TO's which were all inside the BAL 32.

LY in wk#1 Pittsburgh had 7 TO's and Baltimore had zero. The Ravens only had 17 FD's (out FD'd by 3) but cruised to a 35-7 win.

Turnovers can not only make a difference in a game, but can make the difference between a winning and losing season and here are some NFL teams that were plus double-digit turnovers one year and saw their records plummet the next season:

The 1997 Kansas City only outgained foes by an average of 19 ypg over the course of the season and yet finished with a super 13-3 record. As a good comparison, the 2001 Pittsburgh Steelers were 13-3 and outgained their foes by an average of 110 ypg! The reason the Chiefs were so successful, despite being far from dominant, had to do with being +12 in TO's. The next year KC was still on the positive side at +1 TO's but they dropped to just 7-9.

The 1998 Atlanta Falcons did the "Dirty Bird" dance all the way to the Super Bowl and finished the reg season with a 14-2 record. The Falcons were very fortunate as they were +20 in TO's en route to their super season. The next year featured a startling turnaround in the TO column as they plummeted to -17 (37 net TO difference) and their 1999 record also made a startling turnaround as they fell to 5-11.

No one can doubt that good fortune smiled on the Bears in 2001. They were below-average statistically (#27 off, #15 def) yet led the NFL in fewest points allowed. Chicago also benefitted from two late interception returns for td's to win games that appeared lost. Overall they were +13 in the turnover column and they finished the reg ssn 13-3. The next year they were -7 in TO's and "Da Bears" finished just 4-12.

In 2003 six teams made my "going down" list including BOTH Super Bowl contestants (TB and OAK) and those two BOTH missed the playoffs and had losing records in 2004! Kansas City, Tennessee and San Francisco were 3 others on the list and after going a combined 32-16 (67%) they were just 14-34 (29%) in 2004 for 18 fewer wins.

More recently Miami was #1 in the NFL with +17 turnovers in '08 and finished 11-5, but the next season fell to 7-9.

In 2009 only 2 teams made the list and while GB and Philly each still had winning 2010 seasons they could not match '09's win total.

In the 2010 season three teams had +12 or more TO's and made my list in LY's mag in NE, Pittsburgh and Atlanta. While the Steelers still matched their record, both the Patriots and the Falcons saw their reg ssn win total fall. In fact Atlanta was 13-3 in '10 with the #16 off & #16 def. LY despite improving (#10 off & #12 def) they finished 10-6 with 3 fewer reg ssn wins.

Teams that benefitted from double-digit turnovers the previous year rarely get a repeat of that good fortune. I have proven this in the college game. Here are the results from the last 19 years.

COLLEGE TEAMS WITH +10 OR MORE TO'S

Total	Weaker	Improved	Same
281	182 (64.8%)	65 (23.1%)	34 (12.1%)

I figured that the NFL would not show as much of a turnaround, but was actually surprised to see the NFL has had MORE turnarounds. First of all, the NFL season is 16 games long as opposed to 12 or 13 for the colleges. With the extra NFL games, I upped the criteria from double-digit TO's to plus or minus 12 turnovers or .75 per game. Here are the results from the last 20 years.

SINCE 1991 NFL TMS WITH +12 OR MORE TO'S

Total	Weaker	Improved	Same
70	51 (72.9%)	11 (15.7%)	8 (11.4%)

NFL TMS WITH +12 OR MORE TO'S THE L6Y

Total	Weaker	Improved	Same
19	17 (89.5%)	1 (5.3%)	1 (5.3%)

This year there are only 3 teams on the list incl San Francisco with an amazing +28 in TO's which matches the highest in the NFL the L10Y (NE in '10). In fact in the previous 9 seasons only FOUR teams have been +20 or more in TO's but 2 reached the plateau LY.

Let's take a look at some teams who had terrible luck (lots of turnovers) in one year then drastically improved the next year without those turnovers.

The 1996 NY Jets were a league low -20 in TO's and not so amazingly they were just 1-15. The 1997 season brought in the disciplinarian coaching style of Bill Parcells and the team's TO margin improved greatly going from -20 to +3. Did this have an impact on their win total? The 1997 Jets not only improved by EIGHT games in the win column, but finished with a winning record at 9-7!! Now that's a Turnover=Turnaround story.

More recently in 2006 two teams were off seasons in which they finished -24 in TO's. New Orleans was coming off a disastrous 3-13 season. In 2006 they were +7 in TO's and they posted a 7 game turnaround finishing at 10-6. The Packers also benefitted from +4 in turnovers with an 8-8 record in '06 after going 4-12 in 2005.

In 2007 the Ravens had playoff expectations but with poor QB play they were -17 in TO's and finished at 5-11. Despite a rookie QB at the helm the Ravens finished 9-7 in 2008. They were +13 in TO's and thanks in part to a 30 TO difference from '07 to '08 they made it to the AFC Championship game.

After the 2009 season, 4 teams made my 2010 "Going Up" list with St Louis improving by 6 wins, Detroit by 4, Oakland by 3 and Cleveland staying the same.

Last year was certainly a rarity as Miami and Jacksonville both saw their records drop from 2010 (both HC's let go) while Buffalo improved their win total by 2.

As I previously stated, if a team received bad breaks the year before, they will usually be heading for better fortune the following year. Here are the past 19 years of college football.

COLLEGE TEAMS WITH -10 OR MORE TO'S

Total	Weaker	Improved	Same
232	159 (68.5%)	44 (19.0%)	29 (12.5%)

Once again I was very surprised the NFL game yielded even higher percentages. I again made the adjustment to -12 or more TO's and here are the results from the last 20 years.

SINCE 1991 NFL TMS WITH -12 OR MORE TO'S

Total	Weaker	Improved	Same
70	48 (68.6%)	14 (20.0%)	8 (11.4%)

Seven teams were -12 or more in TO's last season which is a new recent high as only 3 teams qualified LY and only a total of 9 teams in the last 3 seasons.

While I've given you numerous examples of teams that have improved and were much weaker because of turnovers, the Ravens have been the Poster Child for this article. From 2004-'08 they rotated seasons with a positive and negative double-digit TO margin.

'04	+11 TO's	9-7
'05	-10 TO's	6-10	-3 net wins
'06	+15 TO's	13-3	+7 net wins
'07	-17 TO's	5-11	-8 net wins
'08	+13TO's	11-5	+6 net win

Game Grades...

by Phil Steele

Most of you have been buying Phil Steele's College Football Preview for years and you know just how much that magazine has improved throughout the years. Thanks to your input I continue to make improvements and add information that you cannot obtain from any other magazine. I am extremely excited about the 3rd edition of Phil Steele's NFL Magazine as I continue to make it better and I hope that it will rival my College Preview Magazine as being "the one the experts cannot do without".

One of the new features I added to the 2010 CFB Preview was the team's grade for each game. The grade represents not only how much the team won by or how much they outgained an opponent by but it's also compared to what my computer forecasted. For example, Oklahoma St last year played against Kansas. They won 70-28 and outgained them 600-478. That game grade was only 81.1 because the Cowboys were expected to win easily and in fact the game was rated as their second lowest game grade of the season! Oklahoma St, however did have the #3 best game grade of the entire NCAA last year with their dominating 66-6 win over Texas Tech (outgained them 637-270) on the road. This was a Red Raider team that beat Oklahoma earlier in the year on the road! Ironically the single top performance of last season was the national title game which saw Alabama beat LSU 21-0 outgaining them 384-92 and didn't allow the Tigers across midfield until the 4Q. While other teams won & outgained opponents by more (see Missouri vs W Illinois), when you add in the strength of opponent and where the game was played you get the true Phil Steele Game Grade. Here is the list of last season's Top 10 college performances.

TOP 10 COLLEGE GAME GRADES FOR 2011

Rk	Team	Opponent	Score	Team's Yds	Opponent's Yds	Outgained Foe By	Game Grade
1	Alabama	vs LSU	21-0	384	92	292	124.3
1	Oklahoma	at KANSAS ST	58-17	690	240	450	124.3
3	OKLAHOMA ST	Texas Tech	66-6	637	270	367	122.9
4	Oklahoma	vs Texas	55-17	453	259	194	118.5
5	Wisconsin	vs Northern Illinois	49-7	621	237	384	118.0
6	MISSOURI	Western Illinois	69-0	744	44	700	115.5
7	SOUTH CAROLINA	Kentucky	54-3	639	96	543	114.7
7	OKLAHOMA ST	Oklahoma	44-10	495	358	137	114.7
9	Boise St	at COLORADO ST	63-13	742	231	511	113.3
10	Alabama	at MISSISSIPPI	52-7	615	141	474	111.7
10	MICHIGAN	Minnesota	58-0	580	177	403	111.7

As I do with most articles and evaluations I translate them to the NFL and provide you with that information. On each team's stat page, or the first of the teams six pages, you will find last season's game-by-game stats. On the right side you will find a game grade, a team's season rank and an NFL rank comparing it to every game played last year. You'll see that last season's top NFL performance was by Houston. The Texans beat the Titans 41-7 and outgained them 518-148. On the Houston page you will find a game grade of 112.5, a season rank of #1, and an NFL rank of #1 meaning it was the NFL's best performance and of course Houston's best game of the 18 they played last year. On the flip side, if you go to Tennessee's page you will find an individual game grade vs HOU of 50.4, it was of course their worst performance of the season (#16) and it was an NFL low #534. All 32 teams played 16 regular season games (32x16) equaling 512 plus 8 teams in the WC, 8 teams in the CSF, 4 teams in the CF and 2 in the SB equals the 534 games played. Here are last season's Top 10 NFL performances:

TOP 10 NFL GAME GRADES FOR 2011

FINDING VALUE IN THE YPG

by Phil Steele

If you've been reading my College Preview Magazine, you know that every year I look at teams that are much better than their final record would indicate or those that are much weaker than the final standings would indicate based on the yards per game earned in league play. I only base statistics on league play in the NCAA because teams play a varying difficulty in non-conference slates which effects their overall ypg (yards per game) for the season.

A prime example from 2007 was the Illinois Fighting Illini. I said they were a much stronger team than the final record indicated. The 2006 team was just 1-7 in Big Ten play, but actually outgained foes by 24 ypg in conference play which was more indicative of a 5-3 team. Illinois was indeed underrated coming into 2007 and did not disappoint finishing their season with a Rose Bowl appearance. In the NFL I look at the entire season as there is more parity and the strength of schedule is fairly even. I devised a formula which takes into account the net wins of a team recorded from the previous season comparing it to the net yards per game (ypg) of the previous year. I needed some way to translate the ypg into net wins so I determined that every 10 net ypg a team had (+ or -) would translate into one net win or loss. As an example: if a team outgained their foes by 320 yards on the year they would have outgained foes by 20 ypg during the 16 game season which would work out to an expected 9-7 season. Let me show you how that translates. Previously a team with 7 wins and 7 losses would have equal yards to their opponent as they had an equal record. In the other 2 games (2 solid victories) they would have outgained their foes by 160 ypg. Naturally, since this is a statistical formula based on yards, the numbers do not always transfer out to a true NFL type record. A team could have +0.5 net wins which cannot happen on field but the ypg net wins is hypothetical so the numbers can vary.

Yards/16 Games=ypg		Net Wins	Record
-1280 yds = -80 ypg	=	-8 wins	4-12
- 960 yds = -60 ypg	=	-6 wins	5-11
- 640 yds = -40 ypg	=	-4 wins	6-10
- 320 yds = -20 ypg	=	-2 wins	7-9
Even (0 net yds)	=	0 wins	8-8
+ 320 yds = +20 ypg	=	2 wins	9-7
+ 640 yds = +40 ypg	=	4 wins	10-6
+ 960 yds = +60 ypg	=	6 wins	11-5
+1280 yds = +80 ypg	=	8 wins	12-4

I went back in the NFL to 2001 and compared what the ypg record would have been vs what the net win total actually was. Let's first look at the overrated teams from the previous year and how they fared the following season. From 2001-2010 there were 50 teams who graded out -4.7 net wins or more in the ypg factor from their actual net wins. The 2001 Bears graded out at -11.8 net wins with the ypg saying they should have been -1.8 wins (-17.75 ypg) and their actual record was 13-3 or +10 net wins. In 2002 Chicago plummeted to 4-12. A couple other teams of note in this section were the Philadelphia Eagles in 2004 which were +10 net wins with a 13-3 record. They were only +31.5 ypg (+3.2 wins). That was a 6.8 net win difference and the Eagles had a losing record the next year. Another notable team was the 2003 Kansas City Chiefs who finished 13-3 (+10 net wins) but only outgained foes by 12.68 ypg (+1.3). They dropped by 6 net wins the next year to 7-9. Since 2001 there have been 50 teams in the NFL whose net win difference between the ypg net wins and the actual net wins was -4.7 or more and only 9 of the 50 (18%) improved their record the next season. Six times they had the same record the next year and 35 times (70%) the team had a weaker record. That means that teams that were -4.7 or more in the ypg vs net wins the previous year had the same or weaker record 82% of the time.

In last year's article 5 teams made this list. New England was the top team and had one fewer win while Atlanta and Chicago each had 3 fewer wins. Three of the four teams who won 13 or more games in 2011 fall into the -4.7 or more wins category this year.

GOING DOWN

Green Bay	-14.6
San Francisco	-9.7
New England	-8.3

Here is an example of how I computed LY's minus net wins. LY Green Bay was 15-1 for +14 net wins but was OUTGAINED by 103 yards for a -6.4 ypg average. The ypg would have had GB at -0.6 net wins while they were actually +14 for a difference of -14.6 on the season.

From 2001 to 2010 many teams in the NFL were much stronger than their final record. The team that had the most glaring difference was the Cincinnati Bengals of 2002 who finished just 2-14 but were only outgained by 60 yards on the season or 3.8 ypg. Using the ypg to determine their net wins for the season, the Bengals would have been -0.4. When subtracted from their -12 net wins, they were 11.6 net wins better than their actual record. The next year the Bengals actually showed that improvement on the field gaining +6 net wins. Another example was the 2005 New Orleans Saints who finished just 3-13 on the year or -10 net wins. The 2005 Saints actually outgained foes by 37 yards or 2.3 ypg. Using the ypg, the Saints should basically have been an 8-8 team or +0.2 net wins. The difference between their actual net wins and the ypg net wins was 10.2. In 2006 the Saints were the most improved team in the NFL winning 7 more games! In 2008 the top team on this list was the Miami Dolphins. Miami was 1-15 in 2007 for -14 net wins despite being outgained by only 54.7 ypg (-5.5 wins). In 2008 they finished +10 net wins from the year prior and won the AFC East. In 2009 the top team was New Orleans. The Saints had been 8-8 in 2008 but outgained foes by 71.2 ypg which formulates to +7.1 wins. In 2009 New Orleans had a dream season culminating in their first Super Bowl Championship.

Going back to that magical 4.7 figure, we see that since 2001, 45 teams in the NFL were 4.7 net wins better in the ypg factor than they were in the actual record. In the last 3 years 9 of the 10 teams on the "Going Up" list improved. Last year Cincinnati was +5 wins while Houston was +4 wins and Dallas was +2. Of the 45 teams, two had the same record the next year and only 6 (13%) had a weaker record. That means 37 of the 45 teams (82%) improved their record the next year and overall 39 of the 45 teams have had the same or better record the next year which comes out to 87%. Here are this year's teams who were much better than LY's final record would indicate and fall into the +4.7 net wins category in the ypg factor.

GOING UP

Philadelphia	+7.4
Minnesota	+7.2
Washington	+5.7
Carolina	+5.2
San Diego	+4.7

Let's take a look at this year's top "Going Up" team. Philadelphia outgained foes by 1,188 total yards or 74.3 ypg. That would translate to +7.4 wins on the year but they were actually 0 net wins finishing 8-8. Look for the Eagles to finally display the "dream team" promise which was expected last year.

Close Wins, Close Losses

by Phil Steele

Much like a stock broker, my job is to find value. As with every article in my magazine, the work I've put into college football translates into the NFL and it's no different when the pros are off a season with multiple close wins or close losses.

I use a TD or less as a base for my calculation because if a team won or lost by a TD or less, they are truly only 1 play away from changing the outcome. There are instances in which a game would be added or deleted. An example is if a team trailed by 13 points and scored a TD on the final play, they were never within "one play" of winning. I also use the term "net" close wins or losses which takes the close wins minus the close losses for a final "net" number. As an example, last year Oakland had 7 close wins and 2 close losses finishing with 5 "net" close wins. Conversely, Minnesota had 2 close wins and 9 close losses finishing with 7 "net" close losses.

In my FBS studies when a team had 2+ close losses they were more fortunate the following season. In fact in the last 10 years there have been 255 college teams in this category and 77.2% have had the same or better record. The more close losses in one season translates to a better chance for success the following season and in that same time span 47 teams have had 4+ net close losses with 91.4% having the same or better record the following year.

I then looked at how college teams perform the season after having multiple close wins. In the last 10 years 273 teams have had 2+ net close wins with 73.6% having the same or weaker record the following season. The more close wins a team had, the higher chance of a weaker record. Teams with 4 or more close wins have had a weaker or the same record 46 of 54 times or 85.2%.

I was excited to translate this to the NFL. Since 2006, there have been 50 teams that have had 2+ net close losses. Of those teams, 38 improved, 2 had the same record and only 10 had a weaker record for an outstanding 80% of teams with the same or improved records. As with the NCAA, the more close losses translated into a higher %. NFL teams that are off 4 or more net close losses have improved 15 of 17 times (88%)!

When looking at teams that have had 2 or more net close wins, it has occurred 48 times in 5 seasons. While not as strong as above, teams have had a worse record 30 times, the same record 7 times and have improved 11 times meaning 77% of the time the team has the same or weaker record the following season. By tightening the parameters to 4+ net close wins, teams have had a weaker record 12 times, the same record twice and better record 4 times for a 78% record.

Let's take a look at last year's results. The 2010 season saw Atlanta finish with 5 net close wins. LY after having just 1 net close win they fell from 13-3 to 10-6. There were a total of 11 teams in 2010 that had 2 or more net close wins and 10 saw their record stay the same or get weaker in 2011. There were 13 teams in 2010 that had 2 or more net close losses and 9 improved their record LY. Dallas and Cincinnati topped the list with 5 net close losses in 2010 and both improved by a combined 7 wins last year.

This season again we have one team that had 5 net close wins LY in the Oakland Raiders and the Minnesota Vikings are the first to be coming off a season with 7 net losses in the L5Y.

FOOTBALL 365 DAYS OF THE YEAR!

SLIPPING AND SLIDING

By Phil Steele

In my College Preview Magazine each year I devise many different formulas which look at teams that had good or bad fortune the previous year. The charts usually show those teams which had the good fortune generally do not have the same results the following season. I call this method "Slipping and Sliding." As I noted the last few years in the Turnovers=Turnaround article, results have been even stronger for the NFL than they have for college football. The reason for that is there is far more parity in the NFL. In fact the difference between the best and worst NFL team is less than the difference between the best and worst team in most college football conferences.

First I will examine how teams fared after making a great improvement the previous year. I charted the NFL teams over the last 9 years and noted which teams made the biggest improvement in their record from the previous season. As I expected, the teams that made the biggest improvement generally slide back some the following year. In the NFL from 2002-'10 there were 76 teams that improved their record by 3 wins or more from the previous season. Of those 76 teams only 11 had a better record, 8 were the same and 57 had a weaker record meaning that a team did not improve or had a weaker record 86% of the time. The biggest improvements prior to 2007 were made by the 2004 Pittsburgh Steelers, who improved by 9 net wins (6-10 to 15-1), and the 2004 SD Chargers, who improved by 8 net wins (4-12 to 12-4). In the season after their big improvement, the Steelers slid by 4 net wins (15-1 to 11-5) and SD by 3 net wins (12-4 to 9-7). Four years ago we had the largest improvement yet as Miami was coming of a 1-15 season. After being +10 net wins (11-5 in 2008) they fell back to 7-9 in 2009 finishing -4 net wins. Tampa Bay was +7 wins in 2010 (10-6) and was #1 on the list LY and as expected dropped to 4-12 (-6 wins).

In 2008 the chart was almost perfect. Nine teams made the list and only ONE improved their record and that was by 1 game. In 2009 six teams made the "Going Down" chart of which 5 had a weaker record and 1 that had the same record. LY 10 teams made the list and only one (Detroit) managed to improve their record. The top 3 teams all saw their wins dropped by a combined 14 wins last year!

Here are the NINE teams for 2011 that had their record improve by 3 net wins or more and these teams have a 75% chance of a weaker record this year!

Generally these charts are a two-way street and it has been just as good of an indicator going in the opposite direction. As I did with the net wins I took the teams that had 3 or more net losses from the previous year and found that the numbers weren't quite as strong. By tweaking the chart to use teams that had 4 or more net losses from the previous season I got the results I wanted.

Since 2002 there have been 64 teams that have had 4 or more net losses from the previous year and 47 (73%) have had a better record. Of the teams that had 6 net losses an amazing 21 out of 23 (91%) improved their record. LY's results saw 5 of the 8 teams improve their record. Cincinnati and Carolina were on top of the chart with +6 losses and the Panthers went 6-10 LY which was +4 wins while the Bengals were +5 wins and made the playoffs at 9-7! Both now make my "Going Down" box this year.

Over the L4Y there have been 8 teams that were +6 or more in net wins from the previous year ("Going Down") and all 8 teams had weaker records by at least 2 games each. Last year there were 3 teams that fit the criteria. On the flip side in the last 4 seasons there have been a combined 11 teams that have had 6+ net losses from the previous year and 10 have improved. Obviously when teams improve a great deal they find themselves going from one list to the other. Baltimore was 5-11 and was a "Going Up" team in 2007 and improved to 11-5 so they made "Going Down" and did so finishing 9-7 in 2009. Cleveland was the opposite as they were on our "Going Down" list in 2008 after a 10-6 season. They went 4-12 and made our "Going Up" list in 2009 and improved.

Eight teams are listed in this article for a 2nd straight season. Cincinnati, Carolina, Denver and Arizona were on last year's "Going Up" and this year's "Going Down" while Tampa Bay and St Louis are the opposite. Detroit makes the "Going Down" list for a 2nd straight year and since 1997 only GB has done that (+4 wins '06 & +5 in '07) and they were -9 wins in 2008. Indy makes the "Going Up" list for a 2nd straight year which is also just the second time that's happened S/'97. Carolina was -4 losses in '09 & -6 in 2010 and finished the 2011 season at 6-10 which was +4 wins.

The combined lists go from a total of 18 teams in last years article to just 12 this year. Hopefully your favorite team is one of the 3 teams on the "Going Up" list giving them a 73% chance of a better record.

2011 teams that had 3 or more net wins from 2010:

GOING DOWN

San Francisco	+7 wins	Detroit	+4 wins
Cincinnati	+5 wins	Houston	+4 wins
Green Bay	+5 wins	Arizona	+3 wins
Carolina	+4 wins	Tennessee	+3 wins
Denver	+4 wins

2011 teams that had 4 or more net losses than the previous year:

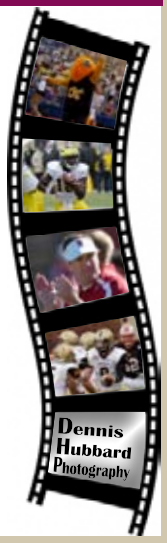

GOING UP

Indianapolis	+8 losses
Tampa Bay	+6 losses
St Louis	+5 losses

FCS (Division IAA) Guide

By Phil Steele

At the end of 2006 the NCAA changed its terminology and began referring to IAA as FCS, which stands for Football Championship Subdivision. They are now call IA teams FBS teams. Now, I study college football 365 days a year and since I have referred to them as IA and IAA for so many years, and write the team preview myself, it's only natural there are some spots where I call them IAA teams and other spots where I use the correct term of FCS. If you see FCS that of course refers to IAA.

This article is about my ever-expanding FCS coverage. LY there were 126 FCS teams but 4 teams moved up to FBS this year. That gives us 124 FBS teams and 122 FCS teams. While these teams have less scholarships to give out, the numbers vary. Some leagues do not offer football scholarships at all while some give up to the max of 63 (85 for FBS). The attendance of most programs pale in comparison to many of the FBS teams (avg attendance is listed on the team's right-hand page), but a team like Appalachian St, which averaged 26,211, would rank above 38 FBS teams. The bottom line is these schools do play solid football and I enjoy watching FCS games whenever they are on TV. Since FBS teams voted to expand their schedules to 12 games there have been many more matchups between these divisions and "upsets" have become more common like 5 years ago when Appalachian St beat Michigan. In 2010 James Madison upset #13 ranked ACC Champ Virginia Tech in Lane Stadium. In 2011, both teams that played for the FCS championship beat an FBS team as Sam Houston St beat New Mexico 48-45 in OT and North Dakota St beat Minnesota 37-24.

If you are an FCS fan who is frustrated by the fact that no magazine really gives top-notch coverage on your school then I am willing to lend a hand. My National Magazine has ZERO coverage on FCS teams. Checking past National Magazines Athlon also had zero coverage and Lindy's National Magazine had 4 pages total of FCS coverage. Street and Smith was the only other National Magazine that gave at least a paragraph on each FCS team but they scaled back and have now merged with The Sporting News.

Since we concentrate on nothing but football year round, we continue to expand our FCS coverage. A lot of the information we add is a direct result of customer requests and we would love your input.

Let me give you a quick history on how my magazine has expanded its coverage of FBS teams through the years. I started the magazine in 1995 and it had 88 IA teams in it with no coverage of the MAC or the smaller southern independents (now the Sun Belt) at all! In the 4th year I gave three pages total to the 24 teams that played IA that were not in the main magazine. Those 3 pages were a sheet of schedules for the 24 teams, the previous year's results and one page of conference forecasts, so each of the 24 teams were allotted just one paragraph on that page! In 1999 I gave the 25 smaller IA teams their own page and the coverage on the MAC and Sun Belt teams increased to 28 pages for the 25 teams! I gave them the same amount of coverage in 2000. In 2001, I welcomed the MAC to the big leagues with TWO FULL PAGES on every team, the same amount of coverage the SEC, Big Ten and other BCS conferences received. Finally in 2002 I upgraded it to two full pages for EVERY FBS team.

Now let's look at my FCS coverage over the years. Naturally when the minor IA teams were getting very little coverage I had ZERO IAA information in the National Magazine. In 2003, I dipped my toe into the water and had a member of my staff who followed IAA closely write a 1 page article on IAA football with a Preseason Top 25. I did not get a lot of feedback on my questionnaires and I went back to zero coverage. In 2005, we put out three Regional Magazines for the Big Ten, SEC and Big 12. I wanted to put a couple of pages on regionally significant IAA teams in each magazines. For many years we kept track of all IAA statistics so we knew how good those teams were when they faced IA foes. Jim Seman, a longtime member of my staff, works until 6:00 AM on Sunday mornings during football season making sure all of the stats for both FBS and FCS are entered into our computer system and is our resident FCS expert. He wrote two pages with a Top 25 forecast in the 2005 Regionals. When I read through the questionnaires (yes, I read every one!) that summer there was growing interest in expanded coverage. In 2006, I went wild. I had Jim, with the help of Josh Buchanan, write up a full-length paragraph on each FCS team and we expanded to 27 pages in my Pac-10 Regional Magazine.

Five years ago I expanded it again to one quarter of a page on each team. In 2008, I DOUBLED IT TO ONE HALF PAGE PER TEAM!! I started using some of the same computer formulas and systems that I use for FBS forecasts for the FCS teams. These include my 9 sets of power ratings, applying those ratings to the upcoming schedule, Turnovers=Turnaround and all of the various forecast articles such as YPP, Lettermen Lost, Starts Lost to Injury, etc. My goal is to have it be BY FAR the most in-depth FCS preseason magazine equal to how the FBS version is the most accurate.

Two years ago I took the next step with a FULL PAGE on EVERY FCS team! It was in my SEC/ACC/Big East preview which was over 324 pages. Last year, I took yet another step and decided to have my first ever FCS stand-alone preview with more than 175 pages devoted ONLY to FCS football! This year will be our second edition. If you're an FCS fan I can promise you there is no other preview like it on the market today. You can order it through our offices by calling us at 1-866-918-7711 or by going to PhilSteele.com and it is just $8.95 plus S&H. You will become an instant expert on EVERY FCS team and remember every year there are more and more matchups between FCS and FBS schools (nearly 100). So become an expert on one of your favorite team's possible FCS opponent this year by purchasing the Phil Steele 2012 FCS Preview today!

THE YPP FACTOR

by Phil Steele

In my College Preview Magazine the last few yrs I've posted an article called The YPP Factor and it has had great success. Much like the Turnovers=Turnaround article on pg 10, when I took basically the same concept I used for college football and transferred it to the NFL, the system had even greater success. The ypp (yards per point) concept is based on the amount of points a tm scored per the amount of yards gained and conversely how many points the defense allows per yards allowed.

As I have stated in other articles, the NFL is a league of parity. I've done a lot of statistical research and found that teams that benefitted from outstanding ypp's one year usually had a weaker record the next season. The opposite was true for teams that had weak ypp's one year as they generally have a better record the next year. Let's start off with teams that had poor defensive ypp's. Going back to '99 there have been a total of 116 teams that allowed 14.6 yds per point (ypp) or lower. This means that teams allowed points more frequently than the NFL average. Of those 116 teams, 86 of them improved their record the next season (74%)! Last year there were 15 teams on this list and with such a large number of teams the results were not as strong as they had been in past years. Of those 15 teams, 7 improved, 2 had the same record and 6 tms had a worse record. However last year's top 4 teams on this list combined to improve by 15 games from 2010! This year there are 8 teams that have a 74% chance of improving after having a poor ypp of 14.6 or less on defense last season.

2011 TEAMS WITH POOR DEFENSIVE YPP GOING UP

Minnesota	12.8	NY Jets	13.8	St Louis	14.1
Tampa Bay	12.8	Indianapolis	13.8	Oakland	14.3
Buffalo	13.7	Carolina	14.1

As with most of the charts, I also do teams on the opposite side of the spectrum and the results have nearly the same results. Taking a look at the defensive ypp I found teams which allow a point every 16.3 yards gained or higher do not get the same benefit the next year. Of the 131 NFL tms since 1999 which fell into this category, 89 have had a weaker record the next year (68%). A couple of examples are the Chicago Bears in 2001 who allowed a ridiculous 1 point for every 24.7 yds gained and were extremely fortunate to finish 13-3. The next year they went back to the NFL avg allowing a point for every 14.8 yards allowed and their record plummeted to 4-12. Three years ago the team with the best defensive ypp was Dallas. The Cowboys had a 20.2 defensive ypp and finished with an 11-5 record in 2009. In 2010 their YPP shrunk to 12.9, the worst in the league, and they finished with a 6-10 record for -5 wins. Eleven teams made the list last year with 7 having a weaker record, 2 staying the same and just 2 improving. I then tightened the parameters and since 2005 found that teams which had a ypp of 18.5 or higher in one year had a weaker or the same record the next season 32 out of 36 times (89%) in the next season.

2011 TEAMS WITH GOOD DEFENSIVE YPP GOING DOWN

San Francisco	21.5	Miami	17.6	Seattle	16.9
New England	19.2	New Orleans	17.4	Chicago	16.4
Pittsburgh	19.2	Baltimore	17.4	Houston	16.4
Green Bay	18.3	Cleveland	17.3	Arizona	16.3
Tennessee	17.9

Now let's look at the offensive ypp. Teams that had the most points scored on the fewest yards gained caught a lot of breaks and generally don't catch the same breaks the next season. Going back to 1999 there were 81 teams that had a ypp on offense of 14.15 or lower. Of those 81 teams, 61 (75%) had a weaker or identical records the next season. Last year four of the six teams that made the list saw their record drop by a combined 15 games! Since 2003 the best Off ypp was by New England with 11.17 in 2007 and they had 5 fewer wins in 2008 and they were close again in 2010 finishing with an off ypp of 11.24 and dropped by a game last year. I wanted to sharpen the numbers even more so I looked at how teams have done following a season in which they had an offensive ypp of 13.30 or lower. I was surprised that it has occurred 30 times since 2003 and only 3 teams (10%) improved their record with 25 (83%) having a weaker record & 27 (90%) the same or weaker. This season 6 teams fit into the 14.15 or lower standard for this system.

2011 TEAMS WITH GOOD OFFENSIVE YPP GOING DOWN

Green Bay	11.6	NY Jets	13.2	Detroit	13.4
San Francisco	13.1	New England	13.4	New Orleans	13.7

Conversely, teams that moved the ball but had trouble getting it in the endzone have high ypp's. Those teams generally become more productive on offense the next season and their record improves. Going back to 2000 there have been a total of 69 teams in the NFL that had an offensive ypp of 17.45 or higher. Of those 69 teams, 50 (73%) had the same or better record the next season with 47 (68%) having a stronger record. The Carolina Panthers had the worst number in 2010 with a 21.1 ypp but thanks to Cam Newton and Company were +4 wins last year. In 2005 the Saints had the worst off ypp numbers with 21.4 and were +7 wins in '06. The Raiders were the worst in 2006 at 23.4 and were +2 wins the following season. The Rams were at 19.8 in 2008 but in '09 saw the worst numbers (25.5) in more than 5 seasons. It was rare to see a team make the same list in B2B years but the Rams went from 1-15 in 2009 to 7-9 in 2010. This year 7 teams are coming off a poor offensive ypp and yet again the Rams top the list with a 23.5 ypp.

2011 TEAMS WITH POOR OFFENSIVE YPP GOING UP

St Louis	23.5	Indianapolis	18.9	Pittsburgh	18.3
Kansas City	23.5	Washington	18.7	Tampa Bay	17.8

PHIL STEELE'S PRO FOOTBALL

Phil Steele has Predicted 16 of 24 First Place Winners

Will the same teams repeat this year?

PROBABLY NOT!

By Phil Steele

In the inaugural Phil Steele's Pro Football Preview, I made a forecast for each division and I am very pleased to announce that I correctly forecasted 7 of the 8! I was the ONLY major magazine to pick the Super Bowl Champion New Orleans Saints to win the NFC South. I followed that performance up by picking NINE first place teams in the last two years for an impressive 3 year record of 16 of 24 division winners or 67%.

The NFL is certainly a league of parity and in fact going back to 1998 only 30% of the time has a team repeated as a division winner. In 2002 the NFL went to four divisions of four teams each, making it much easier to repeat. Taking those 10 seasons plus the previous two, only 28 of the 80 division winners or 35% repeated. Those numbers include both New England and Indianapolis who dominated the AFC East & AFC South. From 2003-'10 each repeated 5 times and NE was the ONLY team to repeat for a 6th time last season.

Since the start of this decade there have been 92 division winners but ONLY 11 of the NFL's 32 teams have been consistent enough to bag B2B division titles. I mentioned NE & Indy and they are followed by San Diego, Philadelphia and Seattle with 3 repeats. Oakland and Green Bay each have 2 while Pittsburgh, Jacksonville, Minnesota, Chicago and Arizona each have 1 repeat.

While I wrote earlier that with eight 4 team divisions it was easier to have a repeat winner, it must still be noted that only 3 of the divisions have had multiple B2B division winners and the NFC North is the only division to have three B2B winners as GB won the title in '03 & '04, CHI in '05 & '06 and MIN won it in '08 & '09. With New Orleans winning the NFC South it is sill the only division to have not had a repeat winner since the new format in 2002. The NFC South is also 1 of 3 divisions since 2002 to have all 4 members win the division title along with the AFC West & the NFC West.

Make sure to check out my forecast on each division page and below I've listed the division winners since 1998 and what they did in the post season.

PHIL STEELE'S 2012 POWER POLL

		Odds to Win:	Div	Conf	SB	Phil's Comments:
1	Philadelphia EAGLES	+140	7-1	14-1	When you have the #1 team in the Power Poll at 7-1 to win the NFC and a very nice 14-1 to win the Super Bowl, it is worth a wager in Vegas.
2	New England PATRIOTS	-300	3-1	8-1	The Pats got back to the Super Bowl LY and now have a much improved defense. The Super Bowl and perhaps a division title are the best odds.
3	Houston TEXANS	-500	5-1	12-1	A young Houston team got to 10-3 with a 3rd string QB in '11 but let their foot off the gas. They still outplayed BAL in round 2 and the SB is their best odds.
4	New York GIANTS	+160	10-1	18-1	The Giants were just a 9-7 team LY which barely made the playoffs but wound up winning the whole thing. They are stronger this year and that is rare for SB champs.
5	Green Bay PACKERS	-200	3-1	13-2	All of the talk LY was whether GB would go unbeaten yet they exited in the first round. Vegas has made them the preseason SB favorites.
6	San Francisco 49ers	-260	11-2	10-1	First yr HC's were supposed to be handicapped by the lockout LY but Harbaugh improved them from 6-10 to 13-3. There's not enough value however.
7	Pittsburgh STEELERS	+150	15-2	18-1	Tomlin and Co. are solid every year and are my pick to win the AFC North. The odds are generous to win the SB at 18-1 especially if the D is at LY's level.
8	Chicago BEARS	7-2	11-1	18-1	Chicago was 7-3 LY when they lost QB Cutler and then lost RB Forte a few weeks later. A healthier Bears team will challenge GB this year.
9	San Diego CHARGERS	+220	10-1	25-1	Denver is the talk of the West (and the favorite) but I like the Chargers and there is solid value in San Diego across the board in the odds.
10	Dallas COWBOYS	+220	12-1	20-1	Dallas was leading the NFC East LY but blew a lead vs the Giants and were out of the playoffs again. The window is closing and the odds are decent.
11	Baltimore RAVENS	+120	7-1	16-1	I know the Ravens were on the doorstep of the SB with that dropped pass and missed FG keeping them out. Their odds are priced accurately.
12	New York JETS	7-2	12-1	25-1	This team figures to be under the radar after being a preseason favorite the last 2 yrs. The odds are much more favorably priced this year.
13	Kansas City CHIEFS	+250	25-1	50-1	Four of my 5 sets of power ratings call for this team to have DD wins. 5-2 to win the division is nice as are the odds on the AFC and Super Bowl.
14	Detroit LIONS	+250	11-1	20-1	Detroit has improved its record by 4 gms each of the L2Y going from 2 to 6 to 10 wins. They are a young team on the rise but the odds reflect that.
15	Denver BRONCOS	+160	6-1	12-1	Denver was a huge longshot for the SB but then they signed Peyton Manning and became one of the favorites. No value here.
16	Atlanta FALCONS	+140	12-1	25-1	No team has repeated as NFC South champs so the Falcons have a great shot at winning the South and giving HC Smith his first playoff win.
17	New Orleans SAINTS	+125	8-1	18-1	The Saints were one of my top teams LY and almost got to the SB with the #1 offense. But an interim HC to an interim HC during the year?
18	Buffalo BILLS	5-1	30-1	50-1	The Bills figure to be one of the most improved teams in the NFL and the odds are great but they were just 6-10 LY and may be 2 yrs away.
19	Arizona CARDINALS	7-2	25-1	50-1	If Arizona had landed Manning their odds would be more like Denver this year especially with their WR's. QB play will be the key for the Cards.
20	Cincinnati BENGALS	+240	18-1	40-1	Cincy has been a rubber band team the last couple of years going from 10 wins, down to 4, back up to 9 and I don't see them in the playoffs TY.
21	Tennessee TITANS	7-2	25-1	50-1	Tenn surpassed my expectations LY (9 wins) and that was with RB Johnson far from his old self. They may be stronger TY but have a tougher sked.
22	Cleveland BROWNS	11-1	90-1	200-1	I like the OL, RB Richardson, and they actually had the #5 scoring defense LY. They have the highest odds of any team and are worth a small play.
23	Tampa Bay BUCCANEERS	15-1	40-1	75-1	This is the same Tampa team that was 10-6 in 2010 and no team has repeated as NFC South champs. A solid dark horse pick.
24	Washington REDSKINS	7-1	28-1	50-1	Even if RG3 has the same type of Rookie year as Cam Newton, they will likely finish with the same type of record (6 wins) playing in this brutal division.
25	Seattle SEAHAWKS	4-1	30-1	50-1	The Seahawks will play tough each week under HC Carroll and knocked off some big boys LY. Carroll should have his best team yet in 2012.
26	Carolina PANTHERS	4-1	20-1	35-1	Carolina is in year two of Cam Newton, had 4 net close losses and actually outgained foes by 12.1 ypg despite going 6-10. Division is worth a play.
27	Miami DOLPHINS	9-1	20-1	50-1	They had 3 net close losses and their schedule goes from #7 to #25. Not finding a QB in the offseason has me finding no value in these numbers.
28	Oakland RAIDERS	3-1	30-1	65-1	The Raiders overachieved LY with 8 wins as they had 5 net close wins and each team in the AFC West looks a lot stronger this year.
29	St Louis RAMS	10-1	40-1	75-1	The Rams do figure to be a much improved team but they were just 2-14 LY. Even an increase of 6 or 7 wins probably does not win a division crown.
30	Minnesota VIKINGS	15-1	50-1	100-1	Minny had 7 net close losses LY but trapped in the same division as the Packers, Bears & Lions getting past ANY of them would be an accomplishment.
31	Jacksonville JAGUARS	10-1	75-1	150-1	As you can tell by my #31 power poll ranking, I am not that optimistic about the Jaguars this year and the odds are priced right.
32	Indianapolis COLTS	10-1	75-1	150-1	The Colts were 0-13 at one point LY and won the Andrew Luck sweepstakes. This is a rebuilding yr and while Indy will be more competitive I don't see the playoffs.

Power Rating 101.80

The Patriots have won 3 Super Bowls under Bill Belichick but had not won a playoff game since the 2007 AFC Title game which put them at 18-0 that season. They lost Super Bowl XLII to the Giants and then in '08 lost QB Brady to injury in the season opener. They did not make the playoffs despite an 11-5 record (just 2nd team since 16 gm season began in 1978 to not make playoffs with 11 wins). Brady was back in '09 and they were the Super Bowl favorite. They won the East at 10-6 but were beaten at home in the playoffs by Baltimore. In '10 they were under the radar with the Jets as the Super Bowl favorite at the start of the year. All of the other preseason mags had the Jets winning the East while I pegged the Patriots atop the East with a record of 13-3. They surpassed even my expectations going 14-2 with the #8 off and the #25 def. NE moved to 37-5 in Dec. Brady went the final 11 regular season gms without an int but tossed one in another home playoff loss, this time to the Jets. LY I called for the Pats to grab their first playoff win s/'07. The Pats opened just 5-3 as they had problems with their D which finished #31 in the NFL and allowed under 10 pts just once all year. Naturally, with Brady at the controls, their offense was #2 with 428 ypg. They won their last 8 regular season games with their last loss being to the Giants in week 9. They opened the playoffs the heavy favorite to win the AFC after the regular season for a second consecutive year. They got that elusive playoff win with a 45-10 blowout of Denver. They needed a dropped td pass and a missed FG to get past Baltimore by 3. In a rematch of their last Super Bowl they lost to the Giants again. They used their top 6 DC's on defense including 2 first rounders and are once again one of the favorites to win the Super Bowl and could do it with an improved D.

PHIL STEELE'S POWER POLL

Power Rating 98.50

In '08 the Jets were 8-3 and were favored in their final 5 but went 1-4 and missed the playoffs. In '09 they brought in an energetic new coach in Rex Ryan but Brett Favre left with 4 other key starters. Their schedule strength also jumped from #30 to #1. They were 4-6 but got to 7-7 and then benefitted from BOTH IND and CIN resting their starters and with tiebreakers, got into the playoffs. They stunned CIN and SD on the road but lost to IND 30-17 in the AFC Title game. They had the NFL's #1 defense but #20 offense with a rookie QB. In '10 the Jets were the trendy pick to win the East and the preseason SB favorite (I had NE winning the East). Only two of the Jets road games were vs teams which had a winning record in '09. They once again qualified for the playoffs as a Wild Card 3 gms behind NE. They were just 2-4 vs playoff teams but had FIVE wins in the last minute to get to 11-5. They once again won two road playoff gms knocking off IND (FG last play after fumble lost was overturned by replay) and #1 seed NE but trailed PIT 24-0 in the AFC Title gm and lost. They were #11 on off and #3 on def. Last year despite facing the #9 schedule the Jets were again one of the preseason favorites for the Super Bowl. They were favored in 11 of their games. They were a team of streaks opening 2-0, losing 3, winning 3, losing 2 and then winning 3 to get to 8-5. They then dropped their last 3 and missed the playoffs at 8-8. They are no longer the popular pick in the preseason and that should have them hungrier and more in the underdog situation which Ryan prefers. As long as Tebow does not prove to be a distraction, this may be Ryan's most talented team yet and the schedule goes from #9 to #24! I will call for the Jets to get back into the playoffs and they are very dangerous once they get there!

BUFFALO
PROJECTED FINISH

Power Rating 95.04

Buffalo currently has the NFL's longest playoff drought missing the post season for 12 straight years. They did not exactly energize the fan base with the hire of Chan Gailey as the HC in '10. I had the Bills tying for the worst record in the NFL (2-14) but they actually fared better than my projections and finished with 4 wins. They opened the year 0-8, then went 4-4 in the 2H of the year. They were #25 on off and #24 on def. They were -17 in TO's and had a def YPP of 13.6, both key indicators of an improved record for '11. BUF still faced the 5th toughest sked but had a tremendous start. They beat both NE and PHI and opened 5-2 with their only losses to CIN and NYG on the road by 3 pts a piece (9-6 run back to '10). Fitzpatrick suffered a serious rib inj in the win vs WAS and they lost 7 in a row by 18 ppg to fall out of playoff contention. They knocked off a DEN team that needed a win and then led NE by 21 in the 1H but lost and finished 6-10. They were #14 on offense and #26 on D. Things appear pointed upwards again as they had 2 net close losses, were only -19.6 ypg (good for a 6 win team), had a def YPP of 13.7, 70 starts lost to injury and go from facing the #5 schedule to the #27 schedule this year. The Bills offensive skill players are mostly low round DC's or UFA's but are very productive. With Dave Wannstedt taking over as the DC I expect a much improved defense with some key additions like Mario Williams and Mark Anderson and better health. This year figures to be much different than LY as the schedule in the first 9 games features SIX road games with NE twice, SF, HOU and the NYJ. The final 7 games include 5 at home and just one team with a winning record from last year. Even if the Bills start as slow as 3-6 they still have a shot at a strong finish so the playoffs are a possibility.

PHIL STEELE'S POWER POLL

Power Rating 92.23

In '07 Miami was 1-15 with an OT win as they lost an incredible 101 sts to injury. In '08 they had a much softer schedule (#5 to #28). The Dolphins were the MOST improved tm in the NFL prior to '08 according to my ratings. With Exec VP Bill Parcells and new HC Tony Sparano, Miami had an amazing 10 win turnaround (tied '99 Colts) winning the AFC East. In '09 there were a ton of factors pointing down as they were 11-5 but only +17 ypg. They took on the #2 schedule, benefitted from FOUR net close wins (all vs West Coast teams) in '08 and were +17 in TO's. I said the Dolphins had a better roster but called for a drop to 3rd and had them missing the playoffs. They were 7-6 and had 3 close losses to finish 7-9. In '10 they went 6-2 on road, but 1-7 at home! They were 7-6 but then stunningly lost at home to lowly BUF and DET despite a comb 751-557 yd edge and had a second straight 7-9 finish. The Dolphins were #21 on offense and #6 on defense. In 2011 Miami had a brutal opening schedule (NE, HOU, SD, NYJ, DEN, NYG) with 4 of the first 7 on the road. They were a dog in all 7 and opened 0-7. They won their next 3 by 22 ppg vs weaker teams. They went 3-3 down the stretch with an interim HC for the final 3 games. Their only losses were to DAL on the road by 1, to PHI and at NE by 3. The spoiler win over the Jets in the finale kept their rival out of the playoffs. They redeemed themselves in S Florida going 4-4 at home (only 2-6 away). MIA finished just #22 on offense and #15 on defense. They have a 1st time NFL HC and lost more than they acquired in Free Agency and their #1DC is a project at QB. It looks like a rebuilding year for the Dolphins but they are currently favored in 8 games this year as they go from facing the #7 schedule to the #25 schedule so there won't be much dropoff record-wise.

NEW ENGLAND PATRIOTS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - Tom Brady heads into his 13th NFL ssn at 35 yrs old, and many still consider him the best QB in the gm on the NFL's best franchise of the last decade. Brady is still driven by not being chosen until the 6th RD. The future HOF'er has a record of 138-39 (78%), the best of any QB in the Super Bowl era. As a passer, he's stellar, becoming the 3rd player with 5,000 yds passing while throwing 39 td's, the 2nd most of his career LY. He also had eleven 300 yd gms. It doesn't matter who NE puts in the offense, he'll get the ball to them. NE morphed from a WR-based vertical gm a few yrs ago that featured Randy Moss to one that is now the 1st in NFL history to be dominated by TE's. NE scored an NFL-high 518 pts in '10 and added 513 more LY (3rd). Brady pressures defenses with a quick release and precision and he exploits big-play mismatches. He's fearless throwing over the middle and his ability to get the ball out quickly combats any kind of pass rush. The only negatives in his gm is that he sometimes struggles with pressure up the middle and LY he forced more passes than usual. After throwing only 4 int's in '10, he threw 12 LY, though only 2 in the L/8 gms. He can also still run the ball (30 planned runs tied for 3rd most of NFL QB's LY). Brian Hoyer is the bkp once again, though he rarely sees the field, even in blowouts. A UFA out of Michigan St in '09, Hoyer, in 3 ssns, has completed only 27-43 for 286 yds, with a 1-1 ratio. However, the team has confidence he can get the job done if Brady gets inj'd, much like Matt Cassel did in '08. Hoyer has a solid overall set of tools with strength, accuracy and mobility, but he's unproven until he gets a chance to play more. The QB of the future, though, is Ryan Mallett, a #3DC LY who ran the scout tm all ssn but has tremendous potential. Mallett is 6'6", with a great arm for long passes and a soft touch for short balls. He's slow and not mobile in the pocket, a bit inconsistent and had some character issues in college, but he's playing in the perfect organization for development. Brady's 16-5 post-ssn record equals Joe Montana for playoff wins, but he hasn't won the Super Bowl s/'04 and he's desperate to get another. Brady keeps saying he wants to play "10 more seasons," but will NE's window close sooner if they don't win the big one?

QB TOM BRADY #12 6-4 225 Age: 35 13th Yr (16/16)
#6DC NE '00 (Michigan) - 5235 pass yd (65.6%), 39-12 ratio, 8.6 ypa, 105.6 QBR, 109 rush yd (2.5), 3 td, 32 sk LY. 16 st, 3900 pass yd (65.9%), 36-4 ratio, 7.9 ypa, 111.0 QBR, 335 reg ssn passes w/o an int, 25 sk, 1st Tm All-Pro '10.

Brian Hoyer #8 6-2 215 Age: 27 4th Yr (0/3)
UFA NE '09 (Michigan St) - 1-1 pass (22 yd) LY. 5 gm, 122 pass yd (46.7%), 1-1 ratio, 8.1 ypa, 69.3 QBR, -8 rush yd, 0 sk '10.

RUNNING BACKS - LY, NE was 26th in rushing (117.1 ypg), their lowest ranking s/'03. Their leading rusher, BenJarvis Green-Ellis had 667 yds but was let go. Still, the Patriots feel their running gm will be improved, with the onus on 2nd yr pros Stevan Ridley and Shane Vereen to fill the void. Ridley's role expanded throughout '11 and he added much needed balance to the offense. He was drafted in the 3rd RD (one behind Vereen) but he had a better pressn and by the end of the reg ssn was the most active ballcarrier (played 2/3 of the off snaps, almost twice as many as Green-Ellis). He did have some fumble problems and was inactive for the playoffs, but Ridley is a physical runner who has a burst and should be effective near the GL. Vereen played in only 5 gms (mostly in Dec), but he's an elusive dual threat runner receiver who can get outside and make plays on his own. Ridley is more of an inside runner who looks for holes and powers through them. He's also a better pass blk'r, another reason he played more LY. NE does have some unheralded depth and versatility in the backfield. Danny Woodhead is a 5th yr ST kamikaze who is the tms most exp'd receiver out of the backfield. He's a 5'9" spark plug who will be the designated 3rd Dn back if Vereen can't move into that role. NE also signed Joseph Addai in FA after he was phased out in IND. Addai is an exp'd runner, an excellent pass blk'r and solid outlet receiver (51 rec's in '09). He ran for only 433 yds LY. NE didn't use a FB LY, but they signed 2 in the offssn in Spencer Larsen (50 gms for DEN the L4Y's) and Tony Fiammetta (16 sts for CAR & DAL in '10-11). Both are excellent blk'rs who will help the NE run gm, though only 1 will likely stick. Until NE can improve their run gm, they will go only as far as Brady can take them. Not that they haven't tried - they carried 6 RB's on the roster LY, but they haven't had a star runner in yrs.

RECEIVERS - The Patriots had the NFL's strangest but perhaps most successful pass attack LY. There was no deep threat, little vertical spd, little emphasis on screen passes and practically no contribution from Chad Ochocinco. Still, NE avg'd 317.8 pass ypg (#2) and a franchise record 5,257 pass yds. To do so they revolutionized the passing game, relying more on TE's than any tm had ever done before. In '08, NE TE's caught only 31 passes for 302 yds and 2 td's. LY, Rob Gronkowski and Aaron Hernandez set an NFL record with 169 rec's by TE's for 2,237 yds and 24 td's. Gronkowski alone had 1,327 yds (14.7, 17 td) setting NFL records for yds and td's by a TE. Hernandez rarely came off the field with 910 yds (11.5, 7 td) in a variety of roles that included TE, H-back, WR and in the playoffs he even lined up in the backfield as a RB and carried the ball 5 times for 61 yds. At WR, NE's only star is Wes Welker, the NFL's ultimate slot receiver who surpassed 100 rec's for the 4th time in the L5Y and avg's 111 rec's per yr in that time (leading the league 3x's). In '11, he had 1,569 yds (12.9) and 9 td's. TY NE signed Brandon Lloyd and he should start opposite Welker ahead of Deion Branch. Lloyd split the '11 ssn between DEN and STL, catching 70 passes for 966 yds (13.8) with 5 td's. Branch returns for his 11th ssn and remains a clutch performer. Ochocinco played in 15 gms but caught only 15 passes because he was rarely targeted and never emerged as a go to WR. He could be let go. Julian Edelman is another slot rec who's played little more than ST's duty since catching 37 balls in '09. NE also signed TE Daniel Fells, a willing blk'r who can also catch the ball (81 rec's L3Y in STL and DEN). This again looks like one of the premier rec corps in the NFL.

OFFENSIVE LINE - LY, the NE OL was a work in progress all yr at C and OT due to inj's. There will be a new look to their O-line again TY, specifically at OT, where Nate Solder replaces retired Matt Light at LT and at RT where Sebastian Vollmer re-assumes a full time starting role. The inside positions are set with LG Logan Mankins, RG Brian Waters and C Dan Connolly. Mankins and Waters give the Patriots one of the NFL's best G combos. Mankins will be eased in training camp due to a torn ACL suffered in the reg ssn finale but he'll be fine when Sept rolls around. A 2x All-Pro, he missed half of the '10 ssn with a holdout but he's never missed a start when healthy. He remains the team's best OL. Waters signed as a FA a yr ago and helped stabilize a line that was in flux. He was shifted from LG (where he played in KC) to RG and had no offssn program to learn NE's complicated offense, yet he seemed to play even better than before. He rarely misses a snap and at 34 still has a lot left in him. LY Connolly was slated to play RG before Waters was signed, then he took over at C in the opener after Dan Koppen went down despite never having played the position before in the NFL. Connolly missed the L/5 gms and playoffs (groin), the 3rd straight yr he's been inj'd. With Light gone after 11 seasons, Solder moves into the position for which he was drafted LY. As a rookie, he started 11 at RT, 1 at LT and even 1 at TE (was a TE early in college career). Solder is still fairly green and wasn't expected to play much LY, but Vollmer's inj's thrust him into the lineup. Vollmer started 5 at RT but missed 10 others with ankle and back inj's. A #2DC in '09, he started 8 as a rookie and all 16 in '10. NE signed FA Robert Gallery as a bkp G, but the former #2 overall pick in '04 has never dominated as was expected. He started 12 games but struggled with injuries in his only season in SEA, but makes for an excellent bkp. Koppen returns to the roster as a reserve C who is aging at 33. Ryan Wendell took over at C when Connolly was injured and was NE's 3rd C of the year. He's a versatile player who can also fill in at G. Marcus Cannon is a promising #5DC in '11 who was basically RS due to cancer treatments. Drafted as a G, he's been moved to OT. LY NE allowed 32 sks, their 2nd most s/'01. This is more of a pass protecting unit, and since it plays such an integral role in the running game, it needs to improve for NE to get back to winning the Super Bowl.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - Due to the lockout the Patriots openly declared that they would be a 4-3 base team for '11. They brought in several veterans with mixed results on the season. TY they went to the draft to upgrade this position. LY NE had 40 sks and was 17th in run D (117.1 ypg). The sk ttl will be hard to match due to the losses of Andre Carter (10), Mark Anderson (10) and Shaun Ellis (2), who had more than half of the tm's ttl. Chandler Jones was drafted in the 1st RD and needs to produce immediately, as he's already been handed a starting job at DE. Brandon Deaderick replaced Carter late LY and can be a stronghold vs the run though he offers minimal pass rush on pass downs. Vince Wilfork remains one of the NFL's best DT's. A dominating presence and tm leader, he blows up double-teams, disrupts the backfield and is a tough matchup for any C or G. The only defender left from the '07 Super Bowl team, Wilfork is a 4x Pro Bowler who has missed only 3 sts the L4Y. Kyle Love took over a starting role LY, when he made 33 tkls and 3 sks while playing half the snaps. Depth should not be an issue, especially if #3DC Jake Bequette can break into the rotation as a rookie. Jonathan Fanene was a 3rd Dn rusher who got 6 sks for CIN LY. Backup DT Ron Brace was overwhelmed as a rookie and suffered elbow injuries the L2Y, thus he has yet to make an impact. DT Myron Pryor has only 2 sts and 34 tkls in 3 yrs. The young players will have to step up if this unit plans on returning to the upper echelon of the league.

LINEBACKERS - The st'rs will be the same as LY, with Brandon Spikes at MLB, Jerod Mayo at WLB and Rob Ninkovich at SLB. Mayo is the leader of the def and an integral 2nd level defender vs the run, and he's one of the few tm's #1DC's to fulfill his reputation in NE's recent past. Mayo has 57 sts in 4 yrs, averaging 126 tkls per ssn (high of 175 in '10). LY he missed 2 (sprained MCL) and failed to notch 100 tkls for the 1st time. A twice-cut LS, Ninkovich started 27 gms the L2Y as an overachieving #5DC in '08. He fills the Mike Vrabel role well, sticking with RB's out of the backfield and covering receivers, and he always seems to be making plays. LY he started 4 times at DE, 10 at SLB and 2 at WLB for Mayo. Brandon Spikes has been called the most physical and violent MLB in the league. In 2 yrs he has 108 tkls but has played in only 20 gms because of a susp as a rookie and an MCL strain LY. If healthy, he could be a Pro Bowler. With their 2nd 1st RD DC, NE selected Dont'a Hightower and he will start the year as a nickel pass rusher, though he is versatile enough to see playing time on the inside or at DE. Hightower might be the impact player NE has been looking for and will likely replace Ninkovich before long to team with Mayo and give NE an excellent set of OLB's. The other top reserves are Dane Fletcher (5 sts, 32 tkls then out 6 gm, thumb LY) and Tracy White (31 gm L2Y). With the switch to a full-time 4-3 def, the LB's should show improvement after going back and forth in their assignments LY.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - LY was a disaster for the NE DB's. Before the ssn began, the team cut veteran DB's Brandon Meriweather, Leigh Bodden, James Sanders and Darius Butler, but there wasn't much talent to fill the gaping holes. Before the ssn ended, 16 players had played DB for the Patriots, and both the ttl def (411.1 ypg) and pass def (293.9) were not only the 2nd worst in the NFL in both categories but the pass D was the 2nd worst in NFL history. Some of that can be attributed to teams being forced to throw due to being behind. Opposing QB's had a QBR of 86.1 when NE was respectably 21st in the league. The pass D did improve in the first 2 playoff gms, allowing only 195 ypg, but with the SB on the line, Eli Manning hit key passes on the final drive and the NE secondary failed to hold the lead. CB's Devin McCourty and Kyle Arrington each started 14 gms LY. McCourty had a miserable soph ssn after showing promise as a rookie #1DC so the jury is still out on him. He was moved to S for gm 16 and the playoffs, but is back at CB TY. Arrington outplayed McCourty, which is not what you would expect from a UFA who bounced around with PHI and TB before sticking in NE. He made 7 int's (tied #1 NFL) mostly because he was a popular target for QB's who saw him as a gambler. Ras-I Dowling started the 1st 2 after being a #2DC before suffering a torn tendon near his hip. Dowling will have to settle for a nickel back role when '12 begins. There is excellent depth in Sterling Moore, who emerged late in the ssn and in the playoffs and former MIA starter Will Allen. The S's were inexp'd LY, so NE signed Steve Gregory to team with SS Patrick Chung. Gregory started 22 gms for SD the L2Y but is known more as a steady tkl'r than a pass defender. Chung started 8 gms and missed 8 others (foot). TY's #2DC Tavon Wilson will have an opportunity to play early, but some draft experts thought he was a reach. This is a ball-hawking secondary, with 25 int's in '10 and 23 LY. NE's best hope is that they can improve without having to insert players such as WR's Julian Edelman and Matt Slater at DB TY. Edelman played nickel and dime late in the yr despite never having played the position before, while Slater moved to DB and started a gm 4 days later! With little exception, the secondary is largely the same, and only a better pass rush, which is not a given, will help.

SPECIAL TEAMS - NE was 6th in our ST rankings LY after finishing 3rd in '10, and all of the key players return as well as STC Scott O'Brien. PK Stephen Gostkowski ret'd from a torn quad which forced him to miss 8 gms in '10 to score 143 pts on 28-33 FG's and 59-59 PAT's. He's scored more than 100 pts every season in which he's been healthy. Gostkowski has a strong leg, but even after moving the KO's up to the 35 LY, he had only 41 TB's, ranking 18th. His FG accuracy of 84.8% was 10th and for his career it's 84.4%. P Zoltan Mesko improved upon a solid rookie season with his gross avg going from 43.2 to 46.5 and net from 38.4 to 41.5 (3rd in league). He's a left footed kicker whose reverse spin can confuse some veterans. He had 24 kicks In20 and only 3 TB's (tied for 4th fewest). NE's kick coverage tms were very good, allowing only 8.5 on PR's and 21.6 on KR's. Julian Edelman had a 10.7 avg on PR's, with 1 td, and is NE's all-time PR leader. Although Edelman and Danny Woodhead are elusive returners, they combined for less than 23 ypr on KR's.

Head Coach - Bill Belichick, 13th year
Belichick is the only person to have served 20 years as an assistant coach and at least 15 years as a HC in the NFL.
OC/QB Coach - Josh McDaniels, 1st year, 9th overall
McDaniels was an asst here from '01-'08 including the last 3 years as OC. He was the DEN HC from '09-'10, and STL OC last year before returning here in the playoffs.
RB Coach - Ivan Fears, 14th year
Fears coached the NE WR's in 1991-'92 and from 1999-2001. He was the Bears' WR coach from 1993-'98 before coming back to NE in 2003 as the RB coach.
WR Coach - Chad O'Shea, 4th year
Before joining NE as a WR coach, O'Shea was an offensive asst/WR asst from 2006-'08 at MIN. He worked with KC's special teams/LB's from 2003-'05.
TE Coach - George Godsey, 1st year, 2nd overall
Godsey was promoted to TE cch after being an off asst LY. He was the QB cch ('05-'08) and RB cch ('09-'10) at UCF prior.

Asst HC/OL Coach - Dante Scarnecchia, 22nd year
Scarnecchia has spent all but 2 years in the NFL with the Patriots and been a member of NE's last 6 Super Bowls. He has coached NE's OL for the L13Y.
Def Coordinator - Matt Patricia, 1st year, 9th overall
Patricia spent his first 3Y with NE as an OL asst. He was promoted to LB's cch in '06 and was the safeties cch LY.
DL Coach - Pepper Johnson, 12th year
Johnson was NE's LB coach from 2001-'03. He was then named the DL coach in 2004 and handles most of the defense's day-to-day responsibilities.
Linebackers Coach - Patrick Graham, 2nd year
After spending 2007-'08 as a graduate asst at ND Graham worked as a coaching asst for NE in '09-'10. 2011 was his 1st year as a position coach.
Defensive Backs Coach - Josh Boyer, 7th year
Boyer was a coaching asst here from 2006-'08 before being named the DB coach in '09.
Special Teams Coach - Scott O'Brien, 4th year
Prior to joining NE in '09, O'Brien was DEN's STC for 2007-'08 after being CAR's STC from 1999-2004. He worked for Nick Saban in MIA from 2005-'06 as an asst to the HC.

OVERVIEW - Bill Belichick is the 1st coach in NFL history with 13 or more victories in 6 seasons. He has 12 consecutive winning seasons and his 19-7 postssn record trails only Vince Lombardi in winning %. His teams typically improve as the season progresses, the mark of a well-coached team. Belichick serves as his own DC, but the team's D has slipped in recent years and only a record-setting offense keeps them in SB contention. Winning does have its downside, though. NE had neglected to select DE's and LB's high in the draft over the last decade or so, leading to deficiencies on D. But the team filled voids at both positions with the 21st and 25th picks of TY's draft. LY, NE struggled somewhat the 1H of the season, losing 3 of their 1st 8 as the D allowed too many points whether it was a win or a loss. The offense won the first 2 gms, outscoring MIA 38-24 and SD 35-21 before BUF shocked NE with a 34-31 victory. The D improved slightly in 3 straight wins, allowing 19, 21 and 16 pts. NE then followed that up with B2B losses to PIT and NYG, leaving them 5-3 at the midpoint. From there, NE won 8 straight, though they all'd 20 or more pts in the L/6 gms (and 11x's all season). Only once all season did NE hold an opponent to single digits. The offense tied an NFL record with 30 or more pts in 12 gms and never was it better than in the reg ssn finale when NE scored 49 straight pts after trailing BUF 21-0. After losing its 1st home playoff game the previous 2 seasons, NE blew out DEN 45-10 then nipped BAL 23-20 before falling to NYG once more in the SB. The Patriots almost always win the TO battle. In '10 NE was +28 and LY was +17 (3rd in the NFL). Josh McDaniels returns as OC after a failed stint as the DEN HC and a year as OC in STL. He takes over for Bill O'Brien, now the Penn St HC. The offense should continue to set records as long as Tom Brady stays healthy, and an improved running game would add some much-needed balance to the attack. Still, it will always be a high-scoring off that is not built for ball control. The D remains the big ? heading into '12. If it remains middle of the pack, NE will stay in contention; if the D can move into the top 10, then another SB appearance is in the offing. An 11th consecutive season with 10+ wins is in the forecast no matter what, as this is still a young team, though it is now 8 years removed from its last Super Bowl championship.

NEW YORK JETS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - The pressure is now clearly on Mark Sanchez to finally produce like a franchise QB with the surprise addition of Tim Tebow to the roster. After leading the Jets to the AFC Championship gm in his 1st 2 seasons, Sanchez regressed in 2011 as did the tm. He was inconsistent, made too many poor decisions when backed into long passing downs and he sailed way too many passes. However, he has made incremental statistical progress each season. His completion percentage has improved from 53.8 to 54.8 to 56.7, his passing yds from 2,444 to 3,291 to 3,474 and his td's from 12 to 17 to 26. His int decreased from 20 as a rookie to 13, but then back to 18 last season. Sanchez will always be a conservative QB because of the tm's stellar D and he doesn't have to win gms by himself. He needed to improve in the red zone and he did so LY, as the Jets led the NFL with a 65.5% success rate (36 td in 55 drives, Sanchez 6 rushing td). But with the playoffs on the line, the Jets lost their L/3 as Sanchez turned the ball over too many times (7 int) and the offense failed to score more than 19 pts. For the year, Sanchez accounted for 26 of the tm's 34 TO's. Tebow was a curious addition to the roster. Love him or loathe him, he revitalized a DEN team that was dead in the water a month into last season and he led the Broncos to the playoffs and a 1st round upset over PIT. His come-from-behind heroics have become legend, but Tebow is a college-style read-option QB, not an NFL-caliber passer. He completed only 46.5%, but had a 12-6 ratio on 271 att (1729 yds). It was running the ball where Tebow excelled, gaining 660 yds (5.4) with 6 td. He's better throwing on the run or out of the pocket, but he too often skips passes or sails them over open rec's. The deep ball is the only pass he throws with consistency and defenses know he likes to throw to his left. Tebow didn't turn the ball over most of last season, though he did have 7 TO's in the L/3 gms and lost 6 of his 13 fmbls. Greg McElroy, a #7DC LY, will be the #3 QB. He suffered a thumb injury last preseason and spent the year on IR, but some scouts think he could be an NFL st'r. A QB controversy is brewing in the Big Apple and the first pass or interception hasn't even been thrown yet. The Jets say Sanchez is the starter and that Tebow will have his own package. But what will happen if and when Sanchez struggles for a game or two?

QB MARK SANCHEZ #6 6-2 225 Age: 25 4th Yr (16/16)
#1DC NYJ '09 (USC) - 3474 pass yd (56.7%), 26-18 ratio, 6.4 ypa, 78.2 QBR, 103 rush (2.8), 39 sk LY. 16 st, 3291 pass yd (54.8%), 17-13 ratio, 6.5 ypa, 75.3 QBR, 105 rush (3.5), 5 td, 27 sk '10.

Tim Tebow #15 6-3 236 Age: 25 3rd Yr (11/14)
#1DC DEN '10 (Florida) - 1729 pass yd (46.5%), 12-6 ratio, 6.4 ypa, 72.9 QBR, 660 rush yd (5.4), 6 td, 33 sk w/DEN LY. 3 st, 9 gm, 654 pass yd (50.0%), 5-3 ratio, 8.0 ypa, 82.1 QBR, 227 rush yd (5.3), 6 td, 6 sk as a rookie.

RUNNING BACKS - The Jets rely on their ground-and-pound offense, but it wasn't very effective LY. After leading the NFL in rushing in '09 (172 ypg, 4.5) and ranking 4th in '10 (148, 4.4), the Jets slipped to 22nd LY, averaging only 105.8 ypg (3.8), their lowest mark s/'05. Shonn Greene is the only experienced back on the roster. Greene is a tough runner who can wear down defenses, but he can be stopped with base personnel and his lack of breakaway spd makes D's commit to stopping Mark Sanchez first. For the 2nd straight yr Greene sputtered early, but he typically gets stronger as the season progresses. He finished with 1,054 yds (4.2, 6 td) and also added 211 rec yds (7.0). A #3DC in '09, he is a solid but unspectacular runner who isn't much of a blk'r. Although LaDainian Tomlinson rushed for only 280 yds LY, the Jets will miss his versatility as a blk'r and 3rd down back (449 rec yd, 10.7). Joe McKnight moves into the #2 role and can add a spark and big-play ability at times. However, the #4DC in '09 is inconsistent and inexperienced (he's never played more than 10% of the snaps). LY he rushed for 134 yds (3.1) and had 139 rec yds (10.7). Bilal Powell is a straight ahead downhill runner who was barely tested as a rookie, playing in 2 gms but he will get a shot. TY's #6DC Terrance Ganaway will see mostly ST duty. At FB, John Conner capably replaced Tony Richardson, who was one of the NFL's best lead blk'rs for 16Y before retiring after '10. Conner is a violent blk'r who loves to level LB's on the pass rush. Though he plays only 1/3 of the snaps Conner gets a lot of carries for a FB (13-44), but is not much threat as a receiver (2-9). The team scored 14 rushing td LY, but Sanchez had 6 of them. In '09-'10, the Jets ran 54% of the time, that figure fell to 43% LY. A Tebow run package might give the NYJ run gm the versatility it needs to bounce back to '09-'10's form.

RB SHONN GREENE #23 5-11 226 Age: 27 4th Yr (15/16)

RECEIVERS - LY, the Jets went into the season with 3 WR's who were #1 wideouts in Santonio Holmes, Plaxico Burress and Derrick Mason. TY, the Jets have only one #1 in Holmes since Mason was traded last Oct and Burress was not re-signed. Chaz Schilens, Jeremy Kerley and Stephen Hill will vie to start opposite Holmes, but Schilens is more of a #3 possession receiver and the other two lack experience. Holmes is a polarizing figure who is paid like a #1 WR, but often doesn't play like one. LY he fell out of favor with the OL a month into the season, and then had an on-going rift with QB Sanchez that both say now has been mended over the offssn. One wonders how quickly Holmes' moods will erupt again if Sanchez and the tm struggle and fans begin to call for Tim Tebow. When he's on his game, Holmes is a clutch receiver who adjusts to the ball well and he has "late hands" on long routes. He specializes in slants off play-action but had a career-low 12.8 ypc (654 yd) last season. The Jets will miss Burress in the red zone, where he was one of the NFL's best (8 td on 45 rec LY). Former Raider Schilens is the favorite to start opposite Holmes, based solely on experience. He has tons of talent but he was held back by a knee inj the L2Y and a foot injury in '09. A #7DC in '08, his best season was '09 when he finished with 365 yds (12.6) in 8 gms. He'll battle TY's #2DC Stephen Hill who could need a development year. He made only 49 career rec in an option offense at GA Tech and had some drops and concentration issues. However, he had a career 25.5 ypc and wowed the scouts at the combine with 4.28 speed. When he's on, Hill is a big, physical receiver who can get deep. He also has good blk'g skills which will help in the running game. Kerley was a #5DC in '11 who caught 29 rec (10.8) as a slot WR as a rookie. He has plenty of upside as he is hard to cover 1-on-1 and was often the go-to on underneath routes on 3rd Dn with 19 FD. Rounding out the depth are Patrick Turner, a former MIA #3DC who caught only 8 passes in 15 gms LY, Sanchez's childhood friend Scotty McKnight, a #7DC in '11 who spent 2011 on IR, and TY's #7DC Jordan White. TE Dustin Keller is the tm's most consistent rec who led LY with 815 yds (12.5) and 5 td. In 4 ssns since being drafted in the 1st RD, he's avg 53 rec's. Keller is more of a super-sized WR who is smart with good hands, speed and athleticism. Depth is an issue as Jeff Cumberland and Dedrick Epps are both undrafted players who have seen little action. The Jets had only 3 pass plays of 40+ yds LY, which tied for the worst total in the league, and their 206.1 passing yds per game ranked only 21st. Despite losing 2 of its best players this unit could improve.

WR STEPHEN HILL #84 6-5 206 Age: 21 Rookie

Jeremy Kerley #11 5-9 188 Age: 23 2nd Yr (1/14)
#5DC NYJ '11 (TCU) - 314 rec yd (10.8), 1 td, 19 rec FD, 61.7 catch %, 6.9% of off LY.

WR SANTONIO HOLMES #10 5-11 192 Age: 28 7th Yr (16/16)
#1DC PIT '06 (Ohio St) - 654 rec yd (12.8), 8 td, 34 rec FD, 50.5 catch %, 13.7% of off LY. 10 st, 12 gm (susp), 746 rec yd (14.3), 36 rec FD, 54.7 catch %, 13.6% of off '10.

Chaz Schilens #85 6-4 225 Age: 26 5th Yr (5/15)

OFFENSIVE LINE - The Jets struggled in every phase of their offense LY and the OL was no exception. NY ranked 28th in yds per play (4.8), and 29th in rush yds per play (3.8) and 25th in pass yds per play (6.5). They ranked 25th (311.8 ypg) in total Off and were 17th in FD's (18.8) . The only categories in which the team excelled was red zone and goal-to-go (1st in both). The OL all'd 40 sks (20th), the most by the team s/'07. TY all 5 st'rs are back, which means the unit has to play better because the replacements have little experience (4 started all 16). Two 2006 1st rounders, C Nick Mangold and LT D'Brickashaw Ferguson, are the line's best blk'rs. Mangold had never missed a start until a high ankle sprain sidelined him for 2. The leader of the OL, the tm saw his value when he was inj'd as they lost to OAK and BAL after winning the season's 1st 2 gms. Mangold has all the mental and physical attributes to be the best C in the league. Ferguson is one of the most athletic LT's in the gm and has never missed a start and hasn't missed a snap in 3Y. However, Ferguson gave up 9.5 sks LY after all'g only 2 sks in '10. He can be beaten by bull rushers and needs to get back to his 2010 form. RT Wayne Hunter had started only 5 gms in 7Y prior to LY because he was stuck behind Walter Jones and Steve Hutchinson in SEA and Damien Woody in NY. He has power, leverage and mobility but allowed 8.5 sks in his 1st season as a st'r. LG Matt Slauson and RG Brandon Moore are technicians who rarely make mental mistakes. Slauson had extensive shoulder damage LY and underwent surgery in Feb. He has to undergo a 5-6 month rehab which will put him on schedule for Sept. Moore is a fierce run blk'r who made his 1st Pro Bowl LY. Vladimir Ducasse (#2DC '10) is the most experienced bkp but his transition from UMass has been slow in his 1st 2Y. The other reserves have little playing time - OT Austin Howard (4 career gm), G Caleb Schlauderaff (6 gm), Dennis Landolt (0 gm) and TY's #6DC Robert T. Griffin. With all of the key players back, expect improved numbers this year.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - Although the NYJ D ranked 5th overall LY (312 ypg), the run D was 13th, all'g 111.1 ypg (3.9), its 1st time over 100 ypg in 4Y. The defense also made only 35 sks (t-#17), a drop from the 40 sks (t-#8) registered a year earlier. That's why NYJ selected Quinton Coples in the 1st RD and immediately inserted him as a st'r at DE. They expect him to be an every-down player, not just a pass rusher. They also want him to slide inside on pass downs alongside Muhammad Wilkerson, the other starting DE who was drafted in the 1st RD in '11. Coples can dominate with his toughness and tenacity on the outside, but he can also get push up the middle. Wilkerson started all 16 gms as a rookie, making 49 tkl, 3 sk and 9 tfl while playing nearly 2/3 of the snaps. The veteran of the DL is NT Sione Pouha who is now in his 8th ssn after being a #3DC in '05. He's a huge space-eating NT and first rate run-stopper who had 117 tkls the L2Y. HC Rex Ryan likes to rotate his DL's and has lots of depth to do so. Mike DeVito has started 11 gms at DE in each of the L2Y, making 93 tkls while playing about 1/2 the snaps. DeVito only has 1 sk in that time. However, Marcus Dixon also played just under half of the snaps LY (3 st), making 16 tkls and 1.5 sks. Jay Richardson was unsigned LY but made 6 sks in limited time in 32 gms for OAK in 2008-'09. Enormous Kenrick Ellis (6'4" 346) played in 5 gm (7 tkls, 0 sk), but needs work on fundamentals before he can be anything more than a backup. Expect this unit to bounce back from LY's finish vs the run.

LINEBACKERS - The LB corps had been the strength of the NYJ D for years and the 4 st'rs enter their 4th ssn together, a stability that is pretty much unheard of in the NFL with all of the inj's and FA which kills continuity. OLB's Bryan Thomas and Calvin Pace and ILB Bart Scott are all on the wrong side of 30, with a combined 29 seasons of wear and tear, but they possess the kind of experience and talent that most tms covet. Thomas is the keystone of the run D, but he played in only the 1st 4 gms LY (torn Achilles) and was replaced in the lineup by Jamaal Westerman, who left in FA. Pace starts at LOLB and is the only Jet who can be considered an elite pass rusher. LY, he slipped to 4.5 sks after seasons of 5.5, 8 and 7 sks. On the inside, David Harris is productive but gets little recognition for it avg 104 tkls and 5 sks the L3Y. A rangy player, he gets off blocks and makes a ton of plays in the middle of the field. For the 1st time in his career in 2011, Scott was no longer an every-down LB often coming out in pass situations but still made 66 tkls (4.5 sk). Aaron Maybin was a bust as a #1DC for BUF in '09, but the Jets signed him 3 gms into last season because Ryan wasn't happy with his tm's pass rush. In a new scheme, Maybin played well in spot duty as a nickel rusher, surprising everybody with 6 sks. He has rare physical abilities and could be more productive this year. After bouncing around with SEA, ARZ and TEN, Garrett McIntyre then played in AFL and CFL before joining the Jets' revolving door at OLB playing in 13 gms after Thomas went down. On the inside, though, there's not a lot of exp. Josh Mauga has played mostly ST's the L2Y, and while TY's #3DC Demario Davis was a man among boys at Arkansas St, he will have to make a quick transition to the NFL to see the field as a rookie. The Jets all'd 17 rushing td LY (t-#27) and they didn't blitz as much as they had in previous seasons, which is why the starting LB's accounted for only 17.5 sks. That number should at least be in the 20's for a 3-4 D.

LOLB CALVIN PACE #97 6-4 265 Age: 32 10th Yr (16/16)

DEFENSIVE BACKS - In the L3Y the NYJ pass D has ranked 1st, 6th and 5th, proving there's no better CB in the league than Darrelle Revis. LY, the Jets all'd 201 ypg and only 15 pass td (t-#2 - 24 td all'd '10). The 3rd Dn D was 2nd with a 32.7% success rate, but the red zone D was only 16th (23 td on 44 possessions). The Jets are deep at CB and can hold up with man coverage when the front 7 sends heavy pressure. Revis is the most complete CB in the game. He tkls and blitzes, and tms are often afraid to throw at him (4 int LY, 0 in '10). Revis gets away with borderline contact at times, but he has great reaction and balance. He has allowed only 6 td in the last 3 seasons. Antonio Cromartie struggled at times LY and commits too many penalties. When he plays well however, the Jets have a nearly unbeatable pass D. Cromartie had 45 tkls and 4 int LY and is dangerous with the ball in his hands. Kyle Wilson was a #1DC in '10 who has yet to earn a starting job but his cover skills improved enough to nearly double his playing time LY as the team's NB. The Jets signed former WAS S LaRon Landry to replace Jim Leonhard. Leonhard was the leader of the secondary and the team struggled without him LY (out L3 patella). Landry is inj-prone with wrist and Achilles inj's L2Y, so he signed an incentive-laden contract to protect the tm. He is a difference-maker when healthy who can play in the box or in coverage and he makes bone-jarring hits. SS Eric Smith started 14 gms LY and made 89 tkls but struggled at the end of '11 while playing with a torn meniscus. He will battle another newcomer ex-Dolphin Yeremiah Bell, for the starting spot in Aug. Bell started 63 gms over the L4Y and is a very good run stuffer (4 straight yrs with 100+ tkls). Other reserves incl 2 rookies (#6DC Josh Bush and #7DC Antonio Allen) and LY's #6DC Tracy Wilson. This unit remains one of the best in the NFL.

CB DARRELLE REVIS #24 5-11 198 Age: 27 6th Yr (16/16)

SPECIAL TEAMS - In our ST rankings, the Jets finished 7th LY, their 1st time in the top 10 in 5Y. The Jets broke in a new P and TY it could be a new PK. In 2Y with the Jets after coming over from DAL, Nick Folk has done little to distinguish himself, which is why the team signed ex-STL Josh Brown in FA. Folk has been successful on only 72.8% of his 92 FG's in the L3Y, while Brown is 104-127 the L4Y (81.9%). Folk ranked 30th in the NFL with only 17 TB on KO LY, whereas Brown had 15 TB on fewer KO to rank 25th, a slight upgrade. The two will compete in TC. Although Brown was 0-2 from 50+ a year ago, he led the NFL with 28 50+ FG's the previous 8 seasons. TJ Conley finally won the P job after Steve Weatherford signed with the Giants. While his 38.8 net ranked only 20th, he had 32 In20 and only 6 TB for a +26 total which was 3rd best in the NFL. Joe McKnight and Antonio Cromartie split the KR duties, as the Jets ranked 4th in the NFL with a 26.3 avg. McKnight is also a ST's cover demon, though he will see more action on offense TY. Rookie Jeremy Kerley averaged 10.9 on PR but lost his job late in the yr before winning it back due to Jim Leonhard's inj. The coverage units were very good finishing 4th on KR (21.2 avg) and 8th on PR (7.5 avg).

OVERVIEW - HC Rex Ryan is a brilliant defensive coach and his team takes on his aggressive personality on both sides of the ball. It was the team's offense which kept the Jets out of the playoffs LY and that was addressed very little during the offseason other than the highly publicized signing of QB Tim Tebow. Ryan did make several changes to his staff during the offseason, most notably firing OC Brian Schottenheimer and replacing him with former MIA HC Tony Sparano. That may have signaled a change to an even more conservative offensive approach. Sparano is an excellent coach who preaches tough, physical football. The Jets lived on the edge much of LY and had a chance to make the playoffs for the 3rd consecutive year for the 1st time in franchise history. Road woes were mostly to blame, as the team was 2-6 away and 6-2 at home. The Jets did have two 3 game win streaks, but those were offset by a pair of 3 game slides, incl the final 3 of the season when an 8-5 record fizzled away into an abrupt ending. NY lost 16 fmbls, 2nd most in the NFL, was -3 TO's and committed 102 penalties. The D played well overall but was prone to lapses and wasn't able to blitz as much as in years past. While NE is favored to win the AFC East, the Jets will be in contention for 2nd place and a Wildcard spot once again. One knock on Sanchez was how hard he prepares for games but with Tebow there every day that will be eliminated. The Jets had the #5 defense in the NFL last year and should top that this season as the defensive front 7 looks stronger and the schedule gets a lot softer. They go from facing the #9 schedule to the #27 schedule this year. The Jets were favored in 11 games LY so they underachieved but now Ryan has this team back to where he can play the no respect card. Mark Sanchez can play consistently while continuing to improve and keep Tim Tebow from being a distraction, the Jets could challenge the Patriots for the division title.

BUFFALO BILLS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - In 2011, for the first time in his 7 yr career, Ryan Fitzpatrick entered a ssn as the st'r. He got off to a strong start, as BUF won 5 of their first 7 and he was rewarded with a 6 yr contract extension at midssn. The wheels then fell off. Fitzpatrick was unable to carry the tm after RB Fred Jackson was inj'd in the 10th gm, and by the end of the year he was being booed by fans because he was wildly inconsistent and had lost his chemistry with WR Stevie Johnson. He suffered cracked ribs and an inj'd sternum in gm 7, which hampered his performance the 2H of the ssn. At his best, Fitzpatrick is a workmanlike, streaky QB who lacks arm strength but makes up for it with smart, quick decisions. His leadership skills and mental attitude outweigh the modest physical abilities of the former Harvard passer. He's overly aggressive forcing too many balls and is prone to throw off his back foot and sail passes under pressure. He started all 16 gms, throwing for 3,832 yds (62.0%, 24-23), while taking only 22 sks (1 per 25.9 att). Fitzpatrick can also run for FD's, gaining 215 yds (3.8). The big question TY is whether or not he can curtail the tailspin both he and BUF suffered after their hot start. Vince Young was signed after struggling during his 1 season as Michael Vick's bkp in PHI, when he started 3 gms. Young's act had grown old in TEN, where he spent the first 5 yrs of his career. In PHI, he threw 9 int's in 114 att's, completing only 57.9% for 866 yds and 4 td's while taking 8 sks. Young's career QBR of 74.4 is among the bottom 5 of all active QB's, and his career ratio is a subpar 46-51. Young would get the nod if Fitzpatrick struggles again, but that would bode trouble in BUF. Tyler Thigpen was Fitzpatrick's bkp LY, but the career journeyman played in just 3 gms and could be let go. Brad Smith signed as a FA from NYJ and played more than 1/3 of the offensive snaps as a Wildcat QB, RB and WR. He is a triple threat on a team begging for playmakers, though he ran the ball just 20 times for 87 yds LY. Smith went from utility man to full-time WR late in the season, catching 23-240-1.

QB RYAN FITZPATRICK #14 6-2 225 Age: 29 8th Yr (16/16)
#7DC STL '05 (Harvard) - 3832 pass yd (62.0%), 24-23 ratio, 6.7 ypa, 79.1 QBR, 215 rush yd (3.8), 22 sk LY.
13 st, 13 gm, 3000 pass yd (57.8%), 23-15 ratio, 6.8 ypa, 81.8 QBR, 269 rush yd (6.7), 24 sk '10.

Vince Young #9 6-5 232 Age: 29 7th Yr (3/7)
#1DC TEN '06 (Texas) - 866 pass yd (57.9%), 4-9 ratio, 7.6 ypa, 60.8 QBR, 79 rush (4.4), 8 sk w/PHI LY.
8 st, 9 gm, 1255 pass yd (59.6%), 10-3 ratio, 8.0 ypa, 98.6 QBR, 125 rush yd (5.0), 13 sk w/TEN '10.

RUNNING BACKS - The BUF running game showed flashes of excellence at times LY, avg 120.1 ypg (#13). While that's not a top 10 ranking, it was the best by BUF since 2000. Fred Jackson is the catalyst of the offense when healthy and is the key to keeping QB Ryan Fitzpatrick out of harm's way. An underrated workhorse, Jackson also has solid receiving skills. BUF went downhill after he suffered a broken leg in the 10th gm, winning just once down the stretch. He had been on a Pro Bowl pace, averaging nearly 140 ttl ypg (#2 NFL). Jackson rushed for 934 yds (an excellent 5.5) and 6 td's. He also had 39 rec's for 442 yds. For an undrafted player Jackson's been a huge surprise, rushing for 2,923 yds in the last 3 years. In '10, CJ Spiller looked like a draft bust (#9 overall pick) after an unproductive rookie ssn rushing for only 283 yds with just 24 rec's while struggling with ball security and pass protection. After he took over for Jackson LY, starting the L/6 gms, Spiller improved quickly as the go-to back. In wk 14 vs MIA, he had 91 rush yds and 76 rec yds with 2 td's and a week later set a career-high with 111 rush yds. For the year, he rushed for 561 yds (5.2) and had 39 rec's for 269 yds (6.9). Spiller has to be more than just a compliment to Jackson and the Bills need to find a way to use his versatility. He's a threat to break big gains as a runner, receiver or kick returner given his spd and open-field abilities. Johnny White, a #5DC in '11, needs experience but has the ability to be a productive playmaker. FB Corey McIntyre is a huge blocker at 6'0" 247, but BUF rarely uses 2-RB sets and he gets most of his PT on ST's. If the Bills figure out how to use both Jackson and Spiller effectively, they could easily be a top 10 rushing team in 2012.

RECEIVERS - In 2011, BUF traded away Lee Evans and committed to Stevie Johnson as their #1 WR. He finished with 1,004 yds (13.2), making him the 1st Bills player to have B2B 1,000 yd seasons, something not even Andre Reed could manage. Those numbers were just slightly off his '10 stats (1073, 13.1, 10 td), when he burst on the scene turning into BUF's top offensive playmaker and forming a solid connection with Fitzpatrick. Johnson has the height, leaping ability and speed and is a good downfield blocker. He is actually better suited as a #2 WR as he still shows immaturity and is not a deep threat. Vying for the role of #2 are Donald Jones and David Nelson, both undrafted rookies in '10. Until being inj'd in Nov, Jones was supposed to be used to stretch the field being BUF's top deep threat. However, he had 23 rec's for only 231 yds, a pedestrian 10.0 avg. Nelson had 61 rec's for 658 yds and proved to be more productive, despite not even starting in college at Florida. Both players could serve as possession receivers, with the 6'5" 215 lb Nelson also a threat in the red zone. BUF gave up a #7DC to move up two slots to pick TJ Graham in the 3rd RD, hoping he can be the deep threat they so desperately need. A former track star, he needs to improve his route running and hands. Reserves incl Naaman Roosevelt, who had 16 rec's for 257 yds (team-best 16.1 avg), Derek Hagen (138, 10.6), and Marcus Easley, a #4DC in '10 who's been inj'd the L2Y. Roscoe Parrish, who had 33 rec's in '10 was inj'd in the 2nd game LY and was lost as a FA TY. The TE position has been a huge hole for BUF since the early '90s, but LY Scott Chandler took over as the st'r and played pretty well. He had 38 rec's for 389 yds and proved to be a hulk in the red zone, scoring 6 td's. Lee Smith, a #5DC of NE in '10, had 4 rec's as an oft-used back-up after being claimed.

OFFENSIVE LINE - Last year BUF's OL was filled with uncertainty heading into the season. It had been an injury-plagued and overmatched unit throughout '10 that was a detriment to QB Fitzpatrick, and it was not addressed high up in the draft (#4 & #5 DC's). However, the line jelled under rising asst Joe D'Alessandris and allowed the fewest sks, hits and hurries ever by a BUF OL. Suddenly a weakness had become a strength, especially at the middle 3 positions. This happened despite the OL having to work through inj's and players shifting spots as in gms 9-11 the Bills started 3 different C's, and 3 diff players started at LT during the yr. Andy Levitre, the tm's best OL, was forced to start at LG, LT and C. Four st'rs return TY, with only the LT spot still to be decided, and even that will be an upgrade. Levitre has started 16 games each of his 3 seasons and didn't miss a snap LY. He's a battler and a technician with good footwork and quickness. Kraig Urbik started at RG then moved to C after Eric Wood was inj'd. A #3DC of PIT in '09, Urbik has a rare mix of height and bulk for the position. Wood was a G converted to C, taking over for Geoff Hangartner, and was playing at a Pro Bowl level before suffering an ACL injury in gm 9. A #1DC in '09, if he can stay healthy, the BUF OL will be even better. RT Erik Pears was the only player to start all 16 at the same position. After being cut by DEN, OAK and JAX, he seems to have found a home here, and only all'd 3.5 sks LY. Unreliable Demetress Bell started 6 at LT until being inj'd and left TY in FA. Competing at LT will be Chris Hairston, a #4DC in '11 who started 7 at LT before an ankle injury, and this years #2DC Cordy Glenn, who dominated as a run blocker and is a decent-enough pass protector. Glenn may be more suited at G while Hairston is more suited as a straightaway smasher than a nimble bodyguard and may end up at RT. Both Hairston and Glenn should be better than Bell, but BUF has not had an elite OT since Jason Peter left in '09. Chad Rinehart started 12 at G LY and is the top reserve. If they stay healthy this unit should remain a team strength in 2012.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

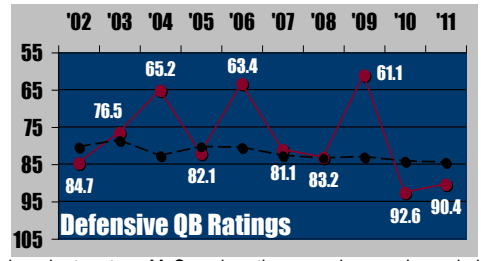

DEFENSIVE LINE - With the addition of FA DE's Mario Williams and Mark Anderson TY, combined with LY's #1DC DT Marcell Dareus and the very underrated DT Kyle Williams, BUF suddenly has a formidable front in their new 4-3 D. That's a major upgrade for a pass rush that avg'd only 27.6 sks/yr s/'07 (30th) notching just 29 sks LY (10 in 1 gm). In '10, BUF allowed 571 rush att, the most in the NFL in a decade. That number dropped to 467 LY, although BUF's run D ranked 30th (139.0 ypg). Williams is the key to more sks. Even though he led HOU in sks from '06-'10 and had 5 sks in 5 gms before suffering a torn chest muscle, the Texans deemed him expendable because of his salary and the fact HOU ranked #2 in D without him. After 1 yr at OLB, he returns to DE where he had 48 sks in 5 yrs. Anderson is a feast-or-famine edge rusher who came over from NE. As a rookie in CHI in '06, he notched 12 sks, then had only 13.5 the next 4 yrs. LY he rallied for 10 sks, most of them after the load fell on him after Andre Carter's inj. Dareus was the #3 overall DC in '11, starting 5 gms at DE and 9 at DT after Williams was KO'd. Inside, he has the strength and agility to beat double-tms, though he did wear down toward the end of his 1st pro ssn. His 5.5 sks led the team. Williams was a #5DC in '06 who needs to stay healthy after inj's held him to just 5 sts each of the L2Y. When healthy, he's intense vs the run and can get to the passer from inside (9.5 sk in '09-10). There's good depth in DE's Chris Kelsay and Shawne Merriman and DT's Dwan Edwards and Alex Carrington. Carrington started 6 for Williams but the '10 #3DC has only 24 tkls in 2Y and hasn't been much of a factor. Edwards has started 33 gms the L3Y for BAL and BUF and can play both inside and out but has only 4.5 sks in that time. Kelsay and Merriman will play hybrid DE-OLB in the 4-3 scheme. Kelsay has 60 sts and 15.5 sks the L4Y and will be a designated pass rusher. Merriman, if he makes the tm (trying to overcome yet another inj), has played only 23 gms the L4Y, with just 5 sks. He's still young at 28, but leg inj's seem to have diminished his skills. Torrell Troup was a #2DC in '10 who played in 2 gms as a rookie but none LY because of a spinal inj that necessitated surgery.

LINEBACKERS - The Bills D ranked 26th overall LY, allowing 371.1 ypg, and 30th in scoring at 27.7 ppg with inj's at LB being much to blame. Inj's were also the main cause for 2010's NFL-worst run D when 6 LB's were placed on IR. LY, Kirk Morrison signed as a FA after the lockout but saw little action despite appearing in 14 gms due to hamstring issues and 3 other LB's were put on IR by midssn. Former Packer Nick Barnett is a true leader who sets the tone and calls the defensive signals from his WLB spot. He has good range and pursuit abilities. He was the only player in the front 7 to start all 16 LY. He notched a team-high 130 tkls, the 7th time in 9 years he's had 100+. Kelvin Sheppard was a pleasant surprise at MLB, a #3DC who seemed overmatched at times but still notched 70 tkls in 9 sts. Morrison returns to health and moves from MLB to SLB. He was a tackling machine who could be counted upon for 100+ stops in the middle earlier in his career with OAK and JAX. He'll now be asked to tie up TE's and RB's, but he's excellent in coverage and should easily make the switch due to his anticipation and quickness. The depth is young but promising. Arthur Moats played DE on 3rd Dn much of LY and has had 2.5 sks each of the L2Y, not bad for a 6th RD backup. Danny Batten, LY's #5DC, started 3 and proved to be a relentless run-down player. Two '12 DC's, Nigel Bradham (4th) and Tank Carder (5th) will push for PT. The change to a 4-3 gives new assignments to all of the LB's, but DC Dave Wannstedt's D has always featured stellar LB play in his years in DAL, CHI and MIA.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - With the BUF front 4 vastly improved by putting pressure on opposing QB's, the next step was upgrading the secondary. They think they've done that, adding an infusion of youth to an aging group of CB's. Stephon Gilmore was the 10th overall pick of TY's draft, and could team with Aaron Williams, LY's #2DC to give BUF a sturdy set of young CB's with lots of potential. They let go Drayton Florence, a 9 yr vet who started 45 gms the L3Y. Gilmore is a tremendous athlete who is fast, can bump WR's off the line, come off the edge on a CB blitz and tkl. While he needs work on his cover skills, he is an intense player who is physical, smart and fluid enough in coverage. Williams made 6 sts late LY, playing 9 gms, and has good size and strength. He is a physical, disruptive playmaker who's still learning the position. The starting job isn't his, however, as he will have to beat out Terrence McGee, a 10 yr vet who has an inj history and lowered his salary TY in order to return. McGee gives the secondary much-needed experience. Leodis McKelvin made 5 sts when McGee went down LY but was benched in Nov, giving way to Williams. A #1DC in '08, he's been criticized for his lack of dedication, but he has too much talent to be dismissed. While the Bills made 20 int as a team LY, the returning CB's combined for just 2 of them. FS Jairus Byrd and SS George Wilson are an underrated duo. Byrd broke onto the scene as a rookie in '09 when he made 9 int, but has had only 4 since. A former college CB, he will be free to roam more than he was in '10 when he was forced to stay in the box and defend the run. LY he played nearly every defensive snap and made 98 tkls. Wilson is a 6 yr vet who started 13 LY and led BUF with 4 int. He's a converted WR who lacks the size and spd to be a solid run defender but has fine instincts for the position and can get to the ball. Da'Norris Searcy, a #4DC LY, started 3 when Wilson was inj'd. He is instinctive with good feet, but he lacks deep spd to recover if beaten initially. LY, BUF ranked 19th in pass D (232.1 ypg), a figure that's sure to improve TY, as will the tm's league-worst 64.4% red zone D (38 td allowed in 59 poss).

SPECIAL TEAMS - After being a top 7 ST unit from 2003-09, the Bills slipped to 21st in '10 and 16th LY, mostly due to avg kicking. PK Rian Lindell could face some competition from #7DC John Potter in training camp. The 35 year old Lindell has seen his best days, but he's still an accurate K who has made more than 80% of his tries the last few years. Last year he scored only 64 pts, as he missed the 2H of the season with a shoulder inj suffered while making a tkl on a KO. He was 13-15 on FG. Dave Rayner handled the PK duties the rest of the yr, scoring 43 pts on a dismal 10-15 FG and was not brought back. Lindell had only 12 TB on KO LY, 27.9% (#27), which is why Potter was drafted. Western Michigan's record holder with 333 career pts, Potter has a strong leg (36 TB in 12 gms) and might handle only the KO duties. He was 47-65 on FG with a L/45. Brian Moorman is a good directional P with a strong leg. LY he had a car best 48.2 avg but ranked only 23rd with a 38.1 net, as the tm's punt coverage all'd 11.5 ypr. Moorman had 10 TB (27th), only 20 In20 (26th) and 1 kick blk'd. LY's #7DC, Jimmy Rodgers provided a boost to the KR game with a 28.7 avg on 13 returns, after Brad Smith slumped to an 18.8 avg on 15 returns. CJ Spiller, who led the team in '10, had only 6 KR. PR Leodis McKelvin ran back one of his 8 ret's for a td, but Spiller had only 13 PR (9.8). TY's #3DC TJ Graham is not only a former track star and promising WR, but he is the ACC's all-time KR leader, likely giving him the edge to handle those duties.

OVERVIEW - Although Chan Gailey was not widely hailed by Bills fans when he became HC in '10, he has his team on the rise with a decent offense and a rebuilt D that could surprise TY. The offense does have some playmakers, but other than '10 #1DC CJ Spiller, the others include a pair of #7DC's in QB Ryan Fitzpatrick and WR Stevie Johnson, and an undrafted RB in Fred Jackson. Gailey made his name in the '90's as an offensive guru. After a 4 win season in Gailey's 1st yr, the Bills won 6 times LY. BUF started off 5-2 and had Bills fans dreaming of a 1st playoff berth s/'99. Included in those 5 wins were victories over NE and PHI! However, BUF lost 7 straight and 8 of their L/9, including blowing a 21-0 lead in their season-ending 49-21 loss to NE. The offense played surprisingly well over the 1H of the season until RB Jackson was inj'd in the 10th game. That setback greatly affected both the running and passing attacks more than would have been expected, especially on 3rd Dn (ranked #28, 32.5% success rate). The Bills struggled offensively after the surprising start, and only a 40 pt outburst in a victory vs DEN in game 15 kept BUF from losing all of the L/9. Even Fitzpatrick, who was given a 6 yr contract extension at midssn, slumped down the stretch. This was because he injured his ribs in the win vs WAS after the bye week. He also lost Fred Jackson and his WR unit was decimated by injuries the rest of the season. An opportunistic D got more takeaways in the first 6 gms than in all of '10 combined (12-11) and had 31 for the ssn, but that same D allowed the most yds (5938) in franchise history, including a team-record 5 consecutive gms in which it allowed at least 400 yds. While Mario Williams is a solid addition, the return of Kyle Williams will be huge for 2012. New QB coach David Lee brought the Wildcat offense to the NFL in '08 and will see that triple threat Brad Smith becomes more a focal part of the BUF offense. Curtis Modkins remains the OC and makes up the gameplan, but Gailey calls the plays on gameday. On the other side of the ball, after a year coaching the team's ILB's Dave Wannstedt was named the DC, replacing George Edwards, who was fired. Wannstedt has been one of the league's best defensive minds for more than 2 decades, and the team's influx of talent on that side of the ball solves their #1 weakness and could make the Bills one of the better D's TY. In 16 years as an NFL HC/DC, Wannstedt's units have ranked in the top 12 on D 11 times. The team will employ a 4-3 for the first time s/'09. One thing the Bills have to do is beat some top teams. Of Gailey's 10 wins over 2Y, only one has come vs an opponent with a winning record. The Bills are a team on the rise, and if the newcomers on D play well and the offense stays healthy, BUF could vie for that elusive playoff spot.

MIAMI DOLPHINS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - Dolphins fans who expect Ryan Tannehill to be the savior at QB as a rookie are in for a surprise because the 8th overall pick is more likely to hold the clipboard and learn from a veteran st'r like Matt Moore or David Garrard. Tannehill might be MIA's QB of the future. They've been looking for one since Dan Marino retired after the '99 season, but he's just not ready. He started only 19 gms in college (in addition to 30 sts at WR) and he needs a lot of work. However, Tannehill is in an ideal spot for a developmental prospect, even if it takes a couple of years to get on the field. He has ideal size, a strong arm, is accurate and extends plays because he throws so well on the move. On the downside he makes questionable reads, has game-management issues, forces too many balls (needs to learn to throw ball away), and his overall mechanics need to be fine-tuned. That means either Moore or Garrard will start TY, with the other likely to get released. Moore started the L/12 in '11 and showed a lot of promise after replacing Chad Henne. He helped salvage a season that started off with 7 straight losses. He had a QBR of 87.1, better than Henne had in any of his 3 yrs as the st'r. Moore played solid with 16 td's and only 9 int's. He is a risk-taker with a strong arm, athleticism and decisiveness. His on-the-move passing to TE Anthony Fasano and RB Reggie Bush was a key to the 6-3 finish. Moore is 13-12 as a st'r going back to his CAR days but is probably better suited to be a backup, though he would have to be the favorite to beat out Garrard heading into training camp. Garrard sat out all of LY after being cut by JAX 5 days before the opener. A 10 yr vet who started from 2006-10, he's a proven leader, though he has never produced huge numbers (only six 300 yd gms from 2008-2010). He did throw 23 td's in '10. Garrard struggles to take care of the ball and is inj prone. He would've been better off playing LY, but he wanted guaranteed money before signing with another team. If he wins the #1 job, Garrard would be the Dolphins' 17th st'r s/'00, the most in the league. While the 2 veterans have the experience, Tannehill knows 65% of the playbook since he played for OC Mike Sherman in college. Sherman is the team's 10th OC since 2001, and if any team needs some stability at the position, it's Miami. Another problem for whoever is the QB is MIA's woeful WR corps, which is quite possibly the worst in the NFL.

QB MATT MOORE #8 6-3 203 Age: 28 6th Yr (12/13)

RUNNING BACKS - The MIA ground game showed some life LY with an avg of 124.2 ypg, their 2nd best mark in the L9Y. Much of that was due to the success of Reggie Bush, who was acquired in a trade with the Saints and went from an often inj'd flex back to an every-down player who silenced his critics. He ran for a career-best 1,086 yds (5.0) and also caught 43 passes, giving him a total of 1,382 yds from scrimmage. Bush had missed 20 gms from 2007-10 and had never made more than 10 sts while averaging only 8.7 rushes per game with NO. He started the 1st 15 LY before sitting out the finale (knee) and proved to be a decisive and physical 1-cut runner as well as a versatile playmaker out of the backfield. Bush combined with Daniel Thomas to give MIA a solid 1-2 punch with spd and power. Thomas, a #2DC in '11, ran for 107 yds in the 2nd game and was the primary ballcarrier early in the season until Bush proved his value. Thomas is a solid between the tkls option who's powerful, though not explosive. He missed 4 gms but still gained 581 yds. Though he didn't see the EZ as a rookie, he could prove to be the tm's short-yardage back and might still be the workhorse runner in time. Steve Slaton was claimed after gm 3 from the Texans, but he's been bedeviled by inj's and fmbl's throughout his 4 yr career. After rushing for 1,282 yds in '08, Slaton has only 43 carries the L2Y. Lamar Miller, a #4 DC, is a tough 1 cut and go runner, but doesn't need to play right away. Miller can't block, but he can catch the ball and accelerate for big gains. He will see most of his action on KO returns. Charles Clay was a #6DC in '11 who started as a blocking TE and may be shifted to FB unless the Dolphins bring in a traditional FB. Clay can be an effective and durable blocker. Clay caught 16 passes for 233 yds as a rookie. After several years of a 2-headed backfield with Ricky Williams and Ronnie Brown, the Reggie Bush/Daniel Thomas tandem should provide both explosion and toughness for several years to come.

RECEIVERS - Arguably, the worst receiving corps in the NFL now belongs to the Dolphins. MIA traded away Brandon Marshall, their only standout at the position, thought admittedly Marshall was a locker room distraction. Unless MIA signs a veteran FA, the Dolphins will head into the season with Davone Bess and Brian Hartline as the st'rs, backed up by Legedu Naanee and Clyde Gates. Both Bess and Hartline slipped last year, though much of that was due to MIA's lackluster QB play. Bess is a dependable slot WR who caught 51 passes for 537 yds and 3 td's in '11, a dropoff from his 79 rec's a year earlier. Hartline had only 35 rec's for 549 yds but only 1 td after catching 43-615-1 in '10. Both players are solid, sure-handed receivers but they're better suited as backups. Gates was a #4DC in '11 who played in 15 gms, mostly on ST's, as he caught only 2 passes. MIA desperately needs his deep speed, but that was also the case a year ago and Gates failed to come thru. Naanee started 10 gms for CAR in '11, making FD's on 20 of his 44 rec's. A #5DC in '08 by SD, he seems to be improving and could wind up as a starter. TE Anthony Fasano has started 60 gms the L4Y. A sure-handed target in the red zone, Fasano has 18 td's the L4Y. LY he caught 32 passes for 451 yds (14.1). Michael Egnew was a #3DC and will see a lot of playing time, possibly taking over as the st'r in another year. Egnew is not an in-line TE but could be the pass catcher MIA has needed at the position for years, and he can even be split wide as a WR. He needs to improve his blocking before he replaces Fasano. Egnew has all the measureables and he makes plays on the ball as MIA will need him to emerge early on in what could be a woeful rec corps. A few players desperately need to step up and contribute in 2012.

OFFENSIVE LINE - A year ago, the Dolphins started 4 former #1 DC's on their OL, yet they were the worst pass-protecting unit in the NFL. MIA gave up 52 sks, 1 away from tying the franchise's single-ssn record (incl 9 in 1 gm to BUF). Two of those 1st rounders are gone (RG Vernon Carey, RT Marc Columbo) but that's a plus because last year the right side was the weak point. Carey never did live up to his potential, whereas Columbo, after failed stints with CHI and DAL, always struggled with quick pass rushers. The two remaining #1DC's, LT Jake Long and C Mike Pouncey, serve as the foundation for the line. Long is MIA's best all-around player and a 4x Pro Bowler, but LY he did not dominate the way he had in the past. He was inconsistent and struggled at times. He was slowed by a preseason knee inj then placed on IR for the final game with a back injury. When healthy, which he is now, Long can control top pass rushers and should easily regain his previous form. He's also an excellent run blk'r. Pouncey is an athletic C who can pull and lead, though not as well equipped as his brother, Maurkice, with PIT. Though he made nearly every snap as a rookie, he's still a bit raw, but he shows future Pro Bowl ability. After a slow start to his career with STL and BUF, LG Richie Incognito has started 31 games the last 2 yr's in MIA. While he'll never be a stud blk'r, he has cut down on pen's and proved to be a good zone blk'g G LY. John Jerry takes over at RG. A #3DC in '10, he started 10 games as a rookie, but only 3 LY (2 at LT for Long), though he did see action on about 1/3 of the snaps. Jerry has fine power and leverage and should develop into a fine road grader for Reggie Bush and especially Daniel Thomas inside. The new RT will likely be Jonathan Martin, TY's #2DC, who is an athletic blk'r that's light on his feet. He could use more explosion and power in the run gm. The tandem of Long and Martin could give MIA solid bookends for years to come. Depth is a huge problem, and if a st'r were to go down, MIA could struggle. Nate Garner has the most experience and is a versatile reserve G/T who started 8 in '09. He lacks the mobility to be a st'r, but as an extra OL in run sets, he excels. Artis Hicks can play both G and OT. Fourth year pro Lydon Murtha is a decent pass-blk'g reserve OT. Although the right side will feature two unproven starters TY, the overall line play should be improved.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

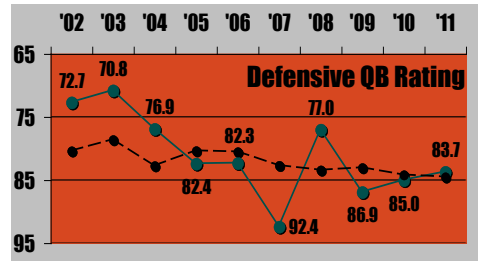

DEFENSIVE LINE - LY the MIA run D ranked 3rd in the NFL, allowing only 95.6 ypg, MIA's lowest s/'03. The play of the Dolphins' DL improved in '11 and provided a potent pass rush, as DE Randy Starks and NT Paul Soliai went from reliable st'rs to stellar players (Soliai received MIA's franchise tag). The one new st'r is DE Jared Oldrick who replaces Kendall Lankford. Soliai is a mammoth but nimble NT at 6'4" 355 who takes on 2 blk'rs in the run gm. Though he doesn't offer much in the way of a pass rush (only 2 career sks), he still manages to get solid pressure. Starks hasn't missed a game the L4Y. He is a decent pass rusher (14.5 sks L3Y), and his 2 int's tied for 2nd in '11. Oldrick started 3 at DE, 1 at NT and 1 at OLB, and his 6 sks led the DL's despite the fact he played fewer than 30pl a game. A #1DC in '10, he continues to improve. A year ago, MIA had excellent depth which was able to suffocate opposing rushing attacks at times. That might not be the case TY, as DE Tony McDaniel is the only reserve with adequate experience, playing 54 gms the last 4 years. NT Ryan Baker played in just 2 games and DE Kheeston Randall is a #7DC. If a starter goes down on this unit, similar to the OL, the Dolphins could find themselves in some trouble.

LINEBACKERS - Although the Dolphins will miss the 7 sks made by the retired Jason Taylor, this is a group that can get to the QB and stuff the running back. OLB Cameron Wake is the top player, although ILB Kevin Burnett is coming on strong and ILB Karlos Dansby has been a solid player for several years. OLB Koa Misi is an up-and-comer. Wake is the only proven polished pass rusher on MIA, though his sk total dropped from 14 in '10 to 8.5 LY. He should get back to DD sks TY. Misi is a solid young strongside backer who was beset by inj's in '10 (playing just over 1/3 of the snaps), though he made 9 sts in 12 gms. A #2DC in '10, his sks dropped, too, from 4.5 to 1. MIA's inside backers are the key to the run D. Dansby was a bit heavy early LY, but he topped 100 tkls for the 3rd time in 4Y and added 2 sks. Tall and powerfully built, he can blitz and roam sideline to sideline. Burnett replaced Channing Crowder and the ex-Charger led MIA with 106 tkls while seeing more action than any of the front 7 players. The depth will be excellent. FA acquisitions Jamaal Westerman and Gary Guyton join #3DC Olivier Vernon and reserve Austin Spitler to provide depth and form a fine rotation to keep the st'rs fresh. Westerman is a solid pass rusher (3.5 sks in limited action LY), while Guyton started 30 gms the L3Y with NE and is regarded as a good pass-covering ILB. Vernon will get a strong look, though he will probably play more as a pass-rushing edge player as a rookie as he learns the nuances of the pro game. He's explosive and can finish. Spitler is an excellent ST player who's seen little action at LB but has some tools. Ex-Jet and Brown Jason Trusnik (another ST standout) and #5DC Josh Kaddu deepen the LB corps. The heart of the MIA D is the LB unit, and this is one of the NFL's best and deepest groups.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - The Dolphins pass D returns 3 st'rs but one of those might lose his job, as the unit needs some serious improvement. A year ago, the Dolphins ranked 25th in pass D, allowing 249.5 ypg, the most in franchise history along with a def QBR of 83.7 (15th). LY, MIA was burned by big plays early, though late in the season they were able to play more press coverage because of a better pass rush. Vontae Davis and Sean Smith are both physical corners, but Smith will probably lose his starting job to Richard Marshall, a FA signee who started 41 gms for ARZ and CAR the L3Y. Davis has swagger and the talent to make a leap into the top group of NFL CB's. The team's best cover CB, he led MIA with 4 int's and played better in Dec after coming back from a hamstring inj. Smith is a hyper-aggressive bump-and-run CB who too often saw the back of an opponent's jersey while in trail formation. Thus the addition of Marshall, who started as ARZ's NB, then moved into the starting lineup last Nov. An aggressive playmaker, Marshall had 3 int, 2 sks and even played S part of the yr. Davis and Smith have started together since they were rookies in '09. The Dolphins cut SS Yeremiah Bell, who had started the L/64 gms because he wasn't a good deep zone defender. Taking over will be Chris Clemons because the coaching staff likes his potential. Clemons started 10 in '10 but saw mainly ST duty LY. He's a sure tkl'r who can play the run and pass. FS Reshad Jones started 11 in '11 and made 67 tkls and 2 int's. He's big and has a nose for the ball, but he's raw and tends to overplay his man. He also lacks the spd to catch up. Tyrell Johnson brings experience from the Vikings but he's been set back by inj's the L2Y. A #2DC in '08, he could push for a starting job if he stays healthy. Jimmy Wilson (#5DC in 2010) could see more PT, though he lacks spd and size. MIA ranked 6th in red zone D in '11, stiffening near the goal line. This is the defense's weak spot.

SPECIAL TEAMS - MIA was 5th in our special tms rankings LY, their best showing s/'02 and a marked improvement from 30th in '10 when the units had a meltdown and cost STC John Bonamego his job in-season. PK Dan Carpenter bounced back from a subpar '10 ssn, hitting 29-34 FG and scoring 113 pts while missing 2 (groin). Two yrs ago, he was good on just 30-41 FG after hitting 87% in his 1st 2Y. In '10, Carpenter was only 16 of 26 from 40+, but LY he improved to 13 of 16. He has a strong leg, having kicked 58 and 60 yd'rs the L2Y, and he had 39 TB, a 57.4% that ranked 7th. P Brandon Fields seems to improve every year and has to be considered one of the NFL's top P's. He had career bests with a 48.8 avg and 41.1 net (4th), also ranking 4th with 32 In20 and 6th with a +25 In20/TB ratio. PR Davone Bess had a fine 11.9 avg on 37 returns. KR Clyde Gates had a 24.8 avg in '11 and could remain in that role, though rookie Lamar Miller will get a shot, too. Cover units were very good, allowing only 9.9 on PR and 22.9 on KR. STC Darren Rizzi, who took over mid-'10 and led marked improvement since then, was retained by Joe Philbin, so MIA's ST's should remain solid TY.

Philbin was with GB the L9Y starting as an asst OL cch, to the OL cch in '06 and the OC from 2007-'11.

Offensive Coordinator - Mike Sherman, 1st year
Sherman hired Philbin when he was the HC at GB ('00-'05). He was the OC at HOU & then took the A&M HC position ('08-'11).

RB Coach - Jeff Nixon, 2nd year
After working as the RB coach at Temple in 2006, Nixon worked for PHI as an asst coach from 2007-'10.

WR Coach - Ken O'Keefe, 1st year
O'Keefe is taking his first NFL job. He has been a staple at Iowa working as Kirk Ferentz's OC the last 13 years.

TE Coach - Dan Campbell, 1st year, 2nd year overall
Campbell enters his 1st season as the MIA TE coach after spending LY here as an offensive coaching intern.

OL Coach - Jim Turner, 1st year
Jim Turner also comes over from A&M where he was the OL cch. He was previously the OL cch at Delaware, Temple & La Tech.

Defensive Coordinator - Kevin Coyle, 1st year
Coyle spent 15Y as a college DC incl stops at MD, Syr and Fresno St. The L11Y he's been at CIN incl the L/9 as DB cch.

DL Coach - Kacy Rodgers, 5th year
Rogers was 1 of 3 assistants retained from LY's staff. Prior to the Dolphins he was a DT/DL coach for DAL ('03-'07).

OVERVIEW - Tony Sparano started off strong, leading MIA to an 11-5 record and a playoff berth in his 1st season. Then things changed, with the record falling to 18-27 and a 7 gm losing streak to begin LY. Even 4 wins in the next 6 gms didn't help, as Sparano was fired with 3 gms to go. Todd Bowles took over down the stretch, winning twice, and was interviewed for the HC job, but owner Stephen Ross instead hired Joe Philbin, who led Top 10 offenses in GB each of the L5Y. Although he didn't call the plays in GB, Philbin brings the West Coast attack to Miami and was hired specifically to energize the franchise's moribund offense, which hasn't ranked in the Top 10 since Dan Marino was behind center more than a decade ago. There's not a lot of talent on offense, and TY's unit could be nicknamed the "No-Name Offense." A huge problem in MIA is a lack of consistency, as Philbin is the 7th HC in the L8Y. Even more telling is the fact that Mike Sherman becomes the 10th OC in the L12Y. The former GB HC comes over after a stint at Texas A&M and is charged with developing a QB, most likely Ryan Tannehill, his QB at A&M. The Dolphins have a decent OL and a very good RB tandem in Reggie Bush and Daniel Thomas, but little at WR and an overall lack of depth. Kevin Coyle replaces Mike Nolan as DC and inherits a rising young D that lacks star power but has talent (only 5 tms all'd fewer pts LY). Coyle was the DB coach in CIN from 2003-11 and he had only 2 Top 10 pass D's (incl 9th LY) and 4 rankings of 24th or lower. MIA has suffered through 3 straight losing seasons for the 1st time since 1967-69 before Don Shula was hired. LY's 0-7 start brought back memories of MIA's 1-15 finish in 2007. Sparano's future was up in the air during the 2011 offseason when Ross courted Jim Harbaugh as HC. Sparano held on to his job, but by the time the season started, the players could see their coach had lost the owner's confidence, and pretty soon he had lost MIA. The offense struggled through the 0-7 start, scoring more than 17 pts only once. The Dolphins then reeled off 3 straight wins over KC, WAS and BUF. Over the following 6 wk period, MIA's offense got on track under QB Matt Moore, who had replaced Chad Henne in wk 5, scoring 30+ pts in 3 gms. Losses followed in 2 of the next 3, and Ross finally made the long-anticipated change, firing Sparano and promoting asst HC Todd Bowles to interim HC. Bowles led MIA to wins over BUF and NYJ in the final 3 gms. However, none of the season's 6 wins was vs a team with a winning record. The Dolphins discovered that Moore was a solid QB and that Bush could be a featured back when given the opportunity. The D was a forceful unit over the 2H of the season, though it was susceptible to teams that spread the field with 4 or 5 WR's. In Free Agency they let go 4 players who started all 16 including their top WR and another that started 12 while bringing in 0 players with more than 10 starts in '11. In the draft they picked a prospect at QB in the 1st round who might not play. Despite a much softer schedule this will be a rebuilding year for the Dolphins and MIA will struggle to stay out of last place.

Power Rating 99.83

Mike Tomlin took over in '07 and in '08 PIT opened 6-3. They would win 9 of their last 10 including the Super Bowl over ARZ (despite being outgained 407-292). In '09 they opened 6-2 but then stunningly lost their next 5 with losses vs 3 of the NFL's weakest teams (KC, OAK, CLE) missing the playoffs on tiebreakers. PIT was still #7 on off and #5 on def (1 of only 4 to finish in the Top 10 in both). They outgained their opp's in 5 of their defeats and had 3 net close losses. In '10, with Ben Roethlisberger suspended the first 4, some folks were picking them 3rd in the North and many had them missing the playoffs. They ended the year #14 on off and #2 on D and had a pair of tight home playoff wins (BAL, led Jets 24-0) but lost to GB in the SB. PIT was +17 in TO's and had 3 net close wins and at that point 7 of the last 10 SB losers had not made the playoffs. They faced the #30 schedule. Last year they drubbed NE with a 427-213 yd edge to move to 6-2 but suffered a tough home loss to BAL (TD with :08 left). With a banged up Big Ben they finished 12-4 again but lost twice to BAL so they were a Wild Card team. Unfortunately they got Tebowed in the first round on a busted coverage. They were #12 on offense and had the NFL's best defense. This year they face just one team on the road that had a losing record last year as the schedule is tougher and they had 3 net close wins LY and a def YPP of 19.2 - all signs pointing down. Surprisingly, despite being 12-4 LY there are some indicators pointing upwards like being -13 in TO's, +101 ypg (#1 NFL), suffering thru 60 starts lost to injury and a poor off YPP of 18.3. Yes, the age of the defense is a concern but this is still one of the league's best teams. They should maintain better health and surrender less TO's which has them getting my call to win the tough AFC North.

PHIL STEELE'S POWER POLL

Power Rating 98.53

The Ravens have been an up-and-down team and have pretty much gone according to my expectations each year. They went 13-3 in '06 down to 5-11 in '07 (but outgained foes on yr) and then back up to 11-5 in '08 as they got to the AFC Title game despite a rookie HC and QB. In '09 I called for a drop in the record but for them to still make the playoffs and they went 9-7. They pounded NE on the road in the first round 33-14 but lost at IND the next week. They were #13 on offense and #3 on D. In '10 they dropped to #22 on off and #10 on def but took care of business at home with a 7-1 record (27-5 last 4 yrs at home). They lost the tiebreaker to PIT. They destroyed KC in Arrowhead but then had to play at PIT and were outgained 263-126 in a 31-24 loss. LY they had just two road games vs teams with a winning record in '10 and I said they could be favored in as many as 14 but they were actually favored in 15! BAL beat most of the big boys like PIT (twice), NYJ, HOU and SF. They did not play well in their "C" games losing at TEN, JAX and SEA but won the North tiebreaker and beat HOU off their 1st round playoff bye despite being outgained 315-227. They did have a 398-330 yd edge at NE but suffered a tough 23-20 loss. They would have won if not for a dropped td pass and a missed FG at the end. They finished #15 on off and #3 on D. They figure to be one of the favorites to win the AFC TY but have some factors pointing down. They were +2 net close wins, were only +49.8 ypg on the year, had 23 starts lost to injury, a def YPP of 17.4 and their schedule goes from #28 to #13! The biggest problem may be the LB's as they lost one starter to SD, Ray Lewis is a year older and '11's Def MVP Terrell Suggs suffered an Achilles injury and may miss the year. Will they tie Pittsburgh for first for a 3rd straight year?

In 2005 CIN made the playoffs for the 1st time since '90. They followed that with 3 straight non-winning season including 4-11-1 in '08. Carson Palmer's return from an inj in '08 made them a much stronger team. I pointed out they went from playing the 2nd toughest schedule to the 15th and said they would more resemble their playoff squad of '05. CIN roared to a 9-3 start with a 3 game lead over their division and backed off a little including resting players in a 37-0 week 17 loss to the Jets. They were then bounced out of the playoffs at home the following week by that same Jets team. They were +5.5 wins over '08, had 3 net close wins and were only +7 ypg despite being 10-6. These were all signs that pointed downward in '10 and I called for a drop to 3rd. CIN had a 10 game losing streak and dropped to 4-12. They were #20 on off and #15 on D and a lot of indicators point upward. They had 5 net close losses in '10 yet were only -1.4 ypg, took on a much easier schedule, were -6 wins from the previous year, had a def YPP of 13.4 and were -8 in TO's. My computer called them the Most Improved Team in the NFL and they bounced up to 9-7. They did beat just 1 team with a winning record (TEN 9-7), faced the #27 schedule and were beaten on the road in HOU 31-10 in the playoffs. They finished #20 on off and #7 on def. This year they take on a much tougher schedule (#5), only had 22 starts lost to injury and were +5 wins from the year prior. QB Dalton and WR Green keyed the offense as rookies but CIN did set an NFL record by overcoming 3 DD halftime deficits. CIN has been a poster child for the Slipping and Sliding article on pg 14 and I will call them to continue that trend. Look for their record to drop this year vs a tougher schedule despite being a stronger team. With a tough Dec, they could be a dog in their L/5 games.

The Browns have had just 2 winning seasons in their 13 years back going 68-140. In '06 they were -15 in TO's and had 75 sts lost to injury, which all pointed to an '07 upturn. They were a joke to the National Media after they were whipped by the Steelers 34-7 and then traded their starting QB after the game! AMAZINGLY, they rebounded despite an inexperienced QB and a weak defense (#30). They finished 10-6 with only an upset loss at CIN (week 16) keeping them from the playoffs! They went 4-12 and 5-11 the next 2 years with 16 losses by 10 or more. In '10 they stunningly beat the defending SB champs NO and then upset the Patriots (best record in the NFL) and took the Jets to OT before losing. They were intercepted at the GL late vs JAX and came up 4 points short but finished just 5-11. They were just #29 on off and #22 on def in '10. Last year they had a new HC and coordinators and were put behind by the lockout. The Browns actually finished #10 in the NFL on defense but their record dropped to 4-12 with the #29 offense. All 4 of their wins came vs teams with a losing record. I like the additions the Browns made on offense with QB Weeden, RB Richardson and RT Schwartz and this year's edition is the best they have fielded since that '06 season. Coach Shurmur and his staff now have had an entire offseason to work with the team. CLE had 3 net close losses last year and despite their record was only -43.6 ypg and their off YPP was 21.2, all signs pointing to an improvement. Only one of their road games comes vs a team that had a losing record last year and they figure to be a dog at home in at least 4 games. They go from facing the #15 schedule to the 4th toughest schedule. Despite being a stronger team this year, it may be tough to make the playoffs in the same division with 3 playoff teams from '11.

PITTSBURGH STEELERS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - Ben Roethlisberger has a 80-33 record in the regular season including a 44-13 mark at home while guiding the Steelers to 3 Super Bowl appearances (2-1) in his 8 year career. In 2009 OC Bruce Arians moved the old school Steelers into a pass-first offense as Roethlisberger surpassed the 500 attempt mark for the first time while also achieving career-best marks of 4,328 pass yards and a 66.6% completion percentage. Heading into 2010 Roethlisberger's highly publicized off-field issues landed him a 4 game suspension to start the season. Due to Byron Leftwich's knee injury, Dennis Dixon began the year as the starter. Dixon later suffered a knee injury himself in his 2nd start handing the ball off to 13 year veteran Charlie Batch. The combo of Dixon and Batch averaged just 152 ypg (63%) with a 3-4 ratio but PIT stood at 3-1. Roethlisberger guided the Steelers to victories in 9 of the last 12, avg 267 ypg (62%) with 17 td and a career-low 5 int. One of his strengths, ironically, is his biggest weakness as he refuses to give up on plays, and thus has a tendency to hold onto the ball too long, which exposes him to sacks (261 sacks L6Y) and big hits. In 2011 those hits began to accumulate as Big Ben suffered foot, ankle, thumb and shoulder injuries. He sat out vs the Rams in wk 15 due to a high ankle sprain which lingered into the playoff game where he hit 22-40 for 289 yds with a 1-1 ratio and was sacked 5 times in the OT loss to DEN. He finished the year throwing for 4,077 yds (63.2%) with a 21-14 ratio and his close friend OC Arians was shown the door. New OC Todd Haley is expected to run a more balanced attack in part to keep the now 30-year-old Roethlisberger in the lineup. Dixon hasn't re-signed as of presstime leaving Leftwich (sat out '11 due to a broken arm and ankle surgery) as the primary backup. Batch and FA signee Troy Smith should battle for the #3 job. Roethlisberger remains one of the NFL's best.

QB BEN ROETHLISBERGER #7 6-5 241 Age: 30 9th Yr (15/15) #1DC PIT '04 (Miami, OH) - 4077 pass yd (63.2%), 21-14 ratio, 7.9 ypa, 90.1 QBR, 70 rush yd (2.3), 40 sk LY. 12 st, 12 gm (susp), 3200 pass yd (61.7%), 17-5 ratio, 8.2 ypa, 97.0 QBR, 176 rush (5.2), 32 sk in '10.

RUNNING BACKS - Unlike many coaches in the NFL today, Mike Tomlin prefers to have a workhorse in the run game and that is what he got in 2010 as Rashard Mendenhall got 385 touches (including playoffs) rushing for 1,273 yards in the reg season and 13 td including 11 runs of 20+ yards (5th in NFL). With the pass game more of an emphasis in 2011, Mendenhall had just 1 gm with 20 or more carries and missed out on his 3rd straight 1,000 yd season (928, 4.1). He tore his ACL in the finale and could open 2012 on the PUP list. Isaac Redman has finished #2 in rushing the last 2 years with 247 (4.8) in 2010 and 479 (4.4) last year. He ran for 121 yd (7.1) in the playoff loss to DEN with Mendenhall out and will open 2012 atop the depth chart. The battle for the 3rd RB spot will be between 2010 6th RD pick Jonathan Dwyer (123, 7.7 '11) and 2011 7th RD DC Baron Batch (DNP '11, ACL). The Steelers added Florida speedster Chris Rainey in the 5th RD of this year's draft and he could be used as the 3rd Dn change of pace RB as well as a return specialist. New OC Haley may look to this unit for a more balanced offense but it hurts that its top player is unlikely to be 100% for most of the season.

RECEIVERS - With Hines Ward's retirement the torch has now officially been passed to Mike Wallace. After a 39 reception, 756 yard (19.4) performance as a rookie in 2009, Wallace exploded in 2010 with 60 receptions for 1,257 yards (10 td) and finished #2 in the AFC in ypc (21.0) and #1 in the NFL with 26 catches of 20+ yards. Rookies Emmanuel Sanders and Antonio Brown also took off in the second half giving Roethlisberger an array of downfield targets. TE Heath Miller had 42 catches for 512 yards while missing 2 late in '10 (concussion). Ward's yds declined from 1,167 (12.3) in '09 to 755 (12.8) in '10 with LY, his 14th season, being his least productive (381) since his rookie season. His 8.3 ypc was the lowest among NFL WR's with at least 40 catches. LY Ward and Sanders missed most of TC with injuries allowing Wallace and Brown to build their chemistry with Big Ben. The result was 1,000 yd seasons for both WR's. Wallace led with 1,193 (16.6) and 8 td while Brown finished #2 with 1,108 (16.1) and 2 td and was voted the team's MVP despite starting just 3. Miller was #3 (631, 12.4). Sanders missed 5 gms with stress fractures in both feet and finished with 288 yds (13.1). He did see time as a return specialist although he could focus on offense TY with the drafting of Rainey. With Sanders out the Steelers picked up Jerricho Cotchery to play the slot after he was cut by the Jets. After a 16 rec season (14.8) he was re-signed to a 2 year deal. With blocking TE Weslye Saunders sitting out the first 4 gms of the 2012 season after a violation of the league's substance abuse policy, the Steelers picked up FA Leonard Pope who has followed OC Haley for the 3rd time. They also drafted Oregon TE David Paulson in the 7th RD along with Colorado WR and Pittsburgh native Toney Clemons. Wallace sat out OTA's due to his contract situation but GM Kevin Colbert has gone on record as saying that the organization is hopeful he'll sign a long term deal. Despite Ward's departure this remains one of the AFC's best receiving corps.

OFFENSIVE LINE - The once fearsome Steelers OL hasn't dominated the line of scrimmage in recent years. In 2010 PIT was forced to insert 2 brand new players into the starting lineup (a rookie and a 13 year veteran). The rookie was 1st RD DC Maurkice Pouncey who earned a Pro Bowl berth at C. When Willie Colon was lost for the season over the summer (Achilles), the Steelers signed 36 yr old Flozell Adams to man the RT spot in 2010. The LT spot also saw its share of injuries as Max Starks (neck) landed on IR allowing Jonathan Scott to see 9 starts. LG Chris Kemoeatu continued to be one of the league's top run blockers while the RG position was shared between 3 players in Ramon Foster, Trai Essex and Doug Legursky. Despite starting 5 different lineups in the first 10 gms, new OL coach Sean Kugler's patchwork unit increased the rush ypg from 112 (4.2) in '09 to 120 (4.1) while cutting the sacks allowed from 50 (#31) to 43 (#25). Last year PIT cut Adams and Starks in August after he showed up to camp overweight. Second RD DC Marcus Gilbert impressed the staff immediately and became the starter at RT when Colon tore his triceps in the opener. Scott struggled forcing the organization to re-sign a slimmed down Starks in October. Injuries crippled the unit with no player starting more than 14 games. Pouncey earned All-Pro honors in his 2nd year but the unit's production was similar avg 119 rush ypg (4.4) to rank #14 in the league while allowing 42 sacks (#23). This year the Steelers addressed this area as their biggest need in the draft and took Stanford's David DeCastro in the 1st RD and Ohio St's Mike Adams in the 2nd. DeCastro was the Pac-12's most consistent OL and is expected to start right away at RG. The enigmatic Adams has the ideal LT build at 6'7" 323 but strength, consistency and off-field issues combined to sink his draft status. The Steelers will start him out at LT with Gilbert staying at RT while Colon will be moved to LG. The 7th round also yielded SMU OG Kelvin Beachum. The draft infusion may pay dividends, but this is still an OL in transition.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - The 2008 Steelers' D was 55 rush yards allowed away from being the first team since the 1969 Chiefs to lead the NFL in total, rush, pass and scoring defense in the same season. After finishing #3 in rush D in '09 allowing just 90 ypg (3.9), the unit won the rush D title in 2010 allowing 63 ypg (3.0) while finishing #2 in total defense (277). PIT owns the blueprint for constructing the modern 3-4 and with all 3 starters getting long in the tooth, the unit added 1st rounders in 2009 with Ziggy Hood and 2011 with DE Cameron Heyward. Hood saw increased time due to Aaron Smith's injury problems. Smith had played a total of 15 of a possible 52 games in the past 3 seasons and opted to retire TY. Hood is solid at DE and could also play NT if the situation arises. The other DE is 34 year old Brett Keisel who has remained steady despite missing 14 reg ssn gms in the last 4 years due to injury. He's backed up by Heyward who should see more action in the DL rotation in his second season after being slowed by Tommy John surgery prior to arriving. Massive (6'1" 325) Casey Hampton, who has arguably been the best 3-4 run stuffing NT in the NFL for years, started to show signs that his 35 year old body is slowing down in 2011 as he missed 3 regular season gms due to a shoulder injury before tearing his ACL in the Wildcard game. He's expected to open 2012 on the PUP list. Longtime backup NT Chris Hoke retired in the offseason after sitting out most of '11 with a neck stinger. Steve McLendon made his first ever start vs ARZ with both Hampton and Hoke out and will compete for the starting job in camp if Hampton is unable to go. The Steelers also traded up in the 4th RD to add huge Washington NT Alameda Ta'amu (6'3" 348) to battle right away. With all of the injury issues it's not surprising that the Steelers rush D fell to #8 (100 ypg, 4.0), their worst performance since 2003. Age and depth issues are a concern to what has been one of the NFL's finest 3-4 defensive lines.

LINEBACKERS -This is the heart of the Steelers' defense and may be considered the league's best LB unit. PIT LB's combined for 38.5 of the team's 51 sacks in 2008 which is the 2nd most in NFL history (2006 Chargers - 42.5 sacks). The group recorded 33.5 of the team's 47 sacks in '09 and 32.5 of 48 in 2010 and 26.5 of 35 sacks LY. James Harrison and LaMarr Woodley form the scariest OLB duo in the NFL today. Despite injuries and suspensions which caused Harrison to miss 5 and Woodley to miss 6 in 2011 they have had 4 straight seasons of at least 9 sacks. The primary OLB backup is Jason Worilds who had 38 tkls in 12 games (7 st) LY. James Farrior called the D's signals and racked up tackles with 422 over the past 4 seasons, but turned 37 and was released in the offseason. Lawrence Timmons took home the D's tackle title in 2010 with 135 but moved to OLB LY with Harrison out and fell to #2 with 93 tkls. Veteran Larry Foote, who had 47 tkls in 15 games (5 st) LY, is expected to take Farrior's spot. Chris Carter, Stevenson Sylvester and #3DC Sean Spence round out the rotation. The Steelers have led the NFL in ppg allowed in 3 out of the last 4 years including B2B years in '10 (14.5) and '11 (14.2). This unit remains one of the league's best.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - In 2008 the Steelers finished with the NFL's 3rd best total since 1978 allowing just 2,511 pass yards. That year PIT's defense gave up 157 ypg (57%) with a 12-20 ratio. After a #16 overall finish in 2009 when they all'd 215 ypg (58%) with a 22-12 ratio, the group surrendered 214 ypg (61%) ranking 12th in 2010. The secondary did have the 2nd most int in the AFC with 21 and the league's 2nd best defensive QBR (73.1) but was toasted by the Packers in the Super Bowl. PIT made re-signing top cover CB Ike Taylor their #1 priority following the lockout inking him to a 4 year deal. Despite suffering a broken thumb in the preseason Taylor had a strong start to the season holding Andre Johnson to 23 yds, but the primary knock on him is that he hasn't made more than 3 int in any season. Bryant McFadden missed all of camp with a groin injury before being slowed by a hamstring issue leaving the CB job open for William Gay. Gay had a mediocre season and signed with the Cardinals in FA while McFadden was released. NB Keenan Lewis impressed the staff LY and will compete with '11 rookies Curtis Brown and Cortez Allen for the open CB job. While the CB's have struggled at times in the last couple of years the safeties remain among the league's best. SS Troy Polamalu dealt with concussion issues LY but still tied for the team lead with 14 pbu. Lining up opposite is FS Ryan Clark, the glue that holds the secondary together making the play calls and he led the team in tkls with 100. Clark made headlines when he sat out the Wildcard game due to his sickle-cell trait and PIT was burned on several long passes including the 80 yd game winning td in OT. The safety backups are veterans Will Allen and Ryan Mundy and this unit could use a fresh infusion of talent with 3 starters over 30 as they look to deliver another solid def QBR (71.7 - 4th in NFL).

SPECIAL TEAMS - After a #26 finish in '09 ST's coach Bob Ligashesky was relieved of his duties and replaced by Al Everest who guided the group to a #14 finish in 2010. The return game was boosted by rookies Antonio Brown (23.4, 1 td) and Emmanuel Sanders (25.1). The KR coverage unit was also impressive in 2010 as they allowed just 20.0 ypr (#5). NFL journeyman Shaun Suisham replaced the 9 year vet Jeff Reed in the middle of 2010 converting on 14-15 attempts over the final 7 games of the regular season. P Daniel Sepulveda was putting together a solid year (45.5 avg, 39.1 net) before suffering the 3rd ACL tear in his right knee in week 12. His replacement Jeremy Kapinos averaged just 41.1 ypp with a horrid 32.3 net. LY the Steelers re-signed Sepulveda who was averaging 46.1 ypp with a 39.1 net when he tore knee cartilage in week 8. Kapinos was re-signed and avg'd 45.0 with a 38.3 net. The team cut its ties with the talented but injury riddled Sepulveda in the offseason and will stick with Kapinos for the time being even though the two combined to avg just 44.7 (#28) with a 38.0 net (#19). Brown did well as the primary PR (10.8) and KR (27.3). Suisham hit just 23-31 FG LY with his 74% ranking 31st in the league. While kicking in Heinz Field has always been a challenge (1-4 from 40+ LY), Suisham also struggled on the road hitting just 9-13 from 30+. The team brought in UFA Daniel Hrapmann for competition in the OTA's. After a #17 finish in 2011 this unit's improvement is dependent on the P and K.

Head Coach - Mike Tomlin, 6th year
Tomlin is one of just 7 coaches in history to win a Super Bowl within his first 2 yrs as an NFL HC (youngest ever). He joined Joe Gibbs as the only other HC to reach 2 Super Bowls in their first 4 yrs. He is just the 2nd PIT HC to win at least 10 games in 3 of his first 4 seasons. He has won 3 AFC North Titles and has a 60-28 career record including 5-3 in the playoffs.

Offensive Coordinator - Todd Haley, 1st year
Haley was hired in February to replace Bruce Arians. Haley served as the Chiefs HC from '09-'11 compiling a 19-26 record including KC's first AFC West Title ('10) since 2006. In '07-'08 Haley was the Arizona Cardinals OC and helped them to their 1st ever Super Bowl appearance. He is the first Steelers OC to be hired from outside of the organization in 13 yrs.

QB Coach - Randy Fichtner, 6th year (3rd as QB coach)
Fichtner became the Steelers QB coach in 2010 after being their WR coach from 2007-2009.

RB Coach - Kirby Wilson, 6th year
Wilson was the Cardinals RB coach from 2004-'06 and the Bucs RB coach from 2002-'03. Since arriving in 2007, the Steelers have finished 3rd, 23rd, 19th, 11th and 14th in rushing.

WR Coach - Scottie Montgomery, 3rd year
After serving as Duke's WR coach from '06-09 Montgomery joined PIT in 2010. He helped PIT tally eleven 100 yd receiving efforts (most for the Steelers in 11Y) in '10 and 7 LY.

TE Coach - James Daniel, 9th year
Prior to joining the Steelers, Daniel spent 7 ssns coaching TE's with ATL. He has also spent time with DEN, NO & NYG.

OL Coach - Sean Kugler, 3rd year
Kugler was the Bills OL coach in 2008-'09. In his 1st year with PIT in 2010 they had a 4.1 ypc and allowed 43 sacks. In 2011 the ypc improved to 4.4 and they allowed 42 sacks.

Defensive Coordinator - Dick LeBeau, 9th year
After a HOF 14 yr career as a CB with DET, LeBeau is one of the most highly respected DC's with 39 years of NFL coaching experience. Since rejoining PIT in 2004 for his 2nd tour as DC, the Steelers have finished in the Top 5 in total defense 7 of the L8Y with 5 finishes of 3rd or better in ppg.

Assistant HC/DL Coach - John Mitchell, 19th year
Mitchell has been the Steelers DL coach since 1994 and was promoted to asst HC in 2007. Since 2001 PIT has finished in the Top 3 in rush defense 9 times and they have allowed 30 rushing td's since 2008 incl just 4 in playoff action.

LB Coach - Keith Butler, 10th year
Butler was CLE LB coach from '99-'02 before joining PIT in 2003. Since PIT has finished in the Top 10 in sacks 5 times.

Defensive Backs Coach - Carnell Lake, 2nd year
Lake played for the Steelers from 1989-'98. After a coaching internship with PHI in their 2009 training camp PIT offered him his 1st full-time NFL coaching job.

Special Teams Coordinator - Al Everest, 3rd year
Everest has 16 years of NFL experience as a STC. He was the ARZ STC from 1996-'99, the NO STC from 2000-'05 (2 Top 10 finishes in our special teams rankings) and the SF STC from 2007-'09 (2 top 10). PIT has finished 14th and 17th in our rankings under Everest.

OVERVIEW - Success breeds stability and Mike Tomlin had enjoyed very little turnover on his staff since taking over. Last year's disappointing Wild Card loss to the Broncos brought the first major firing of Tomlin's tenure however as pass happy OC Bruce Arians was replaced by Todd Haley who is expected to run a more balanced system. The aim is to keep Roethlisberger upright as he's been sacked 314 times in his 8 year career which is on track to smash Brett Favre's NFL "record" of 525. The injuries mounted on 30 year old Big Ben last year and he was at less than 100% in the playoff game and minus #1 Mendenhall (ACL) PIT went away from the run game even though Redman had 121 yds on just 17 carries. Mendenhall is no sure thing to return in 2012 which means the Steelers will probably stick with a RB-by-committee at least early in the season. Although Hines Ward's retirement signals the end of an era he was definitely on the downside of his career as LY's 8.3 ypc will attest. The offseason priority has been to sign WR Mike Wallace to a long term deal to avoid an extended holdout which hasn't been accomplished as of presstime. PIT did address a major need in the draft by selecting OL DeCastro and Adams in the first 2 rounds and they are already pencilled in as starters. The Steelers run the same basic defensive system Dick LeBeau implemented in his 1st tenure here, although it's starting to show signs of graying with 7 starters in their 30's including NT Casey Hampton who is likely to begin the season on the PUP list. Defensively, the Steelers led the NFL in 8 categories and were 5th or better in another 7 in 2010. Last year the Steel Curtain led the NFL in total, pass and scoring defense but their rush D was their worst since '03 although it still finished #8 in the NFL. Sacks (48 in '10, 35 in '11) and interceptions (21 in '10, 11 in '11) were also significantly down. This year the schedule maker did the Steelers' aging roster no favors by opening with 4 road games in 7 weeks including 2 western trips. Only 1 team on their road schedule (Cleveland) had a losing record in 2011 and that game is sandwiched between hosting the Ravens on Nov 18th and a trip to Baltimore on Dec 2nd. Pittsburgh does end the season in the cozy confines of Heinz Field with home games vs the Bengals and the Browns. Many are pegging the Steelers third in the North this year but I will go against the grain. They tied for the Division Title LY and despite their 12-4 record have many key indicators pointing to improvement (see division forecast). I look for an improved offense and while they might not finish #1 on D they should still be in the Top 5 on that side and get my call to with the North for just the 2nd time in 4 years.

BALTIMORE RAVENS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - Coming into 2011 Joe Flacco had already become the Ravens' all-time leading passer (10,206 yds) in just his first 3 seasons in the NFL showing how much the team has counted on its defense and run game since moving to BAL in 1996. Flacco finished the final 14 games of the 2010 regular season in dominating style however avg 230 ypg (65%) with a 24-5 ratio. He went 137 passes without an int in 2010 and has quietly gone 16-1 at home in 2010-'11. Flacco entered 2011 without a safety net as veteran backup Marc Bulger retired after the lockout leaving rookie Tyrod Taylor the #2 duties. Flacco endured much offseason criticism and opened the season with perhaps his best personal performance in beating his nemesis Pittsburgh hitting 17-29 for 224 yards and 3 td's. He backed it up by beating the Steelers in Heinz Field for the first time in his career throwing for 300 yards. The Ravens tend to air it out in the earlier months of the year to soften up defenses before going to the run game around Thanksgiving. This also helps to keep Flacco healthy for the playoffs but also keeps his personal numbers down. While Flacco's QBR of 80.9 (#18) was his lowest since his rookie year of '08, it was with an overhauled receiving corps and with his 3rd QB coach in 3 years. Including the postseason Flacco has started all 73 games in his career and in 2011 became the first QB to win a playoff game in each of his first 4 seasons. He also set the NFL record for most wins by a QB in his first four years as a starter with 44. Flacco had perhaps the most impressive postseason performance of his career at New England in the Championship leading the Ravens to the game-tying chip shot FG attempt, which was missed with :11 left. This year Flacco has yet another QB coach in ex-Indy HC Jim Caldwell, who served as Peyton Manning's mentor from '02-'11. Flacco does now have a much more seasoned backup in Curtis Painter, who started 8 games for Indy last year, to go along with the mobile Taylor. Flacco is one of the league's most consistent QB's.

RUNNING BACKS - Ray Rice isn't afraid of contact despite his 5'8" stature but it's his versatility in the passing game which is what really makes him stand out. He's had 217 rec's in the L3Y with 33 career games of 100 yds from scrimmage. Rice had the 3rd most yards from scrimmage (1776) in 2010 and didn't fumble once all season. Despite his efforts, the Ravens still dipped to 14th in rushing avg 114 ypg (3.8) due to OL issues. LY BAL pulled a coup in the offseason by signing All-Pro blocking machine FB Vonta Leach away from HOU. They also let go of Willis McGahee and signed 34 year old Ricky Williams to be the backup. With a strong supporting cast, Rice had his best season yet finishing 2nd in the NFL in rushing (1364, 4.7) with 76 rec (9.3) and 15 combined td's. Rice was unquestionably the key to the Ravens' offensive fortunes as in 4 of their 5 losses LY he had less than 100 combined yards while they were 9-1 when he had over 100 yds. He was big down the stretch with a career-high 204 vs CLE and 191 vs CIN. Williams chipped in as the #2 rusher with 444 yds (4.1) but retired in February 2012. BAL finished as the #10 rush team (124.8, 4.3) and both Rice and Leach made the All-Pro Team. BAL went to the draft for TY's backup as they took Temple's Bernard Pierce, who is expected to take the short yardage/goal line role as a rookie while learning more skills in the pass game. Third-stringer Anthony Allen could also see time on pass downs. As of presstime there is a risk that Rice could be a holdout as he is looking for a long-term deal which would put his salary among the league's best. As long as BAL avoids a prolonged and potentially damaging contract situation, Rice remains one of the league's best.

RECEIVERS - The Ravens paid a lot of money to bring in Anquan Boldin to improve this unit in 2010 and he's led the team in receiving the last 2 seasons but hasn't been quite the breakout player the organization was expecting. In 2011 BAL veterans WR Derrick Mason (#2 - 802, 13.1), TE Todd Heap (#3 - 599, 15.0) and WR TJ Houshmandzadeh (#5 - 398, 13.3) were let go as the staff wanted to rebuild the receiving corps with younger, speedier talent. In fact only 3 of the Ravens' top 9 receivers from 2010 returned. Rookie Torrey Smith used his deep-threat speed to create separation and open up the passing lanes underneath. He finished as the team's #2 receiver (841, 16.8, 7 td's) despite needing surgery for a double hernia most of the season. With fellow rookie Tandon Doss not quite physically ready due to offseason surgery, the Ravens picked up veteran Lee Evans from JAX for a 4th RD DC to be their #3 WR. However, Evans suffered an early-season ankle injury which limited him to 9 games and just 4 receptions (18.5). Evans returned in a larger role for the playoffs but his failure to corral the possible game-winning td pass in the end zone sealed his future with the Ravens as he was let go in March. Doss is expected to take over the #3 job. Ed Dickson inherited the starting TE role and made a nice 1-2 punch with Dennis Pitta in 2-TE sets as they finished the #4 and #5 receivers, respectively. This year BAL took Miami's Tommy Streeter in the 6th RD. At 6'5" 215 with 4.4 speed, he has the physical tools to be an ideal jump-ball receiver and the Ravens will look to use him in goal line packages. While BAL doesn't have the flashiest receiving corps around, Smith could develop into that dynamic breakout WR the organization has been looking for.

OFFENSIVE LINE - In 2009 with a new center and a rookie RT, the Ravens still finished with the #5 rush offense (138, 4.7) but also finished 20th with 36 sacks allowed. In 2010, the Ravens dipped to 14th averaging 114 ypg (3.8) while the sacks climbed to 40 (23rd). Jared Gaither was expected to be the #1 RT but a training camp back injury caused him to miss the entire season. The Ravens were forced to shift Marshal Yanda over from RG and he did a serviceable job playing out of position. The Ravens were impressed by the strong rookie season of Michael Oher and moved him from RT to "The Blind Side" LT job full-time in his 2nd year. Oher struggled a bit at LT however and the Ravens hedged their bets in 2011 by picking up Bryant McKinnie to play LT which allowed Oher to return to his previous RT spot and Yanda to RG. McKinnie was cut by the Vikings in 2011 after showing up at training camp pushing 390 lbs. He was able to get down to 360 during the season and the staff was generally pleased with his play. While he turns 33 during this season, he reported to the team's offseason conditioning program and is committed to being leaner and quicker in 2012. LG Ben Grubbs is a very physical player who moves well in the run game, but suffered a nagging ankle injury in 2011's opener which caused him to miss 6 games. The Ravens filled the LG job with waiver wire pickup Andre Gurode and the running game's effectiveness suffered until Grubbs returned for the season's second half. The Ravens improved their rush numbers to #10 (125 ypg, 4.3) while cutting the sacks to 33 (#12). Continuity has been important as C Matt Birk, Yanda and Oher have started every game for the last 3 years. This year Grubbs signed with the Saints in free agency but all 4 linemen who started all 16 games a season ago return. The LG spot is likely to be a battle between 2011's 3rd RD DC Jah Reid and this year's #2 DC Kelechi Osemele who played LT for Iowa St. This line will continue to be among the league's most physical units.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - The Ravens have now finished in the Top 5 of the rush defense charts for 6 consecutive seasons (Top 10 L9Y). While they surrendered 93 ypg (3.4) in '09 to rank 5th in the league, their impressive record of not allowing a 100-yard rusher for 39 straight games was snapped. In 2010 they permitted 3 rushers to go over the century mark but finished 5th yet again allowing 94 ypg (3.9). The key to the Ravens' defense is their ability to seamlessly transition between the 4-3 and 3-4. Haloti Ngata is the DL's focal point as he can line up at any of the spots and it's not uncommon to see him play DE in the 4-3. He lost 25 lbs and began 2011 on a tear until suffering a quad injury which bothered him the rest of the year. He still earned All-Pro honors for a fourth straight season while becoming one of the league's highest paid defensive players. NT Terrence Cody only had 13 tackles as a rookie in 2010 and there were questions about his nearly 400 lb frame and work ethic going into the 2011 season. GM Ozzie Newsome predicted he would be the most improved player on the team and Cody proved it by slimming down to 335 lbs and becoming the run-plugging NT the Ravens' defense requires. Cody's backup Brandon McKinney moved on to IND in FA this offseason and as a replacement the Ravens signed former Redskin Ma'ake Kemoeatu who sat out 2011 due to Achilles and shoulder injuries. Run-stuffer Cory Redding manned the other DE spot but he also moved on to the Colts in the offseason. Rookie 5th RD pick Pernell McPhee turned out to be the kind of mid-to-late round prize that the Ravens' front office specializes in uncovering. McPhee was used as an interior rusher in passing situations finishing 2nd on the team with 6 sacks in limited action. He's expected to be more of a three-down player in 2012 while splitting snaps with 3rd year DE Arthur Jones. The Ravens added Ryan McBean from DEN via FA but he must sit out the first 3 games of the season due to a suspension. McBean had 33 tkls and 4 sacks with 3 starts for the Broncos last year. BAL moved up to the #2 rush defense in '11 allowing 92.6 ypg (3.5). With a healthy Ngata and emerging talents in Cody and McPhee, expect the Ravens to extend their Top 5 rush defense streak for another year.

LINEBACKERS - One of the strengths of the Ravens' franchise is their ability to find and develop their own LB's which has given their defense continuity as they've cycled through DC's. BAL has finished as the NFL's 3rd stingiest defense for the last 4 years running allowing just 15.2 ppg in '08, 16.3 in '09, 16.9 in '10 and 16.6 last year. That streak may be tested in 2012 as they will have their 3rd DC in the last 3 years in Dean Pees who won't be dealt a full hand as the reigning NFL Defensive MVP Terrell Suggs' Achilles injury is expected to cause him to miss most of the season. Amazingly, 37-year-old Ray Lewis is still better than most of the league's ILB's. He finished as the team's #1 tkl'r (95) in 2011 despite missing 4 games with turf toe which ended his personal streak of 5 straight seasons with at least 100 tackles. The other ILB is Jameel McClain who is a two-year starter and finished as the #2 tkl'r. McClain is often substituted on pass downs as he lacks the explosiveness to get to the QB. Getting to the QB of course is Suggs' forte as he rebounded after a disappointing 2009 (4.5 sks) season by dropping 20 lbs and finishing 2010 with 11 sacks. Last year he took his game to another level with 14 sacks which tied for 5th in the league while finishing as the team's #5 tkl'r. Jarret Johnson, a reliable run stopper, was the other OLB and finished as the #8 tkl'r. Dannell Ellerbe capably filled in for Lewis with 3 starts and was re-signed this offseason as the primary ILB backup. Brendon Ayanbadejo is a quality special teamer who can spell a starter for 2 or 3 drives. Paul Kruger had 5.5 sacks in a backup role in 2011 and lined up in Suggs' place during the OTA's. He's expected to compete for the Rush OLB job with another former 2nd RD pick Sergio Kindle. Kindle missed his entire rookie year in 2010 due to an off-field injury which caused hearing loss and after playing in just 2 gms in 2011, he has much to prove. In the draft BAL added Alabama All-American Courtney Upshaw, who is expected to replace Johnson at OLB after he signed with the Chargers in FA. For the first time in a while this unit has a few question marks especially without one of the best players in the NFL.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - The Ravens' secondary was tabbed as one of their few weaknesses entering the 2010 season as Pro Bowl FS Ed Reed began the year on the PUP list and there was little experience behind him. Over the final 10 games though Reed snagged 8 int's to lead the NFL. While the Ravens finished 21st in pass defense at 225 ypg, they only allowed 6.4 ypa with a 22-19 ratio to finish #5 in opponents' QBR for 2010. Last year BAL took CB Jimmy Smith in the 1st RD which helped offset the FA losses of Fabian Washington and Josh Wilson. In camp Smith competed in a group for the CB jobs with 2010 starter Chris Carr, Cary Williams, Lardarius Webb and Domonique Foxworth. Willliams and Webb won the jobs while Smith was injured on the KO of the opener and missed four games. Webb led the Ravens in int (5) and impressed the staff playing through a late-season toe injury. Williams led the secondary in tkls (78) but was inconsistent at times while also playing through a late-season hip injury. Smith made three impressive starts while Webb was banged up and will compete with Williams for the job in 2012. After a career year in 2010, Dawan Landry signed with JAX via FA leaving the SS spot up for grabs between Tom Zbikowski and Bernard Pollard. Zbikowski won the job as a time share but suffered a concussion vs the Jets which forced him to sit out two games. Pollard then took over and while pass coverage has never been his strong suit, he's still one of the best in the box. Reed had his eighth All-Pro season even through his int's plummeted to 3. The Ravens finished with the NFL's #4 pass defense allowing 196.2 ypg (53.8%) with an 11-15 ratio and the opponents' 68.8 QBR led the league. This year the Ravens let Carr, Foxworth, Zbikowski and backup safety/special teamer Haruki Nakamura go in the offseason. In FA they signed for Bears CB/S Corey Graham and Cardinals S Sean Considine primarily for their work as special teamers. In the draft they tabbed Cal Poly CB Asa Jackson in the 5th RD but he's also expected to be more of a dedicated special teamer. With all the starters back this looks to be one of the NFL's best secondaries yet again.

SPECIAL TEAMS - With HC John Harbaugh having come up in the NFL coaching ranks as a special teams coach it was a surprise to see BAL finish 21st in our special teams rankings in his rookie season of 2008. They rebounded nicely in 2009 coming in 5th thanks to lockdown coverage units. The Ravens finished #12 in 2010 with K Billy Cundiff earning the first Pro Bowl bid of his career converting on 26-29 kicks (89.7%) and tying the NFL record for TB's in a season with 40. P Sam Koch was solid with a 39.2 net (T-4th) and 39 punts inside the 20 (2nd). David Reed led the NFL in KR average (29.3, 1 td) while PR Webb was #15 (9.5). While the PR coverage unit allowed 8.1 ypr (#11), the KR coverage finished with the league's worst mark at 26.0 ypr. Everyone returned last season but the Ravens shockingly fell to #29 so perhaps it's not a surprise that their season ended in the AFC Championship Game on a missed chip-shot FG. For the season Cundiff hit a career best 28 FG's on 37 att's with a long of 51 (just 1-6 from 50+) but his accuracy tailed off down the stretch due to a calf injury. He did total 44 TB on KO's but with the new KO rules in place, that was #7 in the league. Koch avg'd 46.5 ypp (t-11th) but his net of 38.6 was tied for 22nd. KR Reed's 29.7 avg was actually higher than his rookie year but he had fumble issues and was benched before being lost for the playoffs with a torn ACL. Webb improved his PR avg to 10.0. The coverage units were the league's worst allowing 29.2 on KR's with 1 td and 11.9 on PR's with 2 td's. The Ravens addressed the special teams shortcomings in FA with the signing of Bears Pro Bowler Corey Graham and in the draft with the selection of Asa Jackson who avg'd 18.0 on PR's and 25.8 on KR's at Cal Poly last year. Everyone returns again and this should be one of the NFL's most improved special teams units.

Head Coach - John Harbaugh, 5th year
Harbaugh is the 3rd HC in Ravens history and took over after 10 years in PHI (ST '98-'06 and DB's '07). He is the 1st NFL HC to win a playoff game in each of his first 4 seasons.

Offensive Coordinator - Cam Cameron, 5th year
Cameron was the Dolphins' HC in 2007 after being the Chargers' OC from '02-'06. He has 3 Top 10 finishes in his 9 years as an NFL OC. Cameron also served as BAL's QB coach in '11.

Quarterbacks - Jim Caldwell, 1st year
Caldwell spent '09-'11 as the Colts' HC. Previously he served as IND's QB coach from '02-'08 tutoring Peyton Manning during 3 of his MVP campaigns.

Running Backs - Wilbert Montgomery, 5th year
Montgomery worked for the Rams from '97-'05 as a RB coach & TE coach. He was previously the Lions' RB coach from '06-'07.

Wide Receivers - Jim Hostler, 5th year
Hostler worked as SF's OC in '07 after being their QB coach from '05-'06. He was the Jets' QB coach in '03 and WR coach in '04 after working as an asst for NO from '01-'02.

Tight Ends - Wade Harman, 14th year
Harman is the last remaining coach from BAL's SB XXXV team. He has been the Ravens' TE coach since '99.

Offensive Line - Andy Moeller, 5th year
Moeller was the Ravens' assistant OL coach from '08-'10 after spending the '02-'07 seasons as Michigan's OL coach.

Defensive Coordinator - Dean Pees, 1st year, 3rd overall
BAL continues their tradition of filling the DC spot by promoting from within as Pees is the Ravens' 3rd DC in the last 3 years. He was the ILB cch here in '10-'11. Pees worked for the Patriots from '04-'09 and was their DC from '06-'09.

Defensive Line - Clarence Brooks, 8th year
Brooks was retained by Harbaugh and guides a unit which has finished in the NFL's Top 5 in rush defense for 6 straight yrs.

Linebackers - Ted Monachino, 3rd year
Monachino has served as the BAL's OLB coach the L/2 ssns including LY when Terrell Suggs was named the NFL's DPOY.

Inside Linebackers - Don Martindale, 1st year
Martindale was hired to replace Dean Pees who was promoted to DC. Martindale sat out the '11 season after spending the '10 season as DEN's DC. In '09 he was the Broncos' LB coach after serving the same role in OAK from '04-'08.

Secondary Coach - Teryl Austin, 2nd year
Austin spent '10 as the Florida Gators' DC. He has 7 years of experience in the NFL as a secondary coach between ARZ ('07-'09) and SEA ('03-'06).

Asst HC/Spec Tms Coordinator - Jerry Rosburg, 5th year
Rosburg is a career special teams coach who served as the Browns' STC from '01-'06 followed by a stint in ATL in '07. He joined the Ravens in '08 and his units have four Top 10 finishes in our rankings.

OVERVIEW - The Ravens have enjoyed 4 straight playoff appearances under Harbaugh with 3 seasons of double-digit wins. Coming into 2011 the most frequent criticism of Harbaugh was that he was only 2-6 vs the Steelers with 2 losses coming in the playoffs. The Ravens dislodged the thorn from their sides quickly emphatically sweeping the season series with Pittsburgh for the first time s/'06 and effectively leading the AFC North from wire to wire. OC Cameron took some heat for finishing 22nd in total offense for 2010 (322.9) and dismissing QB coach Jim Zorn after Flacco had the best season of his career. Despite massive personnel turnover in the receiving corps, Flacco was at his best in the big ones with the 2 wins over the Steelers and the near miss in the AFC Championship Game. RB Rice continued to prove that he's among the most versatile RB's in the game and WR Torrey Smith looked like a future star as the offense finished #15 (338.7). For most teams, being on their 4th DC in 5 seasons would be a major problem as Chuck Pagano moved on to become Indianapolis' HC. However, the Ravens once again promoted from within as Pees was plugged into the role after serving as the ILB coach for the last 2 seasons. The scheme will remain the same although Pees was dealt his first big challenge in the offseason when NFL Defensive Player of the Year Suggs tore his Achilles tendon. Suggs will begin the season on the PUP list but has said that he will return in November. The defense remains among the NFL's elite with 9 straight years in the league's Top 10 in total defense (#3 in 2011, 288.9). The special teams unit's shocking ineptitude (#29 finish) has been addressed in the offseason and with the talent on hand it would be surprising if the unit is not among the league's most improved in 2012. The schedule is treacherous with nationally televised games in 3 of their first 4 contests including the highly anticipated rematch of the AFC Championship Game against the Patriots in Week 3. After the bye the Ravens play 4 of the next 6 on the road including back-to-back contests at Pittsburgh and San Diego followed by a home game against their hated rival Steelers (2 meetings in 3 weeks). Their final 2 home games feature back-to-back visits from the Manning brothers before ending the season on the road vs the Bengals. Harbaugh is the first coach in NFL history to win playoff games in each of his first four seasons and answered his critics by getting over the Steelers hurdle last year. There are some factors pointing down TY but they are one of the favorites to win the AFC.

CINCINNATI BENGALS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - At the end of the 2010 season Carson Palmer, the one time heart and soul of the CIN offense, announced that he would rather retire than play another snap with the Bengals. With the lockout keeping the team from contacting Palmer, they had no choice but to select TCU's Andy Dalton (#2DC). New OC Jay Gruden believed that Dalton was the best fit in the rookie class (Newton, Locker, Gabbert, Ponder) for his version of the West Coast Offense. With no proven veteran on the roster, the Bengals also signed journeyman Bruce Gradkowski to push Dalton in camp while providing solid leadership and knowledge at the position. Dalton earned the starting nod and actually did well in his first 2 gms against CLE and DEN with a 100+ passer rating in both. He did have a few struggles throughout the season against some of the elite defenses in the league but looking back at his complete 16 sts as a first year QB, the Bengals front office and coaching staff have to be feeling pretty good as Dalton became the first rookie in NFL history to throw for 20 td's while winning 8 or more gms. He was also named an alternate to the Pro Bowl and along with fellow first year teammate AJ Green, they became the first rookie QB-WR duo to be on the same Pro Bowl roster in league history. On the year Dalton threw for 3,398 yards (58%) and a 20-13 ratio. Gradkowski saw minimal action on the year with just 18 pass att's but the Bengals also earned a win off the field with this position dealing Palmer to the Raiders prior to the trade deadline for a pair of high draft picks. Gradkowski returns to serve as the #2 for 2012 and while it's safe to say that Dalton exceeded expectations leading the Bengals to the playoffs in 2011, look for him to improve on his footwork and mechanics as now opposing defenses have a better idea of what he brings to the field.

RUNNING BACKS - The reality of 2009 was that the team put the offense on the legs of Cedric Benson, who powered his way to 1,251 yards (4.2), the 8th most in the league (301 carries). In 2010 due to the increased profile of the passing game the Bengals got away from what they did best. While Benson actually had more rushing att's than the year prior (321), he was held to 55 or less yards rushing in 5 of the final 6 gms, but still managed his first B2B 1,000 yard rushing years of his career (1,111). Benson re-signed with the team in 2011 in the hopes that new OC Gruden would lean heavily on him to get the Bengals back into playoff contention. While Benson again surpassed the 1,000 yard barrier (1,067), coaches were hoping that he would become more of a weapon in the passing game in the West Coast scheme but instead he showed dissatisfaction with the direction of the offense and saw his receptions drop to just 15 the entire season (28 catches in 2010). As the year wore on it was apparent that Gruden was relying less on Benson (just 6 gms of 20+ carries, 273 on the year) and attempting to involve Bernard Scott more in the gameplan with him receiving nearly double the amount of carries from the year prior (112, 3.4). CIN did see some overall improvement in the general run game (27th in 2010, 19th in 2011) due to the solid blocking of FB Chris Pressley who did a good job opening holes for the combo of Benson and Scott. Brian Leonard also served as a hybrid RB/FB but his contributions have been felt more in the passing game as the 3rd down option (20+ rec each of the L3Y). While Benson was allowed to move on in FA, the Bengals were not 100% on Scott as the featured back heading into 2012 as he has shown more productivity as a change-of-pace option. With that being said, CIN opted to bring in BenJarvus Green-Ellis to assume the starting duties here after rushing for a combined 1,600+ yards (24 td) the past 2 seasons with the Patriots. Battling for the #3 spot this year are 4th year pro Cedric Peerman who saw most of his field action on special teams in 2011 and rookie 6th rounder Dan Herron who saw his draft value drop some at Ohio State LY due to a 5-game suspension at the start the year. The Bengals are clearly moving away from the power-rushing game as they fully transition into Gruden's WCO. Green-Ellis was serviceable with NE but failed to establish himself as a premier receiving option. Look for a RB-by-committee approach for the Bengals in 2012.

RECEIVERS - Things didn't look to optimistic for this unit heading into 2011 as not only did the Bengals allow both Chad Ochocinco and Terrell Owens to move on, they also installed an inexperienced rookie QB behind center and were transitioning to a new offensive scheme. Despite the previously mentioned departures, this was a very talented group of young receivers led by rookie #1DC AJ Green who excelled in his first year in CIN breaking the team's rookie record for 100 yard receiving gms with 4 and leading all NFL rookies with 65 catches and 1,057 yards (7 td's). The 2nd leading receiver a year ago was 4th year pro Jerome Simpson who posted 50 catches for 725 yards despite off-the-field issues. After a 600 yard rookie campaign, 2nd year pro Jordan Shipley saw his season come to an end prematurely as he suffered an ACL tear in week 2 against DEN. In Shipley's absence, Andre Caldwell earned more time, pulling in 37 receptions. The second biggest weapon in this unit behind Green is without question TE Jermaine Gresham who surpassed Tony McGee's 1995 franchise TE record of 55 catches with 56 of his own while also pulling in 6 td's. Gresham missed 2 gms with injury LY and backing him up for a 2nd consecutive year will be former Packer Donald Lee, who recorded 575 yards in 2007 with GB but has been used more in 2-TE sets over the past 2 seasons. While Simpson (MIN) and Caldwell (DEN) moved on via FA, everyone else returns including Shipley plus the Bengals invested #3, #4 and #5DC's on WR Mohamed Sanu, TE Orson Charles and WR Marvin Jones. Sanu broke Larry Fitzgerald's Big East record for receptions in a season LY with Rutgers (115) while Jones is a deep play threat that was constantly overshadowed in Cal by other weapons in the Golden Bear offense. Charles may have been a steal as his draft stock took a hit (projected 2nd rounder) after an off-the-field issue. He'll look to eventually lineup alongside Gresham. Green's 11 receptions of 35+ yards in 2011 were the most in the league and also the most by a rookie since Randy Moss recorded 14 back in 1998. If the Bengals are able to find a suitable #2 option to compliment Green, this unit could flourish in 2012.

OFFENSIVE LINE - The Bengals OL did a good job in pass protection for 2010 as it came in 8th with 28 sacks allowed

(1 every 21.1 att's) while starting 76 of 80 gms together. The drop to 27th in rushing (95 ypg, 3.6) in '10 however was more of a function of play selection and the lack of impact play at RT and limited range by Bobbie Williams at RG. While C Kyle Cook, LG Nate Livings and LT Andrew Whitworth were all able to remain in the starting lineup for all 16 gms a season ago, the RG spot wasn't as fortunate as an injury and suspension to Williams saw 3 different players see time at the position. With the instillation of the new WCO, the unit saw both their pass protection and rushing numbers improve from the year prior despite having a rookie QB under center. CIN finished #19 in rushing (111 ypg, 3.9) while only allowing a sack once every 21.4 pass att's (#4). This group loses 3 OG's heading into 2012 in Livings, Mike McGlynn (4 st '11) and Williams (9 sts '11). Filling the starting spots TY will be FA signee LG Travelle Wharton who started all 16 gms for the Panthers in 2 of the L/3 years and rookie #1DC pick Kevin Zeitler who brings that tough and nasty Wisconsin program tenacity to the RG position. It is also worth mentioning that while former 1st rounder RT Andre Smith did miss 2 gms a season ago with injury, he continues to improve upon his conditioning (lowest weight ever w/CIN LY) as well as his run blocking and pass protection, giving him the edge over Anthony Collins heading into 2012. Dennis Roland and Clint Boling round out the rest of the 2-deep. While the OL may surrender a few more sacks facing a slew of good defenses in and out of their division this season, their rushing numbers could climb into the upper half of the NFL rankings in the 2nd year of the offensive scheme.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - DC Mike Zimmer has done an excellent job with the defense since taking over in 2008. In 2010 #2DC Carlos Dunlap was inserted for an injured Antwan Odom and became the first rookie to lead the Bengals in sacks since 1990. In fact, Dunlap's 9.5 sacks fell just a half sack short of tying for tops among NFL rookies (Ndamukong Suh). The CIN rush defense did slip some however, finishing 19th in the league (115, 4.4) a season after landing at #7 with 98 ypg (3.9). While Dunlap was the team's most consistent player in QB pressures again LY, injuries in camp and late in the season saw his production drop to just 4.5 sacks. Robert Geathers, Michael Johnson and Frostee Rucker shared most of the starting duties at the 2 DE spots with Jonathan Fanene also seeing limited starting action while recording a career high 6.5 sacks. NT Domata Peko was the team's top run stopper while fellow starting DT Geno Atkins nearly broke the team record for sacks by an interior DL with 7.5. Pat Sims saw limited time before being placed on IR with an ankle injury. The Bengals improved to #10 in the NFL in rush defense allowing 105 ypg (3.9) while recording a sack once every 12 pass att's (#4). The unit loses Rucker and Fanene for the upcoming season but also stockpiled depth with a trio of FA's (Jamaal Anderson, Derrick Harvey and Nick Hayden joined in Dec LY) as well as investing #2 and #3DC's on DT's Devon Still and Brandon Thompson. With a healthier Dunlap getting back to what he does best in chasing the QB, along with a solid interior presence, this group is just as solid as a year ago and should find themselves in the upper half of the league again in both the rush D and sack rankings.

LINEBACKERS - The Bengals made some changes to this unit last season after fielding the same LB unit the previous 2 years. Rey Maualuga slid over to the starting MLB role after spending his first 2 years at SLB and CIN brought in 2 FA's to start on the outside in Manny Lawson and Thomas Howard. Lawson was a huge upgrade in pass coverage as he matched up a lot better against opposing TE's but that was negated by the lack of pass rush he was able to create. Howard was expected to come off the bench for the Bengals but after Keith Rivers was unable to play due to a wrist inj, he wound up starting 15 gms on the ssn and led the team in tkls while delivering arguably the best performance among the group. Maualuga would have easily finished as the #1 tkl'r (88) but he missed 3 gms with inj and struggled while defending the run. Dan Skuta played fairly well in place of Maualuga but his significant contributions are felt more with the ST's. After outplaying Rivers at times in prior seasons it was expected that Brandon Johnson would see more action in '11 but surprisingly his playing time was cut with the solid performances out of the st'rs and he was let go TY. 2011 #3DC Dontay Moch was also supposed to be the heir apparent to one of the OLB spots but he was inactive all season due to a slew of nagging injuries and will miss the first 4 gms TY (substance abuse). After a less than expected season in 2010 that saw CIN allow 24.7 ppg, the Bengal defense improved to 20.2 a year ago. Rivers was traded to the Giants prior to the draft and the Bengals opted to re-sign Lawson to another season so basically everyone who saw action with this group a yr ago returns and another improvement in the ppg allowed should be expected.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - After finishing 14th in the NFL in pass defense in 2010 the Bengals were dealt a solid blow as CB Jonathan Joseph decided to move on to HOU in FA. CIN didn't waste much time finding his replacement in Ohio native and former Buckeye Nate Clements who had been a solid cover CB in his long career with the 49ers and Bills. Clements provided solid veteran leadership although there were some signs of decline in the latter part of the season in his pass coverage. Leon Hall has become a steady performer in the secondary for the Bengals but the team suffered a significant loss in Week 9 LY when he landed on IR with injury. Adam (Pacman) Jones filled in during Hall's absence after he too dealt with injuries to start the Year (PUP for the first 6). In his 2nd year with CIN FS Reggie Nelson had problems handling his responsibilities on deep routes early but adjusted by year's end. SS Chris Crocker was good against the run but also struggled in pass protection and was allowed to move on following the season giving Taylor Mays (traded from SF LY) a shot to inherit the starting duties for 2012. Filling out the depth this season are 10 year veteran Terence Newman who became a salary cap casualty with the Cowboys this offseason and 2012 #1DC Dre Kirkpatrick, who will be groomed to be the eventual replacement for Clements. Despite seeing their offseason cut short by the lockout while replacing Joseph and dealing with the loss of Hall for the 2H of the year, this unit finished #9 in the NFL in pass defense but allowed a poor 21-10 ratio (#23). A healthy return by Hall and potentially more production out of the SS position and 2-deep could see a solid finish with an improved ratio in 2012.

SPECIAL TEAMS - Entering camp a season ago it was hard to guess on how well Mike Nugent would do as he was coming off of an ACL injury less than 8 months prior and was forced to rehab without the Bengal trainers due to lockout restrictions. Nugent appeared fully recovered entering the season and actually began the year connecting on 10 straight FG's. He was the NFL's most accurate kicker for a good portion of the year before missing 3 FG's over the regular season's final 2 gms. While Kevin Huber increased his punting production from 2010's performance (44.2 avg, 39.2 net), it appears that HC Lewis would like to see more improvement. The Bengals brought in Brandon Tate to serve as the primary KR and PR after he was released by NE prior to last season. Tate would avg 23.8 (T-16th) on KR and 10.6 (T-12th) on PR for the year while setting the franchise record for combined returns on the season and appears to be in command of those duties again in 2012. Nugent is another year removed from his injury and the Bengals should continue to improve here after finishing #10 last year in our special teams rankings.

Head Coach - Marvin Lewis, 9th year
Lewis is the longest tenured and winningest HC in Bengals franchise history, setting the mark (69 wins) last year.
Offensive Coordinator - Jay Gruden, 2nd year
Gruden had a successful career in the AFL as a QB/HC. Prior to CIN he spent 2 ssns in the UFL including '10 as the HC.
Quarterbacks - Ken Zampese, 9th year
Zampese joined the Bengals in 2003 after spending the prior 3 seasons working with Mike Martz in the Rams' offense.
Running Backs - Jim Anderson, 28th year
Anderson has spent his entire NFL career w/CIN since joining the team in 1984. He has worked with 5 different HC's.
Wide Receivers - James Urban, 2nd year
Prior to the Bengals, Urban spent 7 seasons on the coaching staff of the Eagles including the final 2 as the QB coach.
Tight Ends - Jonathan Hayes, 10th year
Prior to joining the Bengals, Hayes spent 4 seasons as an TE and special teams coach with the Oklahoma Sooners.
Asst Head Coach/Off Line - Paul Alexander, 18th year
Alexander has been with Cincinnati since 1994 working with the OL. He was promoted to asst HC in 2003.
Defensive Coordinator - Mike Zimmer, 5th year
Zimmer is a DB coach by trade and has been an NFL DC since 2000 with DAL ('00-'06), ATL ('07) and here ('08-present).
Defensive Line - Jay Hayes, 9th year
Prior to joining the Bengals in 2003, Hayes was a ST's coach at both Pittsburgh ('99-'01) and Minnesota ('02).
Linebackers- Paul Guenther, 8th year
This is Guenther's first season working with the Bengal LB's after spending his first 7 yrs coaching with the DB's & ST's.
Defensive Backs - Mark Carrier, 1st year
Carrier is entering his 7th year as an NFL position coach. He spent the L/2 years with the New York Jets as a DL coach.
Special Teams Coach - Darrin Simmons, 9th year
Prior to joining the Bengals' coaching staff in 2003, Simmons spent 3 years as the special teams coach of the Panthers.

OVERVIEW - After a disastrous 2010 that saw the Bengals go from a 2009 playoff berth to a 4-12 season, Marvin Lewis was given one more year to attempt to revive a team that had not won a playoff game since 1990. The lockout interfered with the negotiations to potentially get Carson Palmer to return which resulted in the Bengals using a 2nd round DC in an attempt to fill the position. The Bengals did pull a major coup by trading Palmer to OAK for a 2012 1st RD DC (used on CB Dre Kirkpatrick) and a 2013 conditional 2nd RD pick. The emergence of a pair of rookies (Andy Dalton and AJ Green) energized the offense and saw the Bengals jump out to a 6-2 start. CIN would go on to tie an NFL record overcoming double digit HT deficits on 3 separate occasions during the season while also making HC Marvin Lewis the winningest HC in the history of the Bengals' franchise. Despite a loss to the Ravens in the season finale, CIN backdoored themselves into the playoffs becoming the 3rd AFC North squad to reach the 2011 postseason as the final Wildcard team which set up a rematch against the Texans who had delivered a comeback victory of their own less than a month earlier at Paul Brown Stadium. HOU would control most of the game outgaining CIN by a 340-300 clip and forcing 3 Bengal TO's. CIN again failed to register a playoff victory for the 22nd consecutive season. Things may be looking up again for the Bengals in 2012 as LY's 9-7 finish in a tough division is an affirmation that things appear to be on track. DC Mike Zimmer did wonders yet again with the defense as they allowed just 316 ypg (7th in NFL) and he returns again TY after getting an interview for the vacated Dolphins HC position. The offense also looks to be in good shape as they are now in the 2nd year of OC Jay Gruden's WCO and saw some solid potential out of their younger players and good pass protection from the OL. The one thing that was missing for the Bengals a year ago was crowd support as the avg attendance of 49,251 was easily the worst in the league. CIN faces a much tougher schedule for 2012 (jumps to 7th vs 20th) and they are a bit inexperienced at WR. They may be one of the teams that has an improved roster at the end of the year but is forced to sit out the playoffs.

CLEVELAND BROWNS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - No NFL team has ridden the QB carousel as many times as the Browns have since they resumed operations in 1999. Jake Delhomme was brought in as a stop-gap starter for 2010 but he played in just 5 (149 att) due to a nagging ankle injury. Seneca Wallace took over in week 2 but he too suffered an ankle injury and the Colt McCoy era began earlier than expected. The rookie 3rd round DC became the 16th QB to start a game for CLE since 1999 and he guided the team to back-to-back wins against NE and NO in his 2nd and 3rd career starts. On the year McCoy hit 61% and though questions about his size and arm strength remained, new HC Pat Shurmur anointed him as the starter for 2011. Delhomme departed while Wallace signed an extension to return as the backup. McCoy became the 10th different opening-day QB starter since the Browns' return but struggled in Shurmur's offense throwing for over 250 yds in just 1 game with his QBR of 74.6 tied for 25th in the league. With an extremely disappointing run game and little speed or experience at the WR spot, the Browns had just 32 passes of 20+ yds (t-#30) including 6 of 40+ (t-#26). McCoy's season unexpectedly ended when he suffered a concussion on a helmet-to-helmet hit run play in a week 14 Thursday night game at Pittsburgh. Surprisingly, he returned to the field to throw an int after sitting out 2 plays which ignited new NFL sideline protocols after the CLE medical staff failed to administer a concussion test. Wallace started the final 3 games avg just 183 ypg (50.5%) with a 2-2 ratio as the Browns dropped all 3. After an attempt to trade up to #2 to draft Robert Griffin III was thwarted by WAS, the Browns took Oklahoma St's Brandon Weeden with their 2nd pick of the 1st RD. While Weeden's age (29 in October) was viewed in a negative light by many, the Browns viewed it as a positive for their young team. Weeden has the size (6'4") and arm strength that McCoy lacks and Shurmur and GM Tom Heckert have gone on record as saying that they expect him to start right away. As of presstime McCoy and Wallace remain on the roster as the backups. Barring injury, Weeden is likely to become the 17th different QB to start for the Browns on September 9th.

QB BRANDON WEEDEN #3 6-4 220 Age: 29 Rookie
1st round, 22nd pick out of Oklahoma St. OSU's career passing leader. 2x All-Big 12. Spent 5Y playing baseball.
Colt McCoy #12 6-1 215 Age: 26 3rd Yr (13/13)
#3DC CLE '10 (Texas) - 2733 pass yd (57.2%), 14-11 ratio, 5.9 ypa, 74.6 QBR, 212 rush yd (3.5), 32 sk LY. 8 st, 8 gm, 1576 pass yd (60.8%), 6-9 ratio, 7.1 ypa, 74.5 QBR, 136 rush yd (4.9), 23 sk as a rookie in '10.

RUNNING BACKS - Entering 2010 the Browns' leading rusher over the previous 11 seasons averaged just 804 yards (3.7) with 4 rushing td. The 3 seasons the Browns fielded a 1,000 yard rusher came from FA's Reuben Droughns and Jamal Lewis. CLE invested a 2nd RD DC on Montario Hardesty in '10 but he tore his ACL and spent his rookie campaign on IR. The trade of QB Brady Quinn to DEN, however, yielded Peyton Hillis. After struggling in the Broncos' system Hillis was reborn in CLE, rushing for 1,177 yards (4.4) and 11 td's while also finishing #2 on the team with 61 rec's. Hillis' hard-running resulted in 8 lost fumbles in '10 and a series of small injuries. His bruising style excited the fan base enough that he won the vote as the Madden 2012 cover boy. Hillis' 2011 season was a textbook example of the "Madden Curse" as he struggled with injuries which caused him to miss 6 games while also garnering headlines highlighting his quirky behavior in the midst of trying to attain a long-term deal with the Browns. With questions about his commitment to the organization lingering, Hillis ran for 100 yds just once on the season finishing as the #1 rusher but with just 587 yds (3.6) with 3 td's. Hardesty also missed 6 games and finished #3 (266, 3.0) while midseason waiver wire pickup Chris Ogbonnaya was #2 (334, 4.6) thanks to back-to-back strong efforts vs STL (90, 4.7) and JAX (115, 5.5) when Hillis and Hardesty were both out. The 3rd down back in 2011 was expected to be Brandon Jackson who ran for 703 yds and caught 43 passes in 2010 for the Packers but he was placed on IR prior to the season with turf toe. Rookie Owen Marecic was used in the blocking FB role but Shurmur used 2 TE sets often which is why the team chose Alabama FB/TE Brad Smelley in the 7th RD of this year's draft. Smelley was the lead blocker for CLE's #1 pick Trent Richardson and also is versatile enough to play on the line of scrimmage. After Hillis signed with the Chiefs in FA, the Browns traded up 1 slot to #3 to secure the talents of Richardson. Richardson became the first RB to be taken in the draft's top 3 since Reggie Bush was taken 2nd overall in 2006. The Adrian Peterson comparisons are inevitable thanks to Richardson's powerful physique which is suited to the workhorse role and the fact that Peterson's ex-HC Brad Childress will be calling the plays as CLE's new OC. Hardesty, Ogbonnaya and Jackson are expected to battle for the #2 role in camp. The Browns haven't had a 1,000 yard rusher who was drafted by their organization since 1985 and Richardson will be looking to end that streak.

RECEIVERS - Despite using two 2nd RD DC's on WR's Mohamed Massaquoi and Brian Robiskie in the 2009 draft, the Browns scored only 13 td's through the air in 2010 with 5 of those brought in by the TE's. In fact, the leading WR on the season was Massaquoi who had just 483 yds (13.4), the fewest in the NFL for a #1 WR. Robiskie struggled in his first 2 seasons with injuries and his ability to grasp the system and finished #6 with 310 yds (10.7) and 3 td's. Josh Cribbs' playing time at WR increased and he finished #7 (292, 12.7) while also acting as the Wildcat QB. In 2011 the WR's were still lackluster accounting for 9 of the tm's 16 td rec's with the team's best athlete, Cribbs, accounting for 4 (41 rec, 518 yd). Massaquoi battled a foot injury and finished #4 (384, 12.4). Robiskie, who was hyped as being ready for a breakout year by the staff in Shurmur's West Coast offense, was released after having just 3 rec in 6 games. After trading down in the 1st RD to ATL (who took WR Julio Jones), the Browns snagged Greg Little in the 2nd RD. Little came in a bit rusty after sitting out the entire 2010 college season (susp) and tied for 2nd in the league with 14 drops. He still led the team in receptions (61) and yards (709) as a rookie and the staff has high hopes for him in 2012. TE Benjamin Watson, who led the team in receptions (68) and receiving yards (763) in 2010, dropped to #3 (410, 11.1) LY. Evan Moore (324, 9.5) was the #5 receiver in an offense which regularly uses 2 TE's, however, the position was often called to stay in to block because of the OL struggles. Jordan Cameron and Alex Smith were also in the TE rotation. The Browns' brass surprisingly waited until the 4th RD to address the lack of speed and playmaking ability at WR when they took Travis Benjamin. Benjamin ran a 4.36 40 at the Combine and will compete for time right away for the slot position with Cribbs and UFA Jordan Norwood (268, 11.7). Shurmur has blamed the receiving corps' woes on lackluster QB play so it will be interesting to see if that changes with Weeden under center.

OFFENSIVE LINE - In 2009 the Browns had 3 new OL starters including a rookie C and the front began to gel in the second half of the year finishing #8 in the NFL in rushing ypg (130, 4.2) with 30 sacks allowed (#10). Pro Bowl LT Joe Thomas was joined in Hawaii by 2nd year C Alex Mack in 2010 even though the numbers fell to 103 rush ypg (4.0) which ranked 20th and 36 sacks (#17). The right side was inconsistent with rookie #3DC Shawn Lauvao expected to inherit the RG spot but he made just 1 start due to injuries and off-field issues. RT Tony Pashos landed on IR after 6 games in his 1st season with the Browns. John St Clair took over the starting role but was a constant liability and was eventually let go after the season. Jason Pinkston was drafted in the 5th round in 2011 to provide OT depth but wound up starting all 16 games at LG after long-time starter Eric Steinbach missed the season (back surgery). Pinkston was inconsistent as a rookie but the Browns feel he will continue to develop into a fine player sandwiched between Pro Bowlers. The right side again was shaky with Lauvao starting all 16 games in his 2nd season. Pashos played on a foot that needed surgery and missed 4 games. His replacements were waiver wire pickups Artis Hicks and Oniel Cousins. CLE let Steinbach, Pashos, Hicks and Steve Vallos go this offseason and in the 2nd RD drafted Cal's Mitchell Schwartz who they feel will be an upgrade at the RT job as a rookie. The Browns finished 28th in rushing at just 96 ypg (3.7) while allowing 39 sacks (#18) but feel as though they are building a strong OL through the draft.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - The Browns' best finish in run defense since 1999 is #23, back in 2003 when they allowed 132 ypg (4.6). In 2010 CLE allowed 129 ypg (4.1) placing them 27th in the NFL. With the new coaching regime taking over in 2011 the DL moved to a 4-3 after running a 3-4 for several years. For the first time in franchise history CLE used its top 2 picks on DL's taking DT Phillip Taylor in the 1st RD and DE Jabaal Sheard in the 2nd. Taylor led all rookie DT's with 59 tkl (#7 tkl'r) and 4 sacks in 2011 while his fellow DT starter Ahtyba Rubin was actually the #2 tkl'r (83) with 5 sacks. Sheard was the star leading the team in sacks with 8.5 and forced fumbles (5). Jayme Mitchell started 13 games at the other DE job but was more effective as a situational run stuffer and wasn't re-signed. Waiver wire pickup Emmanuel Stephens and Brian Schaefering filled out the DE rotation while Scott Paxson was the primary backup at DT. While 3 of the 4 jobs are set, the Browns dabbled in FA to get a new DE rotation picking up Bengals run stopping specialist Frostee Rucker and former Eagle pass rusher Juqua Parker. In the draft they also added Cincinnati run stopper DT John Hughes in the 3rd round and Boise St's DT Billy Winn to fill out the DL rotation. Taylor tore his pectoral muscle in May and is expected to miss at least the first half of the season and is likely to be replaced with a rotation consisting of Paxson and the rookies. Despite the highly productive DT duo, the defense ranked 30th LY allowing 147 rush ypg (4.4) with 32 sacks (t-#23). While Taylor's injury stings, this unit should be more productive in the second year of DC Dick Jauron's system.

LINEBACKERS - The constant reconstruction to this unit continued in 2011 as the Browns moved from a 3-4 to a 4-3. After leading the NFL in tackles in 2008 with 154, D'Qwell Jackson missed the final 12 games of '09 and all of '10 with 2 separate injuries. Jackson was finally able to stay healthy in '11 and led the AFC in tackles with 158. Of the 16 LB's the Browns have drafted since '99, Jackson is 1 of 2 to stay with the team for more than 4 years which was addressed in the offseason when he signed a new long-term deal. The OLB's were expected to be Scott Fujita and Chris Gocong. When healthy Fujita is a strong leader but he hasn't played all 16 gms since 2006 missing 13 games combined in his 2 seasons with CLE. With Fujita out (hand), Gocong slid over to his SLB role and Kaluka Maiava became the starting WLB for the final 4. Both players battled through injuries late but look to open 2012 as the starters as Fujita is suspended the first 3 games in connection with the Saints Bounty scandal. CLE addressed depth concerns in the draft taking Nevada ILB James-Michael Johnson in the 4th round and Texas OLB Emmanuel Acho in the 6th. While the ppg allowed improved from 20.8 (#13) in '10 to 19.2 (#5) in 2011, this is still a relatively inexperienced unit without Fujita.

SLB SCOTT FUJITA #99 6-5 250 Age: 33 11th Yr (10/10)

DEFENSIVE BACKS - Since the Browns returned in 1999 they have allowed 43 more td's than int. Cleveland used their 1st and 2nd round picks in 2010 to bring in CB Joe Haden and SS TJ Ward then last year Shurmur brought in veteran DC Dick Jauron who has been an NFL coach since 1985 specializing in DB's. Haden led the team with 18 pbu and 6 int while earning some postseason All-Rookie accolades in 2010 but fought through injuries in 2011 causing him to miss one game. While he again led the Browns in pbu (19), he finished the year with 0 int after a few drops. Sheldon Brown has been the group's leader the last 2 years contributing 13 pbu and 2 int in '11 although he was spelled at times late in the season. Another former Eagle Dimitri Patterson and rookie Buster Skrine both saw more action late in the season in a CB rotation and the Browns also added Arizona's Trevin Wade to the unit in this year's draft. The big-hitting Ward led CLE with 123 tackles as a rookie and was on his way to another monster season LY when he suffered a foot injury in the 8th game and was OFY. Usama Young, who had started just 6 games in his pro career, filled in admirably at SS in the second half of the year finishing tied as the #3 tkl'r. FS

Mike Adams was the #6 tackler and led the team in int (3) but he signed with DEN via FA. The FS job is expected to be a battle between Young and Eric Hagg who played the final 10 games of his rookie year after recovering from an Aug knee surgery. CLE's pass defense has improved from #29 in 2009 (245 ypg, 59.5%, 22-10) to #18 in 2010 (221, 60.9%, 26-19) to #2 in Jauron's first season last year (185, 56.5%, 16-9) despite the injuries. This is one of the league's best young secondaries.

SPECIAL TEAMS - After earning the NFL's All-Decade Return Specialist honors heading into 2010, Joshua Cribbs (4 return td's in '09) has been held to 1 td in the last 2 years with opponents kicking away from him. He avg'd just 20.4 on KR (career avg 25.8) and 8.4 on PR's (career avg 10.6) in '10 but boosted those numbers to 25.0 on KR's and 11.4 on PR's last year. Phil Dawson has been the Browns' only kicker since the team returned in 1999. Dawson is a career 83% kicker with 5 seasons of 100+ points. He hit 24-29 FG's in 2011 with a long of 54 but missed two potential game-winners due in part to bad snaps. Nine-year veteran and two-time Pro Bowl LS Ryan Pontbriand was actually released after the 2nd botched snap and replaced with rookie Christian Yount. P Reggie Hodges (#8 NFL- 39.0 net in '10) tore his Achilles in August '11 and was replaced by veteran Brad Maynard whose 36.7 net ranked #34. The KR and PR groups allowed 17.8 (#1) and 7.1 (#5) respectively in 2010 but that fell to 22.9 on KR and 11.7 on PR LY. The unit finished with our #10 ranking in '10 but fell to #24 last year. Hodges returns this year along with Dawson and Cribbs so CLE should be back to its accustomed top 10 finish.

Head Coach - Pat Shurmur, 2nd year
After serving as PHI's TE coach ('99-'01) and QB coach ('02-'08), Shurmur was STL's OC from '09-'10. In '11 he was named the Browns' 13th HC and also served as his own OC but will now hand those duties off to Brad Childress.

Offensive Coordinator - Brad Childress, 1st year
Childress was hired in Jan '12 to take over the play calling from HC Shurmur. He most recently served as the Vikings' HC posting a record of 39-35 from '06-'10. Prior to that he served 7 years on the Eagles' staff including the last 4 as OC ('02-'05).

Quarterbacks - Mark Whipple, 2nd year
After spending 24 years in the collegiate ranks, Whipple's first NFL gig came as the Steelers' QB coach from '04-'06. He was an offensive assistant with Shurmur in '07-'08 in PHI. From '09-'10 he was the OC at Miami, FL before coming here.

Running Backs - Gary Brown, 4th year
Former NFL RB Brown was Rutgers' RB coach in '08 prior to joining the Browns. CLE has slid from 8th to 20th and finally 28th in rushing during his tenure.

Wide Receivers - Mike Wilson, 2nd year
Wilson was the Cardinals' TE coach in 2004 before being moved to their WR coach in 2005- '06. He spent '09-'10 in the UFL with Las Vegas also as their WR coach.

Tight Ends - Steve Hagen, 4th year
Hagen returned to CLE in '09 after serving on the Browns' staff as the TE cch ('01-'03) and QB cch ('04). He has over 20 years of collegiate experience most recently at North Carolina where he coached TE's ('07-'08).

Offensive Line - George Warhop, 4th year
Warhop has been an NFL OL coach at STL ('96-'97), ARZ ('98-'02), DAL ('03-'04) and SF ('05-'08). He joined CLE in '09 with the Browns allowing 105 sacks in his 3 years.

Defensive Coordinator - Dick Jauron, 2nd year
Jauron has been a DB cch at GB ('86-'94) and PHI ('10). He's also been a DC with JAX ('95-'98) and DET ('04-'05) and a HC with CHI ('99-'03) and BUF ('06-'09). LY CLE finished #10 in total D, the highest since returning in '99 and best rank s/'94.

Defensive Line - Dwaine Board, 2nd year
Board has been a DL coach since '94 with stops at SF ('94-'02), SEA ('03-'08) and OAK ('09). SEA finished 10th or better in sacks in 5 of his 6Y and OAK was 11th in '09.

Linebackers - Bill Davis, 2nd year
After working for GB, ATL and NYG, Davis was the 49ers' DC in '05-'06 finishing 32nd and 26th in total defense. He was the ARZ LB coach from '07-'08 before being promoted to DC for '09-'10 with finishes of 20th and 29th in total def.

Defensive Backs - Tim Hauck, 1st year
Hauck was TEN's assistant secondary coach in '09-'10. He began his coaching career at his alma mater Montana before moving on to UCLA. He played S for Browns President Mike Holmgren for 4 years at Green Bay ('91-'94).

Special Teams - Chris Tabor, 2nd year
Tabor was the Bears' asst ST's coach from '08-'10 helping them finish with 3 straight top 10 finishes in our rankings. Prior to that he spent '06-'07 as the RB/ST coach at W Mich.

OVERVIEW - President Mike Holmgren dismissed former HC Eric Mangini after back-to-back 5-11 seasons and surprised many fans by going with first-time HC Pat Shurmur in 2011. Shurmur became the 5th full season HC here since the Browns returned in 1999. In that span CLE has had just 2 winning seasons and 1 playoff appearance ('02) which is tied with OAK for the 2nd longest current postseason drought. Shurmur and Holmgren have similar philosophies as they prefer a West Coast Offense with a heavy emphasis on the RB in the run and pass game a la Andy Reid who is a close associate of both men. Shurmur acted as his own OC in 2011, but after the Browns had several issues with communication and time management they brought in former OC/HC Brad Childress for 2012. Childress knows the system (he installed it with the Vikings) and has worked with Shurmur previously in PHI. After 6 years in a 3-4 system on def, CLE changed schemes in 2011 under new DC Dick Jauron to a Bears' style 4-3/Cover-2. Jauron was aided in the installation by yet another ex-HC in the staff in senior assistant Ray Rhodes. Holmgren, Jauron and Rhodes all spent the '92-'93 seasons together at GB and work well together. While the staff all agreed that Colt McCoy would serve as the QB in 2011, at 6'1" with an adequate arm, he wasn't the ideal physical match for the offense. The 2011 offense was meant to be built around bullish RB Peyton Hillis but his injuries and inconsistencies made him unreliable behind a shaky OL. With a receiving corps that lacked perimeter playmakers, McCoy struggled in his 2nd yr finishing tied for the league's #25 QBR (74.6) before being knocked out for the year with 3 games left. CLE finished the year ranked #29 in ttl offense in total yards and #30 in scoring. The offseason brought a massive overhaul again as Hillis wasn't re-signed and the Browns invested their top 3 DC's in RB Richardson, QB Weeden and RT Schwartz who they expect to start right away. The defense saw progress under Jauron going from #22 overall (350 ypg) in 2010 to #10 in 2011 (332). Although they will miss DT Taylor to begin the 2012 season, there is talent on the roster for Jauron to mold into a promising defense. The ST went in the opposite direction in 2011 with uncharacteristic mistakes by their long snapper potentially costing them 2 games and minus P Hodges. Hodges is back and the special teams should once again be among the league's top 10. What the Browns can not control in 2012 is the schedule which is among the NFL's toughest and is considered the most difficult among the teams that did not make the playoffs in 2011. Of course, playing in the loaded AFC North is a big reason why, but they face just 1 team on the road (IND) that finished last season with a losing record. They also play 3 road gms in their first 5 incl back-to-back trips to BAL (on a short wk) followed by Super Bowl Champ NY NYG. The final 2 games are on the road vs DEN and PIT. While the Browns seem to finally be headed in the right direction, consider this yet another year in transition.

In '07 HOU improved to 8-8, their 1st non-losing season in their 6 year history. They were 6-3 with WR Andre Johnson in the lineup but 2-5 without. QB Schaub missed 5 (also parts of 3 others), and they lost 3 starting DB's to injury early and were -13 in TO's. In '08 they stunningly opened up 0-4 but part of that was due to Hurricane Ike which kept them from playing a home game until wk 5. They won 5 of their last 6 to finish at 8-8 again. HOU actually outgained foes by an average of 45 ypg which was more indicative of a 12 or 13 win team (-10 TO). Their offense was #3 in the NFL despite Schaub missing 5. In '09 I called for the Texans to finally break through and have their first winning season ever at 9-7 and that is where they finished! After a solid 5-3 start the Texans lost 4 straight but won their last 4 including vs NE (rested Brady 2H). They were #4 on offense and #13 on D and +58 ypg. In '10 they were a chic pick as Super Bowl contender but I went against the grain and called for a drop in their record and a 3rd place finish in the South. They were #3 on off and #30 on D and LY brought in Wade Phillips as DC. Two starting LB's missed a comb 25 games in '10 and with an improved D and one of the best offenses I called for the Texans to have their best record EVER at 10-6! They could have finished even better. After a 3-3 start, they won 7 in a row to clinch the playoffs at 10-3. HOU then acted like a young team going into the playoffs for the 1st time and dropped their L/3. They won their first ever playoff game and did outgain BAL 315-227 but lost in the division round. They did all that with a 3rd string QB! TY with QB Schaub, RB's Foster/Tate and WR Johnson they should have one of the most potent offenses. Their D should be just as strong and they could go 6-0 in the division which will give them a legitimate shot at the #1 seed in the AFC. That will keep them from mailing in those last 3 games like LY. Once again I will call for their best record ever vs my #32 schedule!

In '08 TEN opened 10-0 and had the best record in the AFC at 13-3. In the division round of the playoffs they dominated BAL with 391-211 yard and 21-9 FD edges but lost. There were plenty of factors calling for a weaker record in '09. TEN had benefitted from 4 net close wins, +14 in TO's, only had 21 sts lost to injury in '08 (5th fewest) and went from facing the 27th toughest schedule to the 4th toughest. I went out on a limb and called for the team with the best record in the AFC in '08 to MISS the playoffs in '09 at 8-8. After a 59-0 loss to NE the Titans were 0-6. Owner Bud Adams made the switch to Vince Young at QB and amazingly went 8-2 down the stretch (376 ypg!) as they were #9 on off and #14 on D in the 2H of the year. In '10 they opened 5-2 and in first place in the South but finished 6-10 (#27 off, #26 def). Fisher and Young could not get along and both departed LY and they had a rookie HC and were hurt by the lockout. I projected them with a losing record but noted they faced the #29 schedule (it turned out to be #30). With the softer slate TEN improved to #17 on off and #18 on def and exceeded my expectations going 9-7 and missing the playoffs on a tiebreaker. They beat BAL (off big win over PIT), DEN (pre-Tebow) and HOU (resting st'rs with playoff spot locked up) with their other 6 wins vs teams that avg 4.5 wins LY. They should get a better year out of RB Johnson but I have concerns with their QB's and they now face the #20 schedule, are -4.0 in ypg value (pg 12), were +3 wins from '10 to '11 and had a def ypp of 17.9, all factors calling for a downturn. They do however play in the same division as JAX and IND, two of the NFL's weaker teams. While this figures to be a stronger team than LY, I will call for them to finish in 2nd place again. I will also call for a drop to a losing record with a schedule that includes NE, SD, DET, PIT, CHI, NYJ, GB and HOU twice.

JAX came into '08 with a 3 year record of 31-17. They had 15 players land on IR during the year. After a 3-3 start, they went 2-8 down the stretch (#20 off and #17 def). In '09 I pegged them to improve to 7-9 and that is exactly where they finished! In 2010 they were 8-5 and were alone in 1st place in the South. They lost a showdown at IND and then lost to WAS in OT and HOU on the road without RB Jones-Drew. JAX was #15 on off and #28 on def and did benefit from 3 net close wins. Last year I called them a tough team to gauge as they looked to be stronger but with a tougher schedule (#27 in '10) I forecasted a losing season at 4-12 and they dropped to 5-11. They had a top-notch defense at #6 but the league's worst offense (just 259 ypg) with rookie QB Gabbert. They did beat two teams with a winning record (TEN and BAL) and outgained both with their other wins vs IND (twice) and TB (comb 6 wins). Interestingly JAX is now 4-14 in their last 3 gms over the last 6 yrs. They did not do much in Free Agency (-1 net starter) and drafted just 2 position players in the first 4 rounds. They also have a new head coach and I am not sold on Gabbert as a franchise QB. Pointing towards improvement this year is that they were -3 wins LY (8-8 to 5-11), had 2 net close losses and had 53 starts lost to injury (31 players on IR at EOY) and the schedule gets a little lighter (#28). All those factors point toward a stronger record this year but my talent ratings have them near the bottom of the NFL. Normally when a team had the #6 defense the previous year, I am higher on them but my 5 sets of power ratings all call for another drop in their record this season in what looks like a rebuilding year.

In '08 IND won 12+ games for the 6th straight yr as their 12-4 record matched my projection. After a rare 2nd place finish in the South in '08 I called for them to get back to the top in '09 and they flirted with a perfect record until they rested their starters the last 2. They still made it to the Super Bowl and had a 432-332 yard edge but lost. IND again benefitted from SEVEN net close wins! In '10 they had to overcome the Super Bowl loser stigma (8 of last 11 have missed playoffs). They opened just 6-6 but rebounded to win their last 4 by 2, 10, 5 & 3. The rest of the division went 3-9 over the last 4 gms and they won the South by 2 games. IND got a FG with :53 left to lead the Jets but gave up a big KR and a FG on the last play and lost at home 17-16, their third 1st round playoff loss in 4 yrs. IND was #4 on off and #20 def. Their 10 win total was their weakest record s/'02. QB Peyton Manning was a ? when I wrote this LY but proved he may be the most valuable player in the NFL as he missed the year and the results were disastrous! For most of the season the Colts were non-competitive and were staring at a winless season at 0-13. They upset both TEN and HOU at home to finish 2-14 with the #30 off and #25 def. They let go Super Bowl winning HC Caldwell, their GM and blew up the roster with massive changes in personnel on both offense and defense. Even a rookie QB (Andrew Luck) is a large upgrade over what they had LY (all 4 are gone). Naturally all of the key indicators are pointing upwards as they were -12 in TO's, had 4 net close losses, were -8 wins from '10, had poor off and def YPP's, had 75 starts lost to injury and they had a +3.6 indicator in the net yards. Pretty easy to call for improvement but also pretty easy to call for a 2nd straight losing season and in Manning's first year the Colts were 3-13. Although there is promise in the 1H of the year there are not many wins available in the 2H. I will however call for them to double their win total.

HOUSTON TEXANS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - After missing a combined 10 games in his first 2 years as a starter here Matt Schaub rededicated himself to the film and weight rooms while also finding ways to better protect his body to avoid injury. This paid immediate dividends as Schaub led the NFL in passing in 2009 with 4,770 yards (6th best in NFL history). Schaub posted a 2nd straight 4,000 yard season in 2010 (4,370, 64%, 24-12) as he continued to improve in HC Gary Kubiak's bootleg system. The depth behind Schaub was designed to support and not challenge him heading into LY. Schaub was injured again however after 10 games (IR foot) with HOU on the verge of running away with the AFC South Title at 7-3. Former 1st RD DC Matt Leinart returned for a 2nd consec year and was thrust into action but was also lost shortly after in his first start against JAX with a season-ending shoulder injury. TJ Yates was deemed as a project QB for Kubiak to work with after being taken in the 5th RD but after both Schaub and Leinart were shelved, he became the starter for the remainder of the year. In the game against the Jaguars Yates hit 8 of 15 pass att's and did just enough to help get the win. The Texans would get the victory in his first 2 starts (ATL and CIN) but after their meeting with the Bengals (clinched division), HOU would lose their final 3 games (Yates 0-2 ratio in that span). The Texans added some veteran leadership for Yates as the season wore down signing both Jake Delhomme and Jeff Garcia. Delhomme saw action in the finale but he and Garcia will not return for the upcoming year. After beating CIN for the 2nd time in less than a month in the Wildcard playoff round, Yates hit just 49% of his passes to go along with 3 int's in the loss to the Ravens to close out their season. With the progress Yates made it wasn't a surprise that Leinart moved on to OAK in free agency and battling for the #3 spot in 2012 with be former 2nd RD pick John Beck and rookie UFA Case Keenum who finished his collegiate career at Houston as the NCAA's all-time leader in total passing yards, td's and completions. Six different QB's were part of the Texans' 2011 roster with 4 actually seeing the field. Schaub appeared to be near 100% in OTA's while Yates (3-4 as a starter) should settle in as the #2 option. A heathier 2012 could see Schaub surpassing the 4,000 yard plateau for the 3rd time in 4 years.

RUNNING BACKS - One of the problems that Gary Kubiak had in the beginning of his tenure with the Texans was the lack of an effective run game to go along with a very potent passing attack. In 2009, HOU avg'd just 92 ypg (3.5), didn't have a player total more than 450 yards rushing and had just 2 games with a 100 yard rusher. Kubiak runs the same system that he ran for much of his OC stint under Mike Shanahan in Denver. The RB's are told to use a one cut and go approach with a zone-blocking scheme up front. The Texans selected Ben Tate in the 2nd RD of the 2010 Draft and many believed he would assume the starting role almost immediately. Unfortunately Tate suffered a leg injury in the preseason and wound up on IR. After a pair of solid performances at the end of 2009, Arian Foster took advantage of Tate's injury and flourished with an NFL-leading 1,616 yards (4.9) and 16 td's including 231 yards (7.0) in the season opener against the Colts. On the year Foster accounted for nearly 36% of the team's total offensive yards as he showed his versatility in the passing game as well with 66 rec's (9.2). Derrick Ward was a distant 2nd on the team with 315 yards on just 50 carries (177 less att's than Foster). Tate began camp last year as the 4th option on the depth chart behind Foster, Ward and Steve Slaton. Foster and Ward spent some time on the shelf during the preseason but Tate was unable to capitalize due to a hamstring issue. Heading into the Texans' preseason matchup against the Jets, 3 different RB's were out nursing hamstring inj's. When the dust settled Tate inherited the backup role behind Foster with Ward #3 while Slaton moved on. The Texans were also forced to replace All-Pro FB Vonta Leach who was given a lucrative contract by the Ravens. Lawrence Vickers (also an elite blocker) replaced Leach after spending the beginning of his career with the Browns. Foster had just 10 att's through the first 3 games due to re-injuring his hamstring with Tate taking over the bulk of the carries with two 100 yard performances in that span. Foster returned in the 4th game to rush for 155 yards against PIT and then 3 weeks later vs TEN became the first Texan with 100 yards rushing and receiving in the same game. Tate also rushed for 100+ yards against the Titans (1st time in franchise history 2 players in the same game) and the duo repeated it again 2 games later against the Browns (club record 261 rush yards). Despite missing 3.5 games on the season Foster still rushed for 1,224 (4.4) earning a new contract at year's end while Tate nearly missed out on the 1,000 yard plateau with 942 (5.4) on 103 fewer carries. Vickers moves on and replacing him at FB is James Casey who has been used as a hybrid TE/FB in his first 3 years in the league. Both Foster and Tate return in 2012 and with heathier QB's and WR's to go along with them, this is arguably the most dangerous 1-2 RB punch in the league today.

RECEIVERS - It's widely accepted that Andre Johnson is one of the best WR's in the NFL today. Despite drawing double and triple teams, he has accounted for 30 of HOU's forty-one (73%) 100 yard receiving games over the L6Y while notching the highest ypg receiving mark in the league from 2007-2010 at 96.5. The rest of the unit is designed to capitalize on holes in coverage that Johnson creates by going deep. Unfortunately, Johnson was plagued by a hamstring injury LY which cost him 9 regular ssn contests. Johnson saw his numbers drop significantly to 492 (14.9) on just 33 catches, by far his fewest receptions in his 9 years in the league. Johnson returned to form in the playoffs with 201 yards in those 2 matchups (caught 8 of the team's 17 passes vs BAL). Kevin Walter and Jacoby Jones (102 rec and 1,183 yards comb in '10) would have likely been more productive had Schaub not been lost after 10 gm with injury. After playing in just 19 games the previous 2 seasons, TE Owen Daniels suited up for all but one LY and led the team in both rec's and rec yards (677, 12.5). Walter pulled in 39 catches (12.2) and Jones 31 (16.5) with RB Arian Foster finishing #2 with 53 receptions for 617 yards (11.6). With Johnson and Walter now in their 30's (both 31), the Texans used 3rd (DeVier Posey) and 4th round (Keshawn Martin) picks in the 2012 Draft to stockpile the position. The Texans let Jones move on to BAL while they were unable to re-sign backup TE Joel Dreessen (353, 12.6) to an extension (FA DEN). Despite their starters getting a little long in the tooth, with an excellent run game and a healthier Johnson, look for this group to deliver big numbers in 2012.

OFFENSIVE LINE - After previous struggles at this position, the OL has become a pretty solid unit of late in Kubiak's zone blocking system. The 2010 group paved the way for 128 ypg rush (4.8) which was 7th in the league while allowing 32 sacks (1 for every 17.9 att's, 12th). Despite blocking for the leading rusher in the NFL, surprisingly none of the OL were selected to the Pro Bowl. LY's unit proved to be even better as they finished #2 in the league in rushing at 153 ypg (4.5). With rookie Yates taking the majority of the QB snaps over the final 6 weeks (sacked 15 times), the group surrendered 33 sacks on the year or one for every 14.2 att's (20th). The OL was able to start the same 5 players for the first 13 games before an injury to RG Mike Brisiel landed him on the bench. Brisiel (injured the prior 2 seasons as well) was in a heated battle during camp with Antoine Caldwell for the starting spot which he grabbed heading into the year. Caldwell started the final 3 and appears to have that spot locked up in 2012 with Brisiel moving on to OAK via FA. Another position that has to be replaced for the upcoming year is RT as Eric Winston was surprisingly released after a minor ankle injury before the draft. Taking over for Winston is Rashad Butler who started 4 games in 2010 but was placed on IR early LY due to elbow and triceps injuries. The other 3 spots return in C Chris Myers, LG Wade Smith and LT Duane Brown. Myers was widely considered the best center in all of football last year as he is fluent in the zone-blocking system (also w/Kubiak in DEN) and has the intelligence to handle more athletic DL's. Myers earned the first Pro Bowl nod for a Texans OL in franchise history, but Smith regressed allowing 5 sacks (0 allowed '10). Brown played a full 16 game season for the 3rd time in his 4 years and earned All-Pro honors in the process.

With the departure of both Brisiel and Winston, the Texans addressed depth concerns in the draft selecting Brandon Brooks and Ben Jones in the 3rd and 4th rounds respectively. Despite those additions, the unit is fairly bare and don't be surprised if the Texans bring in some veteran help prior to TC to compete for time. This is now the 7th year that HOU will be in the same blocking system but only time will tell if they made a mistake in letting a solid bookend like Winston depart.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - Considering the amount of high level DC's that have been invested in this unit, it's shocking that the Texans have recorded 30 or less sks in 6 of HOU's 10 yrs of existence. After finishing 30th in the NFL in ttl defense in 2010, the biggest addition to the Texans defense was new DC Wade Phillips who has an excellent reputation of improving his units in his 1st year. The Texans switched to a 3-4 scheme for the first time in franchise history (also played some 5-2) and the impact was felt immediately with the unit improving to 4th in rush def (96 ypg, 4.1) and 2nd in total defense (286 ypg). The new 3-man front consisted of 2 veterans and a rookie 1st rounder who displayed a nasty disposition which the coaches absolutely loved. DE Antonio Smith set a career-high with 6.5 sacks while also improving in the 2H of the season against the run. Flanking Smith at the other DE spot was rookie JJ Watt who showed that he may be a force in this league for many yrs to come with a constant motor and a good understanding of playing the position at a high level. Shaun Cody did an admirable job plugging the middle as his strength is a major attribute to pushing back opposing OL's. Earl Mitchell is the wildcard in this unit as he is quicker than Cody with more finesse but he may end up being better suited to spell the st'rs at the DE spots in the future. This is a solid group which will only get better in the 2nd year of Phillips' system.

LINEBACKERS - There were a lot of uncertainties heading into last season as not only were both DeMeco Ryans and Brian Cushing coming off of major surgeries, but the team was also installing Phillips' 3-4 scheme. With the change in the defense, the LB's received a significant upgrade on the outside with Mario Williams moving to OLB from the DE position where he spent his first 5 years in the league. Unfortunately Williams saw his 2011 season cut short as he was lost after just 5 starts to a torn pectoral muscle (5 sacks in that span). Replacing Williams in the lineup was rookie 2nd rounder Brooks Reed who shared a lot of the same traits as Watt. Reed would start the final 11 games of the regular season and record 45 tackles and 6 sacks (3.5 more sacks in 2 playoff games). The team's sack leader was Connor Barwin who slid over from ROLB to LOLB when Williams went down and recorded 11.5 on the year. The defense's most consistent player without question was Cushing who practically never left the field and portrays every necessary tool to be a top notch ILB for many years to come (Team MVP). Cushing has totaled 324 tackles in his first 3 seasons despite missing the first 4 gms of 2010 due to a PED suspension. Ryans played better in the 2H of the year as he recovered from an Achilles injury. The defense recorded a franchise-best 44 sacks on the season (1 per every 12.2 pass att's, 5th) including 27.5 from the LB position alone. This group will be forced to go through some major changes in personnel however heading into 2012 as they were unable to re-sign Williams (FA BUF) and Ryans is a better 4-3 fit so HOU traded him to PHI. The Texans have been extremely stingy in FA this season to avoid any continuity issues. One player they did add is 10 year veteran Bradie James who played under Phillips in DAL and should have no issue sliding into Ryan's spot. The only question about James is how much gas he has left in the tank as he was virtually phased out LY (100+ tackles from '06-'10, just 44 in 2011). If James is unable to return to form expect 3rd year pro Darryl Sharpton to step in. The Texans also addressed the departure of Williams by bringing in Whitney Mercilus with their 1st RD pick in TY's draft. Mercilus had just one productive year at Illinois (16 sacks, 9 FF's) and most scouting reports indicated that he would have been better suited for the 4-3 and may need some extra time here until he is ready to contribute on a regular basis. With Phillips now in his 2nd year as DC the team should have a better feel for what they are doing and the drop-off without Williams may not be as much as you would initially expect.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - After finishing last in the league in 2010 allowing a ghastly 268 ypg (65%), this had to be new DC Phillips' focal point for 2011. After losing out in the Nnamdi Asomugha sweepstakes, the Texans brought in the 2nd best CB on the FA market in Johnathan Joseph to help stabilize the position. Joseph has very strong cover skills which made the unit better via the trickle down effect as Kareem Jackson wasn't forced to play over his level. Joseph would go on to lead the team with 19 pd (4 int) while Jackson played better in his 2nd year as a pro despite not having blazing speed. Another big acquisition for the secondary a year ago was Danieal Manning who instantly became the leader of the group. Manning did miss 3 with a leg injury but returned prior to the playoffs. After spending the first 2 years of his career at CB, Glover Quin did well in his first year at S starting all 16 games and holding his own in run support. Troy Nolan (started 3 for the injured Manning, 35 tackles) and Jason Allen (4 starts, 45 tackles) rounded out the unit. The increased pass rush and the addition of Joseph and Manning allowed this unit to climb up 29 spots to #3 in 2011 as they allowed 190 ypg (52%) and an 18-17 ratio. Even more impressively Houston's Def QBR rose from #32 (100.5) in 2010 to #2 (69.0) last season. Allen is the only departure to this unit heading into 2012 and as long as they remain healthy and continue to see a solid pass rush ahead of them, HOU could put together another top 5 finish.

SPECIAL TEAMS - After the Texans had strong showings in our special teams rankings from 2005-2009, injuries and poor coverage units saw them take a dip down to #27 in 2010. HOU made a few adjustments heading into last year including allowing P Matt Turk to leave and turning the duties over to Brett Hartmann. Hartmann started the first 12 games before being lost for the season with an ACL (44.4 avg, 37.8 net). The Texans brought Turk back for the final 4 regular season games and in the playoffs but he appears to be a roster casualty again for 2012. Another player moving on is K Neil Rackers who spent the L/2 years with the Texans hitting 59-68 FG att's in that span but did miss twice as many of his att's last year compared to 2010. Replacing Rackers will be 5th RD DC Randy Bullock who hit 29-33 FG's LY at Texas A&M and won the Lou Groza award for the NCAA's top kicker. Veteran Shayne Graham was also brought in for added competition. After spending the first 5 years of his career with the Texans, return specialist Jacoby Jones moves on to BAL leaving the KR and PR duties up in the air heading into TC. Hartmann will begin the season with a 4-game NFL mandated suspension (PED) leaving the duties to FA signee Donnie Jones for at least the start of the season. Jones spent the last 4 seasons with the Rams but after seeing his net drop all the way down to 37.0 in 2011, he was deemed expendable and joined the Texans. There are a lot of uncertainties for this unit heading into the upcoming season so a drop in our rankings (#11 LY) could be expected.

OVERVIEW - After posting a 9-7 record and narrowly missing out on a playoff berth in 2009, the Texans appeared ready to reach the postseason in 2010. HOU was off of a year in which they set franchise records for most points, yards earned and fewest yards allowed in a season. The Texans returned 20 starters and quietly set new records for points scored (390) and total yards (6,186) but unfortunately a porous defense (30th) overshadowed the offense and the team spiraled to a 6-10 finish. Gary Kubiak was given another year by Texans ownership and he quickly brought in former DEN/BUF/DAL HC and defensive guru Wade Phillips to take over their much maligned defense (3rd DC of Kubiak's tenure). Phillips installed a 3-4 scheme for the first time in franchise history and the results were amazing as the Texans improved all the way to #2 in the NFL giving up 9.3 fewer points from the year prior. After allowing 5 games of 300 net yards passing in 2010, the Texans held foes to under 200 yards passing in eleven games. After solid wins over IND and MIA to start the season the Texans dropped a shootout 40-33 vs the Saints. RB Foster returned the following week against the Steelers and HOU was able to pick up a 7 point win against the defending AFC Champs. Schaub was int'd in the EZ on the final play as they lost at home to an emotional Raiders squad (owner Al Davis passed away a day earlier) HOU then made it a perfect 5 for 5 in losses to BAL, 29-14. The Texans would rattle off 6 consecutive wins despite losing Schaub, backup QB Leinart and DE/OLB Williams to IR in the process. Star WR Andre Johnson was also MIA for a significant period of time and DC Phillips missed 2 games due to illness. Rookie QB Yates would lead the team the rest of the way but following their 10th win over CIN (clinched AFC South), they would backdoor themselves into the playoffs losing each of their final 3 contests. Yates and company would rebound in the playoffs to knock off CIN for the 2nd time in a month in the Wild Card Round but the following week at BAL turned the ball over 4 times in a 20-13 defeat (outgained the Ravens 315-227). GM Rick Smith did his best to re-sign Mario Williams prior to FA to no avail as they just didn't have the cap space. The Texans brought in a very minimal amount of FA's to fill out the roster as it appears that their drafting has worked wonders in the past couple of seasons, especially in the defensive front 7. There is a bit of a concern as the Texans look to have a new starter at RG and at RT this season and they could have some growing pains there. For 12 years the Colts were the team to beat in the AFC South but now there is a new sheriff in town and these Texans appear to have staying power. Remember, they were 10-3 until they clinched LY so they were even better than their 10-6 record suggests. They accomplished this despite being led by a 3rd string QB who was in no way expected to play, let alone start 5 games for them. This young team made the playoffs for the first time ever LY and are a much more veteran squad because of it. They play in a now-soft division so they have a good shot at 6-0 in division play which will have them a contender for best record in the AFC and home field advantage.

TENNESSEE TITANS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - The Titans QB position took on a major face-lift a season ago with the release of Vince Young, the drafting of Jake Locker with the 8th overall pick and the FA signing of veteran Matt Hasselbeck. Hasselbeck possesses a winning and positive persona, something that had been lacking from the position over recent years. He also had a relationship with Locker (Univ of Wash) during his days with the Seahawks which appeared to make the young rookie's NFL introduction easier. Hasselbeck had struggled to stay healthy in his final 5 years with SEA playing through a 16-game season just once in that span. While he was able to start all 16 with the Titans in 2011, he did battle some injuries in the 2H of the year that saw Locker get significant time against ATL, NO and IND. Locker attempted 66 passes on the season and played well with an 8.2 ypa and a 4-0 ratio albeit opposing teams weren't prepared to face him and had little film to work with. Locker has a rocket arm with 8 of his 34 completions on the year going for 20+ yards as he has an uncanny ability to make plays on the run outside of the pocket deeming OC Chris Palmer to comment that he hadn't seen a player throw that well in that role in his 21 years in the league. Hasselbeck put up some solid numbers in his first year here throwing for 3,571 (62%) and an 18-14 ratio but over the final 8 games there was definitely a drop-off in his production with his ypa sinking to 6.7 to go along with just a 5-8 ratio. Rusty Smith (1 start in '10) served as the distant #3. The Titans front office was unsuccessful in its attempt to add in state legend Peyton Manning after he was released by the Colts. There doesn't appear to be any bad blood with Hasselbeck as he understands the business of the NFL. He returns to battle Locker in camp and while we expect him to win the battle to start the season, don't be too surprised to see Locker take over the role as starter following their Week 11 bye with 3 consecutive AFC South games on the docket.

QB Matt Hasselbeck

RUNNING BACKS - The Titans were criticized for drafting Chris Johnson in 2008's WR heavy draft but after a very respectable rookie campaign of 1,228 yards (4.9), Johnson became just the 6th player in NFL history to break the 2,000 yard rushing barrier the following season. Heading into last year Johnson was averaging 1,533 rushing yards per season but a lengthy contract holdout kept him from joining the team until 10 days prior to the opener. The missed time took a toll as over the first 8 games of the season he totaled just 46 ypg on the ground with a very poor 3.0 ypc. Johnson would go on to surpass the 130 yard rushing mark in 3 of his next 4 games (190 vs TB) but struggled again over the final 4 averaging just 49 ypg. He barely surpassed the 1,000 yard plateau in the season finale against HOU. With his struggles the Titans had hoped to get more out of backup Javon Ringer but he too saw his share of issues and ended up missing most of the final 4 games of the year with a broken hand. Rounding out the depth at RB was Jamie Harper who saw 17 carries (44, 2.6) as a rookie. All 3 return this season with solid blocking FB Ahmard Hall being the only departure. Johnson has 28 100-yard rushing games with 7 of 150+ yards in his short career. With a full offseason and the ease of now having a lucrative contract in hand, expect Johnson increase his productivity to go with a more dangerous receiving unit to complement him.

RECEIVERS - One of the disappointments of the Jeff Fisher era was the inability to develop a premier WR who could consistently deliver. Injuries, limitations at QB and simply bad drafting created a lack of explosiveness in their passing attack. Heading into LY Kenny Britt was clearly the most talented WR but injuries in each of the past 2 years have seen his season end prematurely (289 yds thru 3 games LY before ACL). Thanks to more consistency at QB with Hasselbeck behind center, Nate Washington became the Titans first 1,000 yard receiver since both Drew Bennett (1,247) and Derrick Mason (1,168) accomplished that feat back in 2004. Washington finished with 1,023 (13.8) on 74 catches but with the speed that he possesses, he's still better suited for a role in the slot. With Britt suffering a setback during his rehab prior to the draft, the Titans took out an insurance policy in the first round by selecting Kendall Wright who was the first Baylor receiver to surpass the 3,000 yd career mark in school history. The depth behind Britt, Washington and Wright isn't bad either as both Lavelle Hawkins and Damian Williams both pulled in 45+ catches in 2011. Another big surprise for the team a year ago was the emergence of TE Jared Cook who more than doubled his 2010 output with 759 yds (15.5) on 49 catches. Spelling Cook at the TE position are outstanding blocker Daniel Graham and 5th yr pro Craig Stevens who had 20 combined receptions in '10-'11. Now in the 2nd year of OC Palmer's offense, this group should increase their production as they now have a slew of weapons to test opposing secondaries on a frequent basis.

WR KENNY BRITT #18 6-3 215 Age: 24 4th Yr (3/3) #1DC TEN '09 (Rutgers) - 3 st, 3 gm (ACL/MCL), 289 rec yd (17.0), 3 td, 14 FD, 65.4 catch %, 5.4% of off LY. 7 st, 12 gm, 775 rec yd (18.5), 9 td, 33 rec FD, 57.5 catch %, 16.0% of off '10.

OFFENSIVE LINE - The Titans have had a remarkable run of health at the OL position since 2006 as the opening day starters have missed just a combined 17 games in that 6 year span including just 1 a season ago. This has led to a very stable unit which has been able to deal with the different QB protections between Vince Young and Kerry Collins in the past and now Locker and Hasselbeck for their 2nd season with the team. After allowing an average of 22.6 sacks per year between 2006 and 2010 (1 per every 20.5 pass att's), the group surrendered 24 sacks in 2011 but saw their sack per pass attempt improve to #3 in the league at one per every 24.3 att's. While pass protection has been solid the rushing game took a hit LY as the Titans dropped to #31 in the league averaging just 90 ypg (3.8) after finishing in the top 7 from 2006-'09. After suffering a tough 2010 when he allowed 10 sacks and was hobbled by a knee injury, LT Michael Roos rebounded a year ago allowing just 2 sacks. Roos and RT David Stewart are a formidable duo of OL bookends who are both entering the prime of their careers. Eugene Amano took over the starting center position from Kevin Mawae in 2010 but has yet to fully grasp all the nuances of the spot after spending the first 6 years of his career at OG. RG Leroy Harris was able to start all 16 games a season ago despite dealing with injuries to both his shoulder and knee. He went through clean-up surgeries in the offseason and should be 100% by the start of camp. The lone departing starter for the upcoming season was LG Jake Scott who wasn't on the top of the Titans re-signing list. Former All-Pro Steve Hutchinson has been brought in to fill that role in 2012 but after spending 11 solid seasons in the trenches with both SEA and MIN, many wonder about how much gas he has left in the tank. With potential questions about Hutchinson, TEN made sure they re-signed 5th year pro Fernando Velasco to serve as the primary backup at all 3 interior OL positions. Rounding out the remainder of quality depth here is OT Michael Otto who saw a single start in each of the past 2 seasons. The reason for the drop-off in the rushing numbers can't fully be pinned on this group as Chris Johnson would even admit that he put together without question his worst year as a pro. With Johnson now at full speed and 2 former HOF O-lineman on the current Titan coaching staff (HC Mike Munchak and OL coach Bruce Matthews), this unit is a sleeping giant that could find themselves returning to the top 10 in rushing for 2012.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - The Titans were forced to undergo a major philosophical change on the DL under new DC Jerry Gray a season ago. In the past Jeff Fisher favored lighter and faster DL who were generally under 300 lbs relying on technique and angles to get to the ball while Gray prefers more mass and power to drive their opponents back at the POA. After a lengthy contract holdout and nagging injuries which cost Derrick Morgan progress in his rookie season of 2010, a knee injury again posed a threat to his playing time LY. He has been solid against the run but needs to improve as a pass rusher. With the lack of true pass-rushing presence at the DE spot in 2011 (finished #31 in NFL with one sack per every 21.1 att's), the Titans wasted no time in signing Kamerion Wimbley after he became a salary cap casualty with the Raiders. Wimbley has averaged more than 7 sacks a season over his 6 years in the league with CLE and OAK. He will be able to finally get back to putting a hand in the dirt and rushing the QB on a play by play basis according to Gray. Jason Jones (13 start, 27 tackles, UFA SEA) and William Hayes (1 start, 16 tackles, UFA STL) were free to move on in FA. In the interior both Karl Klug (led team in sacks with 7) and Jurrell Casey both showed they belonged in the league as rookies. Along with Sen'Derrick Marks and veteran Shaun Smith, the DT's look to have the unit's brightest upside heading into 2012. DE's Malcolm Sheppard and Dave Ball round out the remaining depth here. Gray is implementing a more aggressive scheme after LY's pass rushing woes. Expect the Titans DL to help provide a significant improvement in the rush defense department after finishing #24 a season ago (128 ypg, 4.5) while Wimbley and hopefully a healthy Morgan will provide more pressure on opposing QB's.

LINEBACKERS - This has been one of the team's biggest areas of concern as inj's and age have taken a toll on this group. With that said however, TEN has actually seen their ppg allowed drop from 25.1 (#28) to 21.2 (#15) to 19.8 (#8) in each of the L3Y. With the departure of Stephen Tulloch heading into LY, the Titans used some of their FA money to add Barrett Ruud after he led the Bucs in tackles in 2010 with 118. Ruud is a solid leader and interior playmaker but missed 7 games due to injury allowing rookie Colin McCarthy to see the field. McCarthy arguably become the best defensive player on the team by the end of the season leading the Titans in tfl (6.5). After starting a combined 12 games in his first 2 years with the Titans, Gerald McRath never saw his name in the starting lineup. Replacing McRath was rookie 2nd rounder Akeem Ayers who started all 16 games and finished #3 on the team with 76 tackles (#1 among LB's). Filling out the remaining starting spot is Will Witherspoon who after finishing with 92 tackles in his first year in TEN in 2010, saw nearly half the snaps from the year prior and recorded just 56 takedowns. While Ruud was allowed to leave after just one season, Witherspoon may be out after 2012 with the Titans using another 2nd rounder in the draft to bring in Zach Brown out of North Carolina. This is a very young, fast and athletic 2-deep and with a more aggressive defensive scheme, I would expect the Titans to improve again in their ppg allowed.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - After posting B2B top 10 pass defense ypg performances in 2007 (199) and 2008 (200), the Titans secondary fell on hard times in both 2009 (259) and 2010 (252) finishing 31st and 29th. Some of the 2010 struggles could have been blamed on a porous front 7 which saw all 4 starting members of the secondary record 100+ tackles. While they saw their overall numbers improve a bit LY to 227 ypg (62%, 21-11 ratio) and a 14th overall finish, this unit may be hurting this season with the loss of 2 of their starters via FA in CB Cortland Finnegan and SS Chris Hope. Finnegan played every single defensive snap in 2011 and is considered one of the better CB's in the league today. He decided to follow former HC Jeff Fisher to STL with a lucrative contract in hand. Hope missed a substantial part of LY with a broken arm and his experience and knowledge will be missed. With Hope out most of the season, FA signee Jordan Babineaux slipped into the vacated position and wound up finishing 2nd on the team with 93 tackles. Flanking Babineaux at the other safety position is Michael Griffin who has missed just 10 defensive snaps the past 2 years combined. After supplanting Vincent Fuller as the starting NB in 2010, Jason McCourty was promoted again LY taking over the starting CB spot opposite Finnegan away from Alterraun Verner who saw 12 starts there as a rookie. McCourty recorded 15 pd's on the season while leading the team in tackles with 104. Verner (3 starts, 48 tackles) is likely to return to the starting lineup TY with the departure of Finnegan. The biggest concern for this unit heading into 2012 is depth. Ryan Mouton has the most experience in the Titans secondary but has landed on IR in each of the L/2 seasons including missing all of 2011 with an Achilles. The Titans used 4th and 6th round DC's to stock this group. Ten's defensive QBR has improved from 91.2 in '09 (#25) to 86.4 in '10 (#21) to 85.1 LY (#18) but despite the loss of Finnegan their numbers may not drop much with improvements in the front 7.

SPECIAL TEAMS - While Rob Bironas doesn't necessarily get the recognition he deserves, you could argue that he may be one of the best kickers in the league today as he has helped this group to B2B #2 finishes in our special teams rankings. Over the past 5 seasons Bironas has hit 144 of his 162 FG att's (89%) while also nailing 21-29 FG's of 50+ yards in his 7 year career (6-7 LY, only miss came from 66 yards). He was also reliable as the team's KO specialist finishing 6th in the league in TB % at 56.4. P Brett Kern had a solid all-round year as well improving both his avg (43.6) and net (39.4) from 2010 (42.9, 39.1). After a dynamite rookie season which saw Marc Mariani earn a Pro Bowl bid in '10 (25.5 KR, 12.2 PR, 2 td), his numbers dropped some LY (23.4 KR, 10.7 PR, 1 td) but he remains a solid threat any time he gets a hold of the ball. Much like a year ago, this unit will be counted on to help carry the team as their offensive and defensive schemes continue to evolve and with all of their main weapons returning, another top 5 finish by the Titans could be in the offing.

Head Coach - Mike Munchak, 16th year (2nd as HC)
Munchak took over the HC duties after spending the prior 14 yrs as the tm's OL coach. Munchak was inducted into the Pro Football HOF in '01 after a 12 yr career as an OG with the Oilers.
Offensive Coordinator - Chris Palmer, 2nd year
Palmer joined the Titans after spending 2010 coaching in the UFL. Prior to the UFL Palmer spent time with the NYG, DAL, HOU and CLE (HC of the Browns from 1999-2000).
QB Coach/Passing Game - Dowell Loggains, 2nd year
2011 was the 1st yr that Loggains was a position coach at any level in FB as he spent the earlier parts of his career as a scout.
RB Coach - Jim Skipper, 2nd year
Skipper has 33 yrs of coaching experience incl 24 as an NFL RB coach. Prior to TEN, he was the RB cch w/CAR from '02-'10.
WR Coach - Dave Ragone, 2nd year
Ragone came to the Titans in 2011 after spending the previous season as the QB coach under Palmer in the UFL.
TE Coach - John Zernhelt, 7th year
Prior to joining the Titans in 2006, Zernhelt was the TE coach for the Jets in 2005. He spent 2004 as the HC of The Citadel.
OL Coach - Bruce Matthews, 2nd year
A HOF teammate of Munchak with the Oilers, Matthews took over as OL cch a year ago after 2 ssns here as an offensive asst.
Defensive Coordinator - Jerry Gray, 2nd year
Prior to the Titans, Gray spent the 2010 season as the DB coach in SEA and 2006-09 in the same position with the Redskins.
DL Coach - Tracy Rocker, 2nd year
Prior to his arrival with the Titans, Rocker spent 17 years as a DL coach in the college ranks including 2009-2010 with Auburn.
LB Coach - Frank Bush, 2nd year
Bush joined TEN a season ago after spending 4 years on the Texans coaching staff including the final 2 as their DC.
Secondary Coach - Brett Maxie, 1st year
Maxie comes over to TEN after spending the previous 4 yrs coaching with DAL. He has 14Y of NFL coaching experience.
Special Teams Coach - Alan Lowry, 17th year
In addition to quality special teams work, Lowry has also been a WR/TE cch in the NFL. Since 2000 he has had six top 5 finishes in our special teams rankings.

OVERVIEW - One of the most important relationships in football is between a HC and the QB. Jeff Fisher and Vince Young rarely saw eye to eye which caused both of them to move on prior to the start of the 2011 season. HOF and former Titan OL coach Mike Munchak inherited the team LY and cleaned out nearly all of the staff which created a bit of a time crunch with the lockout. Players really didn't have a chance to meet with each other until the tail end of July when both OC Chris Palmer and DC Jerry Grey had to get their schemes installed and ready for the upcoming season. After opening up the year with a 2 point loss at JAX, the Titans strung together a 3 game win streak against BAL, DEN and CLE to start off the year at 3-1. The team would then be very inconsistent the remainder of the year. After being outscored by a combined 79-24 in their next 2 games against PIT and HOU, the Titans moved back above .500 with a 17 point win over the hapless Colts. After going 3-4 over their next 7 games including giving those previously mentioned Colts their first win of 2011, the Titans would beat division rivals JAX and HOU (Texans had already clinched AFC South) to finish 9-7 but lost out on tiebreakers for a Wildcard Playoff berth. The Titans earned their first winning season since 2008 with Munchak and the addition of a veteran QB giving them a 3-game improvement from the year prior. While TEN is still evolving their schemes in the 2nd year under Munchak, they will again contend in a rather weak AFC South. There are numerous factors pointing downwards this year (see division forecast) but the one that stands out to me the most is a much tougher schedule. As I pointed out in the forecast, they faced the #30 schedule last year and now upgrade to a much tougher #19. I look for a much bigger year out of Chris Johnson and another 2nd place finish in the South but a drop in the overall win total and a 4th straight year of missing the playoffs.

JACKSONVILLE JAGUARS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - If the Jaguars are to improve upon their 5-11 record, it'll be all about getting quick improvement from Blaine Gabbert, who was the lowest-rated starting QB in the league LY. Fired HC Jack Del Rio and the organization did Gabbert a disservice in releasing starter David Garrard and playing Gabbert before he was ready. He was drafted with the 10th overall pick to be their franchise QB but was rushed into the lineup too soon. Garrard was cut 5 days before the opener and Luke McCown was benched after throwing 4 int's in the 2nd game, so the team bailed and went to Gabbert. The jury is still out on whether Gabbert will be a top NFL QB, since he played in a spread offense in college. LY he completed only 50.8% of his passes for 2,214 yds (12-11 ratio) and took 40 sks. He has good mechanics, a live arm and a sharp mind, but he wasn't familiar with the pro offense, struggled with blitz packages, battled accuracy issues and seemed to shrink in the face of pressure. JAX's pass offense was worse than anyone could have anticipated, averaging a league low 136.2 ypg (NFL's best NO avg'd 334.2 ypg). New HC Mike Mularkey will focus on Gabbert's mechanics and confidence, while they added some weapons during the offssn at WR. Backups Luke McCown and Dan LeFevour are gone, replaced by former Dolphin Chad Henne. After 2 years as the starter in MIA, Henne suffered a separated shoulder in the 4th game LY and spent the rest of the year on IR. He had a lackluster season in '10 (15-19 ratio) and has a starting record of only 13-18. For his career, he has 31-37 ratio in 36 gms. He has a strong arm, but he's inconsistent. He also likes to play out of the shotgun, which isn't a staple of the JAX offense. However, if Gabbert doesn't show signs of improvement, Henne will likely take over.

QB BLAINE GABBERT #11 6-4 233 Age: 23 2nd Yr (14/15) #1DC JAX '11 (Missouri) - 2214 pass yd (50.8%), 12-11 ratio, 5.4 ypa, 65.4 QBR, 40 sk despite broken toe as rookie.

Chad Henne #7 6-3 230 Age: 27 5th Yr (4/4) #2DC MIA '08 (Michigan) - 4 st, 4 gm (inj), 868 pass yd (57.1%), 4-4 ratio, 7.8 ypa, 79.0 QBR, 112 rush (7.5), 1 td, 11 sk w/MIA LY. 14 st, 15 gm, 3301 pass yd (61.4%), 15-19 ratio, 6.7 ypa, 75.4 QBR, 52 rush (1.5), 30 sk w/MIA in '10.

RUNNING BACKS - Maurice Jones-Drew represented almost the entire JAX offense LY when he became just the 5th back to lead the league in rushing on a team with the NFL's worst passing offense. In other words, with no threat to keep D's honest he ran consistently vs stacked boxes and still produced in a giant way. In 2011, he rushed for 1,606 yds (4.7), 8 td's and had 43 rec's (374 yd, 3 td). He had the most touches in the NFL (386), and he cut back on lost fumbles, which dogged him earlier in his career. There are worries about the wear and tear, yet he finished strongly with no sign of tapering off. A short, stocky workhorse back, he is shifty yet powerful who runs low to the ground and drives with his feet. The Jaguars were 12th in the league in rushing (123.1 ypg), and MJD accounted for 47.7% of the team's off because there wasn't anybody else to carry the ball. Rashad Jennings spent LY on IR after suffering a knee injury in the last pressn gm, and JAX didn't have an adequate bkp. In 2010 Jennings ran for 459 yds (5.4) with 4 td's, and was a good complementary back to Jones-Drew. Jennings has size, speed and good strength, though he doesn't make defenders miss and rarely breaks long runs. He's also a viable option as a 3rd Dn receiver and can play in short-ydg situations. Greg Jones is one of the best blocking FB's in the league and a decent short-ydg back. Montell Owens is a reserve RB and All-Pro ST player. Deji Karim, who was 2nd on the team with 130 yds rushing LY, was released and signed with IND. If the Jaguars can develop a more-balanced offense with their passing attack, Jones-Drew will help set up man coverage downfield, taking a lot of pressure off his QB.

RB MAURICE JONES-DREW #32 5-7 208 Age: 27 7th Yr (16/16) #2DC JAX '06 (UCLA) - #1 NFL w/1606 rush yd (4.7), 8 td, 374 rec yd (8.7), 3 td, 75 rush FD, 26 tfl, 47.7% of off, 1st Tm All-Pro LY. 14 st, 14 gm (MCL), 1324 rush yd (4.4), 5 td, 317 rec yd (9.3), 75 rush FD, 17 tfl, 30.1% of off '10.

Rashad Jennings #23 6-1 228 Age: 27 3rd Yr (0/0) #7DC JAX '09 (Liberty) - DNP (knee) LY. 3 st, 13 gm, 459 rush yd (5.5), 4 td, 223 rec yd (8.6), 25 rush FD, 5 tfl, 12.5% of off '10.

FB GREG JONES #33 6-1 254 Age: 31 9th Yr (9/16) #2DC JAX '04 (Florida St) - 7 rush yd (3.5), 1 td LY. 13 st, 16 gm, 4 rush yd (2.0), 47 rec yd (4.3), 0.9% of off in '10.

RECEIVERS - This was the weakest unit on the Jaguars LY and a position of great need heading into the offssn, as JAX needed not only a #1 WR, but also a #2. They think they filled those holes after signing two FA's in Laurent Robinson and Lee Evans and drafting Justin Blackmon in the 1st RD. Blackmon has to pan out because 2 recent Jaguars 1st RD picks at the position never lived up to expectations - Reggie Williams (9th overall in '04) and converted QB Matt Jones (21st in '05). The Jaguars thought so highly of Blackmon that they moved up 2 spots to draft him. He brings the dimension of a downfield threat to the passing game that the team sorely needs. He has a tendency to veer on his routes, but there's no questioning his ability to go after passes. He is highly productive, has excellent yac ability and doesn't get caught from behind. Robinson had a breakout season in DAL LY with 858 yds (15.9, 11 td). A one time #3DC, he failed to produce in ATL and STL for 4 seasons, catching only 4 td's. He was buried on the Cowboys' depth chart before replacing an inj'd Miles Austin and emerging as a playmaker 4 gms into LY. Robinson is a sure handed, precise route-runner with speed who excels over the middle. Evans was a highly productive but never quite elite WR in BUF, where his numbers tailed off after catching 63 passes for 1,017 yds in 2008. The Bills traded him to BAL LY, but he played in only 9 gms (ankle), catching just 4 passes. He rebounded in the playoffs with 4 rec's but was more noted as the player who dropped a GW pass in the end zone in the AFC Championship game. Mike Thomas was the Jaguars' leading wideout LY, but he is more suited for a slot position and at best should be looked on as a #3. He finished with 415 (9.4) and 1 td. Cecil Shorts hopes to bounce back from a disappointing rookie year and in-season pickup Brian Robiskie will battle just to make the team. The Jaguars had only 4 passes of 40+ yds LY (3rd fewest). TE Marcedes Lewis needs to return to his '10 form after dropping from 10 td to none LY. Already known as a punishing blocker, he had emerged as a threat 2 seasons ago, catching 58 balls for 710 yds. It took until midseason LY for him to develop a decent rapport with Gabbert. Zach Miller has trouble staying healthy but could be a down-field threat. Zach Potter started 7 gms LY in 2-TE sets as a 6'7" 280pound blocker. This may be the AFC's most improved receiving corps.

WR LAURENT ROBINSON #81 6-2 194 Age: 27 6th Yr (4/14) #3DC ATL '07 (Illinois St) - 858 rec yd (15.9), 11 td, 36 rec FD, 67.5 catch %, 14.3% of off w/DAL LY. 11 st, 14 gm, 344 rec yd (10.1), 2 td, 20 rec FD, 45.3 catch %, 6.8% of off '10.

OFFENSIVE LINE - JAX has an experienced veteran OL which is poor in pass protection but pretty good in the running game. The Jaguars were 12th in rushing LY, but they allowed 44 sks, ranking 25th. If Blaine Gabbert were not such a good scrambler, the sack total would have been worse. LT Eugene Monroe and RT Eben Britton were the team's 1st 2 picks in '09, but neither has developed into the type of impact player anticipated. Now in their 4th seasons, they need to step it up a notch. Monroe is a solid st'r who has battled shoulder inj's and he hardly makes Jaguars fans forget Tony Boselli. He has started 42 gms, but he's allowed 23 sks, including a career-worst 9.5 LY. Monroe is a powerful player with the ideal frame and athleticism for LT. Britton is being moved back to RT after playing most of his snaps at LG LY. He played in only 4 gms (2 st LG, 1 RT) because of a herniated disc which and eventually put him on IR and required surgery. He started 15 gms as a rookie and 7 times in '10 because of a shoulder injury, allowing only 8 sks in his 1st 2Y. Some think he'd be better off playing inside at OG. Brad Meester enters his 13th year but still has something left in the tank. He is the only player on the team left over from the Tom Coughlin regime and has played the most gms in franchise history. Meester hasn't missed a game or even a snap in the L3Y. He should be able to play another season or two. Will Rackley is developing in his 2nd year. A #3DC, he wasn't supposed to play much as a rookie but started 14 games at LG although he's supposed to be the eventual replacement for Meester. He showed good technique and instincts to go with power off the snap as a pass protector, though he needs to show more aggressiveness as a run blocker. Uche Nwaneri is a productive veteran at RG. He has 60 starts since being a #5DC in '08. A former DT, he is powerful and deceptively mobile, although he's allowed 11 sks during his career. Depth is inadequate and mostly inexperienced. Former NYG Guy Whimper saw the most action of his 6Y career when he started 15 gms at RT LY for Britton, however, he was beaten for 14 sks. Jason Spitz is a 7Y vet who was supposed to start at LG LY, losing out to rookie Rackley. The OL still needs some upgrades.

LT EUGENE MONROE #75 6-5 308 Age: 25 4th Yr (14/15) #1DC JAX '09 (Virginia) - 14 st LT, 15 gm (DNP finale, inj), 4 pen, 8.5 sk all'd LY. 15 st, 15 gm (inj), 9 pen, 6.5 sk all'd in '10.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - For a 5-11 team, the Jaguars actually had a pretty good D LY, reflecting the style of former HC Jack Del Rio. They all'd only 20.6 ppg (11th), 313.0 ttl ypg (6th), and the run D gave up just 104.2 ypg (9th). Those are good numbers to build upon although JAX needs to increase its sack ttl of 31 (6.0%, 25th). The Jaguars have no formidable pass rushers and as LY wore on there was less and less pressure on opposing QB's. The line is anchored inside by DT's Tyson Alualu and Terrance Knighton while DE Jeremy Mincey has developed into a good pass rusher on the right side. The 4th st'r is likely to be TY's #2DC Andre Branch, who the team hopes will provide the kind of consistent pass rush threat off the edge they've needed for yrs. The franchise missed badly in the First 2 rounds of '08 on Derrick Harvey and Quentin Groves. Mincey was the surprise of the D LY, coming out of nowhere to lead the team with 8 sks, 43 qbh and 4 FF. A #6DC in 2007, he was a bkp for 3Y before coming on. He's a high energy player who is stout against the run and has developed pass rush moves. He goes inside on 3rd downs and is now more than just a die hard run stopper. Branch looks to take over for the departed Matt Roth who was let go. Branch is a physical, pass rushing DE who Mincey should benefit greatly from as opposing offenses would have to game plan around. Alualu slipped a little LY after a solid rookie season after offssn surgery to repair a knee injury hindered him LY. He's started all 32 gms of his career with 6 sks from the inside. Knighton was overweight and needs to keep his weight at 340 to be effective. He's started 45 gms after being drafted in the 3rd RD in '09, making 108 total tkls and 5.5 sks. Big, powerful and explosive, he's able to collapse the pocket, but there's a reason his nickname is Pot Roast. Three bkps finished LY on IR in Aaron Kampman, Austen Lane and D'Anthony Smith. Kampman was supposed to be the veteran pass rusher the team needed when he signed as a FA in '10. He has played in only 11 gms and his future is cloudy after suffering a torn ACL 2 years in a row. He's made only 4 sks as a Jaguar. Lane and Smith were drafted in '10 and still have potential while John Chick is another backup pass rusher. Like the OL, the Jag's DL strength is on the inside.

LINEBACKERS - The LB corps is the strength of the JAX D and all 3 st'rs return. SLB Daryl Smith is one of the most underrated players in the league and MLB Paul Posluszny and WLB Clint Session were good FA signings LY. JAX ranked only 23rd in red zone D LY (55.0%) and was only slightly better on 3rd Dn (36.2%, 15th), statistics that weren't up to par with the rest of the defensive rankings. Smith has started every game the L3Y and is a versatile 3 down LB who can play all 3 positions. LY he didn't lead the team in tackles for the 1st time s/'08, but he still had more than 100 stops, adding 3.5 sks. A good tkl'r, he's solid in pass coverage but he doesn't make many big plays. Smith and CB Rashean Mathis are the only defensive holdovers from the Jag's last playoff team in '07. Posluszny led the team with 119 tkls and is one of the league's best tacklers when healthy (he missed 6 gms from 2009-'10) but so far he's played his career in relative obscurity in BUF and JAX. He has top read-and-react skills and is a physical downhill player with range. Session saw action in only 14 gms the L2Y because of inj's. When healthy in '08-09 with IND, he made 197 tkls, leading the Colts in stops one year. Posluszny and Session brought physicality to what had been a soft D, and they weren't liabilities in pass coverage. Russell Allen filled in well when Session was out LY, and he's played in all 48 gms (15 st) since being undrafted in '09. Kyle Bosworth was a solid backup and ST's player until he went on IR. TY's #5DC, Brandon Marshall is a strong, physical player which will serve in a bkp role to the 3 established st'rs. He could push for a starting job in time and will certainly contribute on ST's this season.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - LY the Jaguars lost 3 starting CB's to season-ending inj's by Nov, but the pass D still ranked 8th in the league, allowing only 208.8 ypg, the fewest by a JAX team s/'06. This is a veteran unit that had a good CB tandem in Rashean Mathis and Derek Cox LY and has now been upgraded with the addition of FA Aaron Ross. At S, two 2011 FA acquisitions started in Dawan Landry and Dwight Lowery. Those 5 players will play the bulk of the snaps TY. Mathis explored the FA market but returns for his 10th season. LY he had his best season since he was selected as a starter to the Pro Bowl following '06. He has great athleticism and pure cover ability, but has to stay healthy, as he's missed big parts of 3 of the L/4 seasons and is coming off ACL surgery which held him to 9 gms LY. Cox has yet to live up to expectations. LY he suffered a knee inj in late Nov and played in only 6. In '10, he was benched for poor play, though he has started 30 gms in his first 2Y. Ross will be the NB, but if Mathis is not 100% by Sept or if Cox struggles again, Ross will take over a starting role. With the Giants LY, Ross was supposed to be the NB, but inj thrust him into a starter's job, and he made 4 int's and numerous big plays. A #1DC in '07, he is versatile and can play S in the nickel, as well as return kicks.

At SS, former Raven Landry provided a physical presence that had been lacking. He started all 16, giving him 48 consecutive starts, and his 97 tkls led the secondary. Landry is an aggressive and productive tackler who has 6 int's in the L3Y, though he lacks top speed. Lowery was acquired in a Sept trade with the Jets. He started 13, missing 2 with a neck stinger. A former CB, he has a knack for reading the play and getting to the ball (8 int L3Y). Durability has been an issue over his 4Y career. Top bkp CB William Middleton also went on IR LY, as did Ashton Youboty. Both provide solid depth at CB. #6DC Mike Harris is a solid tackler who will play on ST's. At S, the top backups are Courtney Greene, a #7DC in '09 who started 11 times 2Y ago, and Chris Prosinski, a promising rookie S who went on IR. JAX's defensive QBR improved from #31 (98.5) in 2010 to #17 (83.7) and the Jags have top 10 potential this year.

SPECIAL TEAMS - The Jaguars usually had strong ST play under Tom Coughlin, but that wasn't the case with Jack Del Rio. JAX was 24th LY in our ST rankings and had only 1 top 10 ranking in Del Rio's 9 seasons. Mike Mularkey hopes to put more of an emphasis on ST this year, but new STC John Bonamego was fired in the middle of '10 by MIA and has to prove himself all over again. LY PK Josh Scobee bounced back from a miserable 2H of '10, making 23-25 FG incl 5-6 from 50+. He benefited from the new KO rule with 39 TB (62.9%, #4 league). Now in his 9th yr, he just has to remain consistent. P Adam Podlesh left in FA and was replaced by Matt Turk and then Nick Harris when Turk failed to avg 40 yds per punt. Harris had a 42.7 avg and 37.9 net and the team let him go in the offssn. They surprised many by drafting Cal's Bryan Anger in the 3rd round, the highest a punter has been drafted in 10Y. Anger has a strong leg and has been compared to OAK's Shane Lechler. He's good at directional kicking, forcing the returner to fair catch and pinning the ball In20. The JAX return game was miserable LY, averaging 4.4 on PR (31st) and 22.4 on KR (25th). The Jags allowed 6.9 on PR (6th), but 24.3 on KR (18th) must improve. JAX's ST improvement likely hinges on the leg of its rookie punter.

OVERVIEW - Mike Mularkey became the franchise's 3rd HC after Jack Del Rio was fired following 9 so-so seasons. New Owner Shahid Khan wanted an offensive minded coach and the former BUF HC and long-time OC fits the bill. Interestingly, Mularkey was the other finalist in '03 when Del Rio was hired by previous owner Wayne Weaver. Mularkey was 14-18 in 2 years with the Bills and then left after going 5-11 in '05 when Marv Levy took over as the team's chief executive. He went to MIA as OC but was demoted after 1 year to TE coach when Nick Saban quit and Cam Cameron was hired. A year later, Mularkey jump-started his career in ATL as the OC and the Falcons went to the playoffs 3 times in 4 years. He has never made the Super Bowl in 27 years as a player or a coach, but the Jaguars think Mularkey is the leader they need for the rebirth of a franchise which has won just one playoff game s/'99. He will not call the plays, instead hiring long-time CIN and SEA OC Bob Bratkowski to run the offense. The key for both Mularkey and Bratkowski is whether they can get Blaine Gabbert on track after he was the worst-ranked passer in the league his rookie year. The Jaguars also had the worst offense in the league even though they had the NFL's leading rusher in Maurice Jones-Drew. Mularkey retained 5 members of the D staff, including DC Mel Tucker, who was the team's interim HC for 5 gms LY but was bypassed for the HC job. Tucker could have left for MIN but said he has some unfinished business after taking the defense from 28th to 6th LY. In '11, the Jags simply struggled to score pts. After an opening day win over TEN, they lost 5 straight gms, scoring just 56 points in the process. They could manage only 4 FG's against BAL in gm 7 but somehow managed to come away with a 12-7 upset because of a fine defensive performance. They lost 7 of their final 9 gms, scoring more than 19 only once in a breakout 41-14 win over TB. However, a week after that, they lost 41-14 to ATL, their only really bad defensive showing of the season. A 19-13 victory over IND closed out the season. There are some factors pointing upwards (see Division Forecast) but I will chalk this up as a rebuilding year as they have a new HC, have lost more than they gained in Free Agency and I am still not sold on Gabbert as a franchise QB. Jacksonville may have trouble topping last year's 5 win total.

INDIANAPOLIS COLTS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - Peyton Manning is out, and the fortunes of the Colts now ride on the passing arm of Andrew Luck, the #1 overall pick in the draft. Whether or not Luck will ever reach the greatness of Manning remains to be seen. For now, IND will be happy if Luck can progress throughout the year and match what Manning did as a rookie, when the Colts finished 3-13 and Manning threw for 3,739 yds and 26 td's, but with 28 int's (most of career). Luck's problem is that he has no supporting cast. IND's offense is more like that of an expansion team, so he will struggle at first. Luck has presence, is a very good overall athlete with size, a cerebral approach, good arm strength and mobility. He is deadly accurate, especially in the red zone. With Manning sidelined LY, the Colts went through 3 QB's, none of whom are still with the team. Veteran Kerry Collins started the season but was KO'd with concussions. Curtis Painter took over but struggled mightily when teams brought pressure. Dan Orlovsky was signed and finished the season as the starter, leading the team to its only 2 victories. QB play was awful no matter who was behind C. The 3 players combined for a 72.2 QBR with an avg of only 6.0 ypa (14-14 ratio) while absorbing 35 sks. IND ranked 30th in off (286.8 ypg) and 27th in passing (187.2 ypg) while scoring only 15.2 ppg (T-28th). It's impossible to say how many gms IND would have won with Manning in the lineup, but he clearly masked a lot more issues than many knew. TY the Colts have acquired former Lion Drew Stanton as the bkp. He seemed to have had more upside than DET's other bkp Shaun Hill, but Stanton never performed very well when given the chance. In 13 career gms (4 st), he has thrown for 1,158 yds (55.6%, 5-9). Stanton is smart, big and athletic with a strong arm. The likely #3 QB is #7DC Chandler Harnish from Northern Illinois. The Indiana native was the MAC OPOY and is a good athlete who needs to step up his play to the NFL level. Luck has been called the best QB prospect to come out of the college ranks in nearly 30 years. He has all the tools and pedigree to be a star and should eventually do well as the heir to Manning's legacy. He will be coached by Bruce Arians, the IND OC who interestingly enough was Manning's QB coach back in '98. However, wins won't come until the team builds a talent base around its franchise QB.

QB ANDREW LUCK #12 6-4 235 Age: 23 Rookie
1st round, 1st pick out of Stanford. 3Y st'r, 2x All-American, 2x conf OPOY, twice finished #2 in the Heisman voting at SU.

Drew Stanton #5 6-3 230 Age: 28 6th Yr (0/0)
#2DC DET '07 (Michigan St) - Did not play LY w/DET. 3 st, 6 gm, 780 pass yd (58.0%), 4-3 ratio, 6.6 ypa, 78.4 QBR, 113 rush yd (6.3), 6 sk w/DET '10.

RUNNING BACKS - The Colts have not averaged 100 ypg rushing s/'07. LY they ranked 26th at 99.6 ypg, and they had only 8 rushing td's. With Manning out of the lineup, the offense tried to be more run-based but didn't make it work well enough. Typically allergic to FB's, they used 3 different ones but ran worse with a FB on the field than without one. With Joseph Addai gone TY, the workload goes to Donald Brown and Delone Carter. Brown finally displayed some of the skills that impressed the team when it drafted him in the 1st RD in '09. He led the team in 2011 with 645 yds (4.8) with 5 td's. Brown has had inj's and also struggled picking up blitzes, which limited his workload. He needs to develop his receiving skills. Brown had a career day vs TEN in gm 14 when he rushed for 161 yds (10.1). He is explosive and could give the Colts the big-play element they've lacked at RB for yrs. A #4DC in '11, Carter was a surprise as he unseated Addai and even outplayed Brown at times. He played in all 16 gms, rushing for 377 yds (3.7) while scoring 2 td's, though he did have some fumble problems. The new coaching staff thinks he could be ready for a breakout year. Carter is also a power runner vision and a good change of direction. At 5'9" 225, he's also a willing blocker. He will push Brown for the starting job. Deji Karim was the Jaguars' 2nd leading rusher LY with 130 yards and is also a KR. Rookie Vick Ballard is a between the tkls runner who should push for PT. There are 2 FB's on the roster in Ryan Mahaffey and Chris Gronkowski, who was on IR most of LY. The Brown-Carter duo should be the focus to take the pressure off of a rookie QB.

RB DONALD BROWN #31 5-10 210 Age: 25 4th Yr (2/16)

Delone Carter #34 5-9 225 Age: 25 2nd Yr (2/16)
#4DC IND '11 (Syracuse) - 377 rush yd (3.7), 2 td, 18 rec yd (3.6), 19 rush FD, 13 tfl, 8.6% of off as a rookie LY.

FB RYAN MAHAFFEY #47 6-2 255 Age: 24 2nd Yr (0/5)

RECEIVERS - With the QB situation in so much upheaval in 2011, the stats produced by the Colts' veteran receiving corps were obviously down. Starters Reggie Wayne and Pierre Garcon played well when given an opportunity. Many thought it would be Wayne's swan song, but he re-signed during the offseason. LY he caught only 75 passes for 960 yards (12.8, 4 td), snapping his streak of 7 straight 1,000 yd seasons and dropping below 100 catches for the 1st time since 2008. Wayne is 33, but remains one of the NFL's best WR's. He will serve as the veteran presence for rookie QB Andrew Luck. Garcon and Anthony Gonzalez were lost in FA, so the other starter will be Austin Collie, who caught 54 passes for 514 yds and 1 td (35 1st downs) while playing the slot WR. A #4DC in '09, this will be his 1st yr as a full-time st'r. He excels at getting open in the EZ (10 td in 2009-10) and has nice instincts to deviate routes on scramble plays, both of which will greatly help Luck. Neither Wayne nor Collie is a threat for the long ball, so the Colts drafted undersized T.Y. Hilton out of FIU in the 3rd RD. Hilton has real 4.3 speed though he can also play slot receiver and return kicks. Former Ram Donnie Avery was signed but has to show he can get back to his 2008-09 form with STL. A #2DC in '08, he caught 100 passes for 1,263 yds and 8 td's in his first 2 seasons, but he missed all of 2010 with an ACL injury. Last year he was released in the cut to 53 and signed by TEN. He was inactive for 8 games and played mostly ST's in the 2H of the season, catching only 3 passes. He's not very physical and doesn't go over the middle, but he works the sidelines well. Another 2012 DC, LaVon Brazill (6th RD) will get a long look on ST's first but could also contribute offensively. The Colts let TE's Dallas Clark and Jacob Tamme go, replacing them with 2 draft picks in Coby Fleener (2nd) and Dwayne Allen (3rd). Fleener teamed with Luck at Stanford and hopes to bring the same kind of production to IND. He's very similar to Clark in that he's not a classic in-line TE, usually lining up at WR. He's not much of a blocker, but is a speedy threat down the seams. He runs good routes, changes direction to the ball and gets yac. With the NFL now revolving around pass-catching TE's (and every team trying to copy NE), Fleener will become Luck's outlet receiver. The 6'3" 255 lb Allen was the Mackey Award winner in 2011 as the best collegiate TE. He's a physical player who can catch and block, and the rookie tandem allows the Colts to play 2-TE formations. This is the offense's best unit in 2012.

OFFENSIVE LINE - The play of the IND OL was shaky much of LY because of the predictability of the offense while playing from behind so often. The ground game averaged only 4.2 yds per carry (18th), and the unit allowed 35 sks, a 6.6% that ranked 14th, which was not bad, considering the circumstances. IND ranked last with a TOP of only 26:33, the red zone offense was 27th (42.1%) and the 3rd down rate of 34.6% was 23rd. The Colts got good performances from LT Anthony Castonzo, the team's top DC in '11 (22nd overall) and from C Jeff Saturday, who was lost in FA. The rest of the OL's play was inconsistent at best. Inj's and up-and-down play caused a revolving door at both OG spots and RT. There will be 4 new st'rs from the end of LY. Castonzo looked impressive despite his lost time (out 4, high ankle sprain). He all'd only 3 sks in his 1st 6 gms, but his total of 7.5 sks for the yr was a few too many, and he showed a susceptibility to inside pressure. He has fine size and athleticism, good initial quickness and he secures the edge well. Joe Reitz will start at LG, but he is better suited to be a bkp. He saw his first action LY after 3Y on the practice squad in BAL, MIA and IND. He started 9 and is still very raw. Replacing Saturday will be Samson Satele, which is a huge downgrade. Satele started 58 gms in the L4Y after being a #2 DC by MIA in '07. He is a good pass protector who adjusts well, but has short arms and lacks the girth to be a major factor in the run game. LY's #2DC Ben Ijalana will start at RG if he's fully recovered from the torn ACL which he suffered in the 4th game. He did not make any starts LY and played only a handful of snaps in the 1st 4. IND has high hopes for him because he has a nasty streak and the kind of spd, strength and coordination needed to play G. However, Ijalana is very inexperienced vs top competition having played college FB at Villanova. Ryan Diem had started at RT s/'02, but he retired in the offssn and Winston Justice takes over. Justice was acquired in a trade with PHI. A #6DC in '06, he started for the Eagles in 2009-10, but he rarely saw the field LY because PHI OL coach Howard Mudd prefers smaller linemen who have mobility (like he did as IND's OL cch from '98-'09). Justice has size and mobility and the physical tools to be a solid RT, but he's inconsistent. He will be an improvement over LY's 16 gm st'r, Jeff Linkenbach, who now moves back to a bkp role. Linkenbach started 4 at LT and 12 at RT LY. Depth on the inside will be provided by another ex-Eagle, Mike McGlynn, who can play at both G and C, and ex-DEN and MIN Seth Olsen. This year's #7DC, Justin Anderson, is a big, physical OT who could be a bit of a project. Look for this unit to struggle in 2012.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - The Colts have switched to a 3-4 D under new HC Chuck Pagano and DC Greg Manusky, which means the team's DL will have a new look in more ways than one. The franchise's 2 sack artists of the last decade - Dwight Freeney and Robert Mathis - have been moved to OLB. Replacing them on the outside of the DL are Cory Redding and Drake Nevis, though Freeney and Mathis will be expected to reach their old sk totals from the middle of the D. Redding is a 9 yr vet who provides the experience this unit will need. He comes to IND after 2Y with BAL, where he played for Pagano. He primary reputation is as a run-stuffer, though he has some pass rush skills (7.5 sks L2Y). A good but not great athlete, he's versatile and is a good leader in the locker room. Nevis was a #3DC a year ago who played in only 5 gms because of a back inj. He was drafted as a DT but fits the DE role better at 6'1" 294. Nevis gets a good jump off the snap and can get into the backfield. He's not sturdy or powerful, but he can run down plays and make an impact. The Colts needed to find an athletic run-stopping NT to anchor the middle of the DL, but for now they've given the job to Antonio Johnson. He's started 33 gms the L4Y after being cut by TEN, where he was a #5DC in '07. Johnson is a solid, physical presence who has a nose for the ball but he also loses his balance and gets pushed backward at times, not a good thing for a NT. IND picked up another ex-Raven in Brandon McKinney, who will rotate with Johnson. McKinney is a 7 yr vet who has a classic NT build at 6'2" 345. He started only 4 gms for BAL, but he knows Pagano's D and will help vs the run. Fili Moala started at DT the L2Y but will play behind Redding at RDE this year. He is versatile but still unpolished and needs to improve his overall technique and vision. Ricardo Mathews is another reserve who saw increased playing time in his 2nd yr. This year's #5DC, NT Josh Chapman, is coming off knee surg but will push for a starting job if healthy. Don't look for the Colts to get many sks out of this unit. If it can hold the POA and keep blk'rs from getting to the LB's, this group will be a success. More so, IND needs to improve its run D, which was roasted repeatedly LY, ranking 29th vs the run (143.9 ypg,4.3). That marked the 10th time in the L14Y the Colts finished 20th or lower in run D and 2012 will be the 11th.

LINEBACKERS - Dwight Freeney and Robert Mathis move from DE to OLB and team with Pat Angerer and Kavell Conner, making this the strongest part of the D. Mathis and Freeney both had outstanding seasons LY, earning trips to the Pro Bowl. They have both played with their hands off the ground so much that they will be major targets when forced into coverage. IND has made 30 or fewer sks in 5 of the L6Y and got just 29 LY. Freeney and Mathis combined for 18 sks LY after getting 21 the year before. Freeney has some of the best spd and spin moves in the NFL, but he can also overpower on his bull rush. Playing more in space might actually help him get to the QB. LY he made 8.5 sks, his 1st season in single digits s/'07. He now has 102.5 for his career, 3rd among active players. Mathis seems to be the perfect fit for Pagano's 3-4 D. No longer a 1-dimensional defender, he is the better run support player of the two. Mathis has 83.5 career sks. He is an instinctive reactor who can get into the backfield or stop ballcarriers for negative yardage. Another DE-turned-OLB is Jerry Hughes who has struggled in the Colts 4-3. A #1DC in '10, he has made only 1 start in 24 gms played with 1 sk and 21 tkls. At 6'2" 255 he is much better suited to the Ravens style of defense being installed. He has the most promising upside of all the players during this transition as it takes him back to the role he played at TCU. IND lost 2 good players in long time MLB Gary Brackett and OLB Phillip Wheeler. Brackett missed most of LY (shoulder) and was released, while Wheeler, who had 84 tkls in '11, signed w/OAK in FA. Starting inside in the new 3-4 will be Angerer and Conner. Angerer slid to the middle from SLB and proved to be a tackling machine who consistently shed blk'rs and covered ground despite the fact that the DL in front of him and the DB's behind him often didn't play reliably. A 2010 #2DC, he was among the league's leaders with 148 tkls. He is instinctive and proved to be pretty good in pass coverage. Conner has come into his own after being drafted in the 7th round 2 yrs ago. He's started 24 gms at WLB and is an intense and physical LB who always seems to be around the ball. He did struggle in pass coverage, so the move inside is beneficial. AJ Edds will be the bkp at ILB. He has little experience after tearing his ACL as a rookie with MIA in '10. TY's #7DC, Tim Fugger, is a college DE who is expected to make the transition to stand up LB.

7th round, 214th pick out of Vanderbilt.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - LY the IND pass D ranked 15th, all'g 227.0 ypg, which wasn't bad. The problem was on the critical plays which could have either stopped a scoring drive or gotten the ball back for the offense. The red zone D was 31st, allowing td's on 61.4% of the opponents' possessions, and the 3rd Dn D was 31st (50.0%). Another problem was that the Cover-2 scheme played by the secondary didn't fit the personnel and DC Larry Coyer was fired with a month to go in the season. Too often the secondary was torched when the pass rush couldn't get to the QB. If the 3-4 scheme is more successful in getting pressure on opposing QB's, the pass D will hold up better. IND could have several new st'rs this season. Jerraud Powers and Kevin Thomas will be at CB, with Antoine Bethea and ex-Raven Tom Zbikowski at S. LY IND was forced to play young CB's in Chris Rucker and Terrence Johnson who just weren't ready for full-time use. Powers has been impressive at times but has had problems staying healthy the last couple of years. A #3DC in 2009 and 3 yr st'r, he was lost to a dislocated elbow at midssn. Powers has only 5 int's in his career. At 5'10" 192, he doesn't play a physical game. Thomas moves into the starting lineup in his 3rd yr, taking over for the departed Jacob Lacey. A #3DC in '10, Thomas missed his rookie yr (knee) and is still learning the pro game. Rucker started 4 gms after being drafted in the 6th RD. Johnson was an undrafted rookie who was forced into action at slot CB before being inj'd. Bethea has started every game in the L4Y and is a good tkl'r in the back end who has averaged more than 100 tkls a season. Bethea had 7 int's from 2008-10 but none LY. Zkibowski started 14 times for BAL in the L3Y and moves into the SS role. He will come up and stop the run. David Caldwell took over for an inj'd Melvin Bullitt and started 13 gms LY but moves back into a reserve role. Jermale Hines and Joe Lefeged provide more depth, but Lefeged is more of a KR specialist. IND finished #31 (103.9) in the defensive QBR LY and there's virtually nowhere to go but up.

CB KEVIN THOMAS #21 6-0 192 Age: 26 3rd Yr (5/9)
#3DC IND '10 (USC) - 33 tkl, 3 pbu LY. Sustained knee inj in rookie camp and DNP in '10.

SPECIAL TEAMS - It's not a surprise that the Colts' ST's have been 31st in our rankings in each of the L3Y. With PK Adam Vinatieri and P Pat McAfee, IND at least has experience in their K game. Vinatieri had an outstanding 2011 handling FG's and PAT's, but he scored only 93 pts because of the anemic offense. He was 23-27 on FG (85.2%) incl 10-13 from 40+. He didn't get many opportunities, but Vinatieri is one of the best clutch K's in the NFL. McAfee rebounded from a sophomore slump to be one of the better P's and KO specialists in the league. He had a 46.6 avg and 39.2 net (14th), with 21 In20 and only 3 TB for a In20/TB of +18 (18th). There are still major issues in the Colts' continued efforts to find a reliable PR and KR. Joe Lefeged averaged only 4.7 on 9 PR's while splitting duty with Pierre Garcon and just 18.6 on 31 KR's. The Colts desperately hope #3DC T.Y. Hilton can handle both jobs because of his ability to break big plays. Overall, IND was last on PR (3.4) and 19th on KR (18.6) while the cover teams weren't much better (19th on PR and 31st on KR). Unless Hilton has a big yr this unit is likely to finish near the basement yet again.

K ADAM VINATIERI #4 6-0 202 Age: 39 17th Yr (16 gms) UFA NE '96 (South Dakota St) - 23-27 FG, L/53, 24-24 PAT, 93 ttl pts, 77 KO (67.1), 8 TB (10.4%, #32 NFL), ADS 28.3 (#31 NFL) LY. 16 gm, 26-28 G, L/48, 51-51 PAT, 129 ttl pts, 91 KO (65.0), 8 TB (9.9%), ADS 29.0 '10.

Head Coach - Chuck Pagano, 1st year
Pagano was the secondary cch at CLE and OAK then took the NC DC job ('07). He returned to the NFL and has been at BAL the L4Y incl as the DC LY.

Offensive Coordinator - Bruce Arians, 1st year
Arians was the Temple HC for 6Y and got the job at 31 yrs old. He went between the NFL and college and was the QB cch here from 1998-'00. He was at PIT S/'04 incl as OC the L5Y.

QB Coach - Clyde Christensen, 11th year
Christensen joined this staff in '02 as the WR cch. He took over the OC duties the L3Y and was retained as the QB cch.

RB Coach - David Walker, 1st year
Walker was a RB cch at Syracuse (10Y) and Pitt (2005-'10). LY he was at Maryland also as a RB cch. This is his first NFL position.

WR Coach - Charlie Williams, 1st year
Williams joins the Colts after spending the L5Y as NC's WR cch. He started as an asst under Tony Dungy at TB.

TE Coach - Alfredo Roberts, 1st year
Roberts has previously served as a TE cch with TB ('09-'11), CLE ('07-'08) and JAX ('03-'06).

OL Coach - Harold Goodwin, 1st year
Goodwin started as an OL cch at E Mich and C Mich. In 2004 he was a CHI OL asst and the QC OL cch at PIT the L5Y.

Defensive Coordinator - Greg Manusky, 1st year
Manusky was an NFL LB for 12Y. He was a LB cch for WAS and SD and was SF's DC from 2007-'10 and SD's DC LY.

DL Coach - Gary Emanuel, 1st year
Emanuel was a college cch S/'81 with the exception of '05 & '06 as the SF DL cch. He was the Purdue DL cch the L2Y and DC LY.

LB Coach - Jeff Fitzgerald, 1st year
Fitzgerald has been a LB cch his entire career. He's been in the NFL s/'98 with WAS, ARZ, BAL and CIN the L4Y.

DB Coach - Mike Gillhammer, 1st year
Gillhammer was a NYG cch from '97-'00 and a CAR Saf coach from 2004-'09. The last 2 years he was the Illinois DB coach.

Special Teams Coordinator - Marwan Maalouf, 1st year
Maalouf joins HC Pagano from BAL. He was an asst ST cch for the Ravens for 4Y and was with CLE from 2004-'06.

OVERVIEW - Losing Peyton Manning to a neck inj LY figured to drop the Colts from 11 or 12 wins a season to 4 or 5, so the fall to 2-14 showed how little talent there was here (as well as how valuable Manning really was). HC Jim Caldwell was fired, though it was hardly his fault that Manning was unable to play. Now IND is in the midst of one of the most drastic rebuilding campaigns in recent NFL history. They have completely overhauled the entire franchise, from GM to HC to practically the entire roster. With owner Jim Irsay clearly in charge, there is a new GM in Ryan Grigson and a new HC in former BAL DC Chuck Pagano. More than 30 players were released so growing pains are certainly in order. In the two decades before Manning arrived in town, the Colts won 116 gms, 1 division title and made the playoffs 3 times. With Manning taking snaps, IND won 150 gms, 8 division titles, 1 AFC championship and the franchise's first SB win since moving from Baltimore in '84. LY the Colts lost their first 13 gms before winning 2 of their L/3 to keep from going winless. The team tied an NFL record by going 8 full gms without ever holding a lead. The players battled all season and never gave up despite numerous injuries that put too many backups in key positions, especially on D. Pagano hired former PIT OC Bruce Arians to run the off. He was Manning's QB coach from 1998-2000, so he knows what Luck is going to face. Greg Manusky is the new DC, but he was fired from the same job after 1 year in SD. Andrew Luck becomes the new face of the franchise, but he clearly can't do it on his own. There are many factors pointing to the Colts topping LY's win total (see division write-up), but it's concerning that in my unit rankings they are #25 or lower in 6 of 8.

Power Rating 99.29

In '08, injuries to the LB unit really hurt the D which fell to #25. The offense was only #11 (-1 ypg on yr). SD had SEVEN close losses (by 2, 1, 7, 5, 1, 3, 6) and was 4-8 while DEN was 7-5. The Chargers won their last 4 while DEN lost their final 3. An 8-8 SD squad upset 12-4 IND again on the road before losing at PIT. In '09 things went in their favor as they were #10 on off and #16 on D (+33 ypg) but benefitted from +5 net close wins, +8 in TO's, a 5 win increase over '08 and an off ypp of 12.7 to get to 13-3. This time they lost to the Jets at home in the playoffs. In '10 I pointed out that all the above factors pointed SD towards a weaker record but it was still surprising they did not win the West. Since '70 only 8 teams have ever led the league in both offense and defense at any point during the season (even for just 1 week). SD was #1 and #1 eight of seventeen weeks and finished that way but did not even make the playoffs due to poor ST's play! In losses to KC, SEA, OAK and NE they had a combined 1776-926 yd edge! Their receiving corps also missed a combined 36 gms. LY they surprisingly slipped to just #6 on off and #16 on def and finished tied for the West Title at 8-8 but were actually eliminated prior to week 16. They had been known for slow starts but opened '11 at 4-1 (#6 off, #5 def) before stunningly losing 6 straight (by 6.2 ppg) then won 3 in a row by 23.7 ppg incl vs BAL. They were the only team in the West to outgain their foes at +46.5 ypg. They were -7 in TO's, had 2 net close losses and had 53 starts lost to injury LY. I will freely admit I picked the Chargers to win the West in each of the last 6 years and SD did win 4 and tied for first once. That is two straight years I missed them winning the West outright but they have the talent and a softer schedule than DEN and take it outright this year.

Power Rating 98.48

In '08 the Chiefs purged the roster of vets and were the NFL's youngest team with 75 sts by rookies. I projected a 3-13 record but KC went 2-14 (#24 off, #31 D, -84.5 ypg). In '09 they had a new GM, HC and plenty of new players incl QB Matt Cassel and improved to 4-12. In '10 I forecasted them 2nd in the West (most had them 3rd or 4th). KC improved to #12 on off and #14 on D. They went 10-5 to wrap up the West, resting starters in a loss to OAK. They were mauled by BAL (outgained 390-161) in the playoffs at Arrowhead (7-1 at home reg ssn). KC beat ONE tm with a winning record in '10, only had 18 sts lost to injury and while a stronger team, their schedule went from #32 to #3. LY I pegged them to drop to 7-9 and that is exactly where they finished. KC opened the year with losses to a pair of teams that had losing records in '10 by a comb 89-10 score! After an 0-3 start they won 4 in a row but were drilled by Miami 31-3. After 3 losses to '11 playoff teams they upset a Cutler and Forte-less Chicago on the road. After another blowout (37-10 loss to Jets) they fired Haley and with Crennel as HC they ended GB's unbeaten season and almost knocked DEN out of the playoffs winning two of their last 3. KC was #27 on off and #11 on def and TY the schedule gets a lot softer (#10 to #24). They also went from 10 wins to 7 (-3 wins) and had 54 starts lost to injury and an off YPP of 23.5, all signs pointing upward. KC is a solidly improved team and the schedule sets up for a slower start and a fast finish. They come off of grueling B2B national TV road trips to San Diego and Pittsburgh but they could be favored in 6 of their final 7 games. That late season surge could be enough to get them to the postseason if they pull an upset or two at the beginning of the year.

DEN had just ONE losing season in a decade (7-9 in '07) prior to 2008. With 3 weeks left in '08 they were 8-5 while SD opened 4-8 so their magic number was one. Amazingly they lost their last 3 and missed the playoffs. They switched to a 32 yr old HC (Josh McDaniels) and parted ways with QB Cutler. DEN got off to a remarkable 6-0 start (#9 off, #2 def) but the collapse happened again as they went 2-8 but finished a respectable #15 on off and #7 on D. In '10 I called for them to have their worst record s/'90 at 5-11. They absorbed a franchise worst (51 yrs) 12th loss vs SD at home (trailed 33-14). Last year they got a new HC in veteran John Fox, plus DL Elvis Dumervil (17 sks '09) returned from injury, added #1DC Von Miller and had 3 net close losses in '10 so improvement was expected. They opened 1-4 and then turned it over to Tim Tebow and his weekly miracles became a national story. They had wins of 3, 7, 4, 3, 3 and 3 in a 7-1 run with many of them in comeback fashion. They lost their last 3 but backed into the playoffs at 8-8. They got a dramatic OT win vs PIT but their luck ran out at NE (outgained 509-252). The Broncos swung for the fences in the offseason and Peyton Manning must like their chances as he signed and Denver became the AFC co-favorite to win the Super Bowl overnight. They were -12 in TO's LY and with Manning should have a positive ratio TY. They did have 3 net close wins LY, were -41.2 ypg (-4.1 in net yd indicator), were +4 wins over '10, had only 21 starts lost to injury but their sked is now the 6th toughest. I would love to see Peyton Manning in the Super Bowl (great story) but I go against the grain and say the Broncos do not repeat as AFC West Champs.

PHIL STEELE'S POWER POLL

Power Rating 91.91

In 2002, Oakland looked like the best team in football and was favored in the Super Bowl but was crushed by their former HC despite having the NFL's #1 off and #11 D. They went just 29-83 over the next 7 yrs. In 2009 the Raiders suffered an amazing 7th straight season of 11+ losses despite benefitting from 4 close wins although they were -13 in TO's. Oakland was #31 on off and #26 on D (-96 ypg). In '10 they turned to ex-WAS QB Jason Campbell. I called for them to snap that streak of 11 loss seasons and they actually got to 8-8 and were #10 on off and #11 on defense! OAK was the first team in NFL history to go 6-0 vs their division and not make the playoffs. Last year they lost their top defensive player, CB Asomugha and 3 starting OL's and did not make any big signings. OAK had some impressive wins like beating the NYJ, HOU, SD and CHI and then winning at Arrowhead. They were 7-4 despite making a major QB change with Carson Palmer and had control of the West but lost 4 of their last 5. This time they beat all 3 West teams on the road but lost to all 3 at home including the finale vs SD and missed out on the playoffs by percentage points. They let go their HC and bring in Dennis Allen who was the DC for Denver (#20 D LY). They also let go players who combined for 101 starts LY while adding players who started 31 games. OAK was #9 on off but #29 on defense and did not have a DC in the first or 2nd round. OAK had FIVE net close wins LY. Of the AFC West teams, Oakland made the least improvement. All those factors have me calling for a 10th straight non-winning season for the Raiders who match CLE for the longest non-playoff streak as they have not been in playoffs since that Super Bowl in 2002.

SAN DIEGO CHARGERS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - While Philip Rivers surpassed the 4,000 yard passing mark for a 4th consecutive season in 2011, the start of the year definitely didn't go as he had planned as for the first time in his career, Rivers was a turnover-machine throwing 17 int over the first 10 games (career-high 3 vs GB) while also making a few crucial 4Q mistakes during the team's 6 game losing streak. The biggest of those miscues came in an OT loss to KC, a game in which Rivers and the offense were driving in the final minutes to set up a GW FG attempt when Rivers fumbled the exchange from center, forcing the extra session and eventual loss. He was finally able to find consistency late in the season as he threw just 3 of his career-high 20 int over the final 6 games (12 td passes in that span). Rivers has played in every game since he was named the team's starter back in '06 so it was no surprise that backup Billy Volek saw just 11 plays behind center last year with no pass attempts. Volek was cut in the offseason and the Chargers chose to bring back former 3rd RD DC Charlie Whitehurst after he spent the previous 2 seasons as a member of the Seahawks (4 st, 805 pass yd, 54% 2Y). Rivers is the cornerstone of the franchise and should rebound after an underwhelming 2011. He remains the best NFL QB without a ring.

RUNNING BACKS - The Chargers are not afraid to move up in the draft to get players they want and they did just that to secure Ryan Mathews in 2010. SD sorely needed a fresh back to center their run game around as Mathews was viewed as a RB with striking similarities to former Charger great LaDainian Tomlinson based on his impressive track record at Fresno St. Mathews' rookie season was filled with trials and tribulations as he had problems grasping the offense (specifically pass protection) and missed 4 games with an ankle injury that he suffered in the preseason. Mathews would finish 2nd on the team in rushing during his inaugural campaign with 678 (4.3) and 7 td's. Mike Tolbert actually began 2010 as the team's backup FB but quickly earned the coaches trust running the ball and wound up leading the Chargers in rushing (735, 4.0, 11 td) including three 100 yard rushing efforts before landing on IR with a neck/shoulder injury. HC Norv Turner stated prior to LY that he would go with whoever was moving the ball more successfully and while Tolbert rushed for 490 (4.0) and 8 td's, Mathews took over the main duties eclipsing the 1,000 yard barrier on the season (1091, 4.9, 6 td) despite being absent for 2 games with injury. Another added aspect out of the SD backfield was their ability to catch the ball as Mathews and Tolbert combined for 104 receptions and nearly 900 yards. Curtis Brinkley (101, 3.4) earned a spot start with Mathews on the shelf and appears to be the frontrunner to serve as the backup in 2012 with Tolbert leaving via FA (CAR). Jacob Hester is a decent blocking FB with some receiving skills but he's not a big play threat. Hester may take a backseat in his FB role this season as the Chargers bring in Le'Ron McClain who joins the club after spending a season in KC. McClain did post a 902 yard rushing season in '08 with the Ravens but his role here is expected to be more of a lead blocker for Mathews. Turner expects Mathews (steadily improving in pass protection) to have a breakout season in 2012 as his bad luck with previous injuries are hopefully a thing of the past. Expect Mathews to deliver the best year of his young career but with Rivers still at QB, the RB's still take a backseat to the SD passing game.

RB RYAN MATHEWS #24 6-0 218 Age: 25 3rd Yr (14/14)
#1DC SD '10 (Fresno St) - Turner fully expects a breakout yr. 1091 rush yd (4.9), 6 td, 52 rush FD, 18 tfl, 17.3% of off LY.
9 st, 12 gm (inj), 678 rush yd (4.3), 145 rec yd (6.6), 25 rush FD, 13.0% of off as a rookie in '10.

Curtis Brinkley #44 5-9 208 Age: 27 4th Yr (1/10)

RECEIVERS - After an excellent 2009 where the Chargers had two 1,100 yard receivers, they looked loaded at the position again in 2010 as the team had an abundance of big play receiving targets with Vincent Jackson, Malcom Floyd and Antonio Gates. Things simply didn't go as planned as they had 11 different WR/TE's start a game while Jackson played in just 5 due to a suspension and holdout. Gates led the team in receiving with 782 yards (15.6) to go along with 10 td's however a foot injury forced him out of 6 games. Floyd (also plagued by injuries) was the only other player to pull in over 700 yards on the year (717, 19.4). The Chargers had a winning offseason following the lockout a year ago as locker room favorite Floyd opted to stay in SD after testing the FA market. Jackson was franchise-tagged so the "big 3" returned yet again. Jackson returned to his preferred role as the team's top receiver recording yet another 1,100 yard season while for a 2nd straight year, both Gates (778, 12.2) and Floyd (856, 19.9) missed significant time with injury. The absence of the 2 early in the season could have been linked to the troubles that Rivers had in making numerous poor decisions. In Gates' absence, Randy McMichael shed his block-first mentality to become a solid receiving threat while rookie 3rd round DC Vincent Brown started 4 games and recorded 329 yards (17.3). The unit goes through a pretty significant face lift for the upcoming season as Jackson moved on in FA (TB) and joining the group are signees Eddie Royal and Robert Meachem who should both make immediate impacts. HC Turner deemed Gates (surpassed HOF and Charger WR Coach Charlie Joiner as the team's all-time reception leader) healthy in May following 2 seasons with a nagging foot injury which should also result in McMichael going back to his role as blocker in 2-TE sets. Despite the loss of Jackson, the Chargers did a good job in restocking this unit.

OFFENSIVE LINE - In 2009 the Chargers OL was criticized for its poor run blocking as the team finished 31st avg 89 ypg (worst since 2000). In 2010 they improved on the run game (113 ypg, 4.0, 15th) but the pass blocking regressed. After allowing 26 sacks in '09 (1 for every 20 pass att's), the Chargers gave up 38 sacks (1 for every 14.3 pass att's). Despite playing musical chairs with the starting lineup last year due to injuries and poor play (6 different lineups), the OL improved allowing 30 sacks (1 for every 19.4 att's) and 117 ypg (4.3) on the ground (16th). After sitting out 5 games the year prior with a contract dispute, LT Marcus McNeill started the first 9 games of the 2011 season before being placed on IR with a neck injury. With McNeill on the shelf, the Chargers were fortunate to land Jared Gaither for the rest of the year as he was waived by the Chiefs a week prior due to a costly penalty. Gaither went nearly 3 seasons without a start (11 in '09 w/BAL) but settled right in at the vacated position allowing just 3 pressures and 0 sacks in his 5 starts. McNeill wasn't the only starter on the unit that saw his season end prematurely as LG Kris Dielman (one of NFL's nastier run blockers) suffered a severe concussion (seizure on plane ride home) and went on IR after 6. RG Louis Vasquez missed 2 games with an ankle injury as C Nick Hardwick and RT Jeromey Clary were the only 2 OL that started all 16 games. With Dielman out, Tyronne Green (favorite among the coaches, nearly beat out Vasquez in camp) slid into his spot and appears to be the frontrunner here again in 2012 as Dielman has retired. Gaither is also expected to retain the LT spot as McNeill was waived prior to the draft. Hardwick, Vasquez and Clary return and added to the mix are FA acquisitions Rex Hadnot and Mario Henderson along with rookie center David Molk. Backups Brandyn Dombrowski and Stephen Schilling also return and while the group does lose a pair of quality OL, the unit did get a jump-start without them at the end of LY and should be able to continue that success this year.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - Despite having a deep DL rotation, the SD run defense has been pretty suspect at times. After finishing #4 in the NFL in 2010 at 93.8 ypg (3.7), the Chargers took a step back a season ago with the league's #20 ranked unit allowing 122 ypg (4.4). SD used their 1st Rd pick of the '11 draft to bring in Corey Liuget to eventually take over the role at DE for veteran Jacques Cesaire. Liuget grasped the spot sooner than expected as he opened the year as the team's starter at DE. Another former 1st rounder, Luis Castillo was expected to start opposite Liuget at the other DE spot but after a broken leg in the opener (went on IR), Vaughn Martin got the call for the remainder of 2011. After playing sparingly almost his entire career, NT Antonio Garay has came of nowhere to be a solid force in the middle of this unit and was re-signed in the offseason due to that performance (57 tkl, 6 tfl). Backing up Garay inside is Cam Thomas who was solid a year ago and may have the talent to be a future starter in the league. Everyone returns to the unit in 2012 along with 2nd RD DC Kendall Reyes who could eventually jump ahead of Castillo and Martin for the starting gig opposite Liuget. This group's performance has been hit and miss over the past couple of years but with the youth at the position along with some veteran leadership, expect SD to climb back into the upper half of the run defense rankings.

LINEBACKERS - San Diego has had a reputation for a strong pass rushing LB corps for years but this unit has now undergone major renovation. After finishing the 2010 season 2nd in the league with 47 sacks (1 for every 10.4 att's), the Chargers lost 3 of their 4 starters in the unit and saw their numbers dip to 32 sacks (1 for every 14.9 att's, 17th). Shaun Phillips was the only returning starter a year ago and while he is a prototype 3-4 edge rusher who plays the run very well on the way to the QB, he missed 4 games and recorded a career-low 3.5 sacks. Phillips wasn't the only LB to miss time with injury in 2011 as fellow OLB Travis LaBoy (FA from SF) missed 2, Larry English missed 11 and rookie 2nd rounder Jonas Mouton missed the entire year with a preseason shoulder issue. GM AJ Smith added Takeo Spikes to the roster to not only continue his dominance as an ILB, but to also instill some leadership on the defense that had been severely lacking. All Spikes did in his first year as a Charger was lead the team in tackles, recording his 5th triple-digit tackling season of his career. 2nd year pro Donald Butler returned from an Achilles injury that derailed his entire rookie year to finish #2 on the team with 96 tackles but as expected, found himself out of position on occasion. With the uncertainty of English's future (missed 19 of the L/32 games w/inj), the Chargers used their 1st RD DC to bolster the OLB position with the selection of Melvin Ingram out of South Carolina. Ingram is a very versatile athlete that actually played QB back in his HS days. Coaches are expecting him to line up behind Phillips for the immediate future to learn the nuances of being a pass-rusher in the NFL. Antwan Barnes was a situational pass rusher a year ago who earned more time than expected with the injuries to Phillips and English. Barnes led the team in sacks with 11 and is expected to serve in the same capacity again this year. LaBoy moves on after just a season here along with Na'il Diggs who recorded 40 tackles as a top reserve. While there weren't a lot of top quality FA OLB prospects this offseason, the Chargers may have grabbed the best available to line up opposite Phillips in Jarret Johnson from BAL. Johnson put together a strong career with the Ravens and remains one of the very best at setting the edge against the run. Rounding out the 2 deep for the upcoming season are FA signee and Demorrio Williams and Mouton who should enter OTA's near 100%. The addition of Johnson and Ingram along with LY's development of Butler should have the Chargers LB corps return to the expected form of seasons prior.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - The Chargers have fielded a tough secondary since 2006 finishing 14th or better in pass defense in 5 of the past 6 years. SD appeared to be in good shape at CB heading into LY with Quentin Jammer and Antoine Cason lining up as the starters. Jammer is not a big splash DB but tends to make plays consistently. While making few mistakes in years past, Jammer's game faded at times late in the year which may have him on a short leash as they enter 2012. Cason had quietly become a good bookend to Jammer over the previous seasons (allowed just 52% of passes thrown at him to be completed in 2010). He actually lost some of that mojo in 2011 and even found himself missing out on a few starts to rookie Marcus Gilchrist. Both were inconsistent and were beaten on a regular basis. While the Chargers front office was very pleased in the re-signing of WR Malcom Floyd following the lockout, they had to be ecstatic that FS Eric Weddle decided to return. Weddle was easily the team MVP in 2011 as he finished with 7 int (GW pick vs KC early in the season) and remains a clutch performer. The Chargers took a shot on Bob Sanders a season ago to fill in as the new SS. Sanders was a former Defensive Player of the Year but played just 9 games while missing 39 over his final 3 years with the Colts. Sanders made it through just 2 games and his career may have sadly come to an end. Replacing Sanders the remainder of the season was Steve Gregory who wound up starting 22 games the last 2 years despite being best known as a special teams ace. Gregory moves on in 2012 and taking over the SS spot is 3rd RD DC Brandon Taylor who started 33 games for LSU the past 3 seasons. SEA's Atari Bigby was also added to create depth and spell Taylor if the occasion arises. The Charger secondary finished 2011 with a #13 rating in pass defense but they were not as good as their ranking as they gave up 12 more pass td's vs int which was 24th LY. With a better front 7 ahead of them and the stabilization of a SS, this unit should show improvement.

SPECIAL TEAMS - Despite one of the most dominant statistical years by a team in years, the 2010 Chargers season was derailed by a horrid performance of their special teams. By seasons end they had allowed 3 KR's and 1 PR for a td, suffered 4 punt blocks (1 deflected) and were dead last in punt coverage (18.9). Some of the struggles on punts were due to the fact that 4 different long snappers ended up on IR. Overall special teams cost the Chargers wins on 3 separate occasions. SD brought in Richard Bisaccia in the offseason to run this unit after spending the previous 9 years with the Buccaneers. In his final 4 years with TB Bisaccia's units finished 7th, 3rd, 1st and 18th and in his first year here, the Chargers jumped up all the way up to our #15 ranking. The #15 finish was impressive considering SD lost K Nate Kaeding in the opener as he was attempting to stop Percy Harvin's 103 yd KR td. Kaeding landed on IR and the Chargers brought in Nick Novak to handle the duties the rest of the year. Novak became the first Charger with 12 FG's of 40+ yds on the season but also hit a cold streak late missing 6 of his final 16 att's (27-34 on season) and may have a TC showdown on the horizon with Kaeding. P Mike Scifres established a new career high in gross average a year ago (47.5) and is widely recognized as a top 10 punter despite the unit's poor showing of 2010. While the SD punt returners never found vast success a season ago, KR Richard Goodman did with a 27.5 avg (4th NFL) including a 105 yd td in the season finale against OAK. With another year under Bisaccia's tutelage, this unit has the opportunity for continued growth.

Head Coach - Norv Turner, 6th year
Turner is the only HC to start his SD tenure with 3 straight div titles and the first since Barry Switzer with DAL (1994-'96).
OC/OL Coach - Hal Hunter, 1st year, 7th overall
Hunter adds the OC title to his duties this year after spending the last six years as the Chargers OL coach.
QB Coach - John Ramsdell, 7th year
Ramsdell joined the Chargers after spending 12 seasons as a member of the Rams coaching staff.
RB Coach - Ollie Wilson, 5th year
Wilson returned to the Chargers in '08 after spending 6 yrs as RB coach in ATL. He was previously here from 1997-2001.
WR Coach - Charlie Joiner, 4th year
This is the HOF WR's 2nd stint here (also here '87-'91).
TE Coach - Jason Michael, 1st year
Michael joins the Chargers after spending the previous 2 seasons as an offensive assistant and QB coach with the 49ers.
DC - John Pagano, 1st year, 11th overall
Pagano takes over the vacated DC position after spending the last seven years as the Chargers' LB coach.
DL Coach - Don Johnson, 4th year
Johnson joined the Chargers staff in 2009 after serving as an assistant with both the Bears and Raiders.
LB Coach - Joe Barry, 1st year
Barry joins the Chargers coaching staff after spending the past 2 seasons serving in the same capacity at USC.
Secondary Coach - Ron Meeks, 1st year
Meeks joins SD after spending the L3Y in CAR ('09-'10 as DC). Prior to CAR, Meeks spent 7 yrs as the DC of the Colts.
Special Teams Coach - Rich Bisaccia, 2nd year
Prior to his arrival in SD last season, Bisaccia spent his entire coaching career with the Buccaneers (2002-2010).

OVERVIEW - After notoriously starting the season off slowly over the past few years the Chargers rebounded to start the 2011 campaign at 4-1 for the first time in Norv Turner's 5 seasons as HC. Like many organizations a year ago the Chargers quickly locked up a large group of their own quality FA's in a lockout-shortened period including WR Malcom Floyd and FS Eric Weddle to help create continuity heading into the year. The Chargers opener didn't get off to a great start as they trailed 17-7 at the half and surrendered a 103 yd KR td (K Nate Kaeding OFY on play) on the opening possession of the season. The SD defense would shut the Vikings down in the 2H (MIN off just 26 yd on 17 plays) and go on to win by 7. After a 14 pt loss to NE (SD turned the ball over inside the NE-35 on 3 occasions), the Chargers regrouped to knock off KC, MIA and DEN to move to 4-1 and in control of the AFC West entering their bye week. Leading the Jets 21-17, SD was driving for a possible game-clinching score when Rivers was int'd on a deflection giving NY the momentum and the eventual win. The Chargers played the Chiefs a week later on MNF when the turning point of the season happened: With the game tied and SD driving for the GW FG att, Rivers dropped the snap allowing KC to force OT and eventually win in the extra frame. Rivers' run of TO's continued a week later against GB as while he threw for 385 yds, he also tossed a career-high 3 int in the 7 pt loss. The Chargers would go on to lose their next 3 games including at home in OT to rival DEN (Novak missed GW 53 FG at end of regulation). SD would then rattle off 3 consecutive victories to get back to 7-7 but a road loss in Detroit kept them out of the postseason for the 2nd consecutive year after reaching the playoffs in 5 of the prior 6 from 2004-2009. The Chargers finished out the regular season by playing spoiler against the rival Raiders as their victory cost OAK the AFC West crown. Norv Turner and AJ Smith have been given one more year by owner Alex Spanos to get things headed in the right direction. While the special teams did improve from a tumultuous 2010 led by new ST coach Rich Bisaccia, the OC and DC's have been replaced internally for 2012. SD has a lot of factors pointing upwards this year (see division forecast) and keep in mind they were tied for first in the division LY despite some key injuries. They have now missed the playoffs 2 straight years but were actually one the best teams in the NFL statistically the last 3 years and this time should play up to their talent level and get past the Denver hype this year.

KANSAS CITY CHIEFS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - When Matt Cassel was brought in to take over the reigns in '09 he was forced to deal with an under whelming group of WR's, a weak OL and a running game that was absent a good amount of the year. He threw for 2,924 yds but completed just 55% of his passes to go with a 16-16 ratio and was sacked 42 times. 2010 was the polar opposite for Cassel and the KC offense as the team's rush offense improved to #1 in the NFL while Cassel improved his individual numbers to 3,116 yds (58%) and a 27-7 ratio (sacked just 26 times). It was pretty obvious that OC Charlie Weis' coaching influence was also a big part of Cassel's success as well but that was short lived as Weis returned to the college ranks after just one season here. All of the key offensive players returned a ssn ago along with additional upgrades at FB and WR as well as QB coach with former WAS HC Jim Zorn being added to the staff. With the lack of training camp due to the lockout, Cassel was used sparingly in the preseason and the rust was still obvious when he opened the year as the Chiefs were out scored 89-10 over the first 2 weeks (worst scoring differential to start a ssn in franchise history). After a costly late int in the week 3 loss to SD, Cassel's productivity increased the next 2 weeks against some of the NFL's worst in MIN and IND. Cassel saw his 2011 campaign come to an end a few weeks later after injuring his hand vs DEN and subsequently having surgery. Tyler Palko was forced into the starting role for the next 4 weeks and had very little success as the Chiefs won just once (10-3 over CHI w/o Cutler). In that span Palko threw for just 187 ypg (59%) with a 2-7 ratio. KC claimed Kyle Orton off waivers after he was given a release by the Broncos and he started the final 3 winning 2 of those contests including handing the Packers their 1st loss of the ssn (ended GB's 19 game win streak) and beating his former team at Denver in the season finale. Orton and Palko both move on in 2012 and backing up Cassel for the upcoming season is another former Bronco QB Brady Quinn (DNP L2Y) who has some old ties with new HC Romeo Crennel in his early years with the Browns. 2011 5th RD DC Ricky Stanzi will attempt to compete with Quinn for the #2 spot but odds are that he is at least another year away from reaching that level. With a healthy return of Cassel as well as some of his fellow offensive weapons, a repeat of his 2010 success could be in the offing.

RUNNING BACKS - In 2010 the Chiefs equalled their 3 year win total from 2007-09 largely due to their dominant run game that finished #1 in the NFL (164 ypg, 4.7). The duo of Thomas Jones and Jamaal Charles helped mask the depth issues at WR (until the playoffs), kept Cassel from forcing plays and kept the defense out of bad spots. Jones and Charles combined for the 4th highest rushing yards by a RB tandem in NFL history (2363) and Charles' 6.38 ypc was 2nd only to Jim Brown's 1963 mark of 6.4. Both returned in 2011 and the team also added a solid FB presence to the mix in former Raven Le'Ron McClain. Unfortunately Charles was lost to an ACL in just the 2nd game of the season ending any hope of a repeat performance of 2010. With Charles' absence Jackie Battle emerged to lead the team in rushing but with just 597 (4.0) before he too landed on IR with a foot injury with 2 games remaining. 2nd year pro Dexter McCluster was used as a hybrid RB/WR during the year and finished 2nd on the team in rushing with 516 (4.5). Jones had the most carries among the Chief RB's in 2011 and finished with 478 (3.1) while surpassing Eddie George and Tiki Barber for 22nd on the NFL's career rushing list. Jones, Battle and McClain all depart for the upcoming year but KC does add in former CLE starting RB Peyton Hillis to form another solid 1-2 punch with the return of Charles. The Chiefs brought in the former Madden Cover Boy on just a one year contract to see if he can return to his 2010 form when he rushed for 1,177 yds (4.4) and 11 td's. Hillis' 2011 season was filled with injuries and contract drama as he suited up for just 10 games (587, 3.6). Hillis is an obvious upgrade to this unit and along with the return of Charles and more consistency under center at QB, this group should move back into the NFL's Top 10 after LY's #15 finish.

RECEIVERS - While Dwayne Bowe had an overall excellent season in 2010, the unit was a very thin group that found themselves exposed in the Wildcard loss to the Ravens. In 2010, Bowe had more yards (1162) than KC's #2 and #3 receivers combined (1024). The problem was that if Bowe was shut down, the entire pass game was shutdown. Against BAL, the Chiefs completed just 6 passes to their WR's. Despite the team's early exit in the playoffs, TE Tony Moeaki had a pretty impressive rookie campaign especially since he had been expected to be the #2 TE (556, 11.8). The big issue however was that behind Bowe and Moeaki no other WR/TE eclipsed more than 213 rec yds. GM Scott Pioli and HC Todd Haley took some steps LY to ensure this unit received some upgrades with the FA signing of Steve Breaston (played in ARZ when Haley was OC there) and the drafting of Jon Baldwin in the 1st round. The 2011 season ended before it even began for Moeaki as he was lost in the pressn with an ACL forcing blocking TE Leonard Pope to become a bigger part of the passing game. Breaston slid into the #2 role without an issue and finished #2 on the team in receiving with 785 yds (12.9). Baldwin on the other hand dealt with some maturity issues that stunted a good portion of his growth as a rookie (254 yd, 12.1, out 5 with inj). Bowe (#1 with 1159, 14.3) was given the franchise tag for 2012 in hopes of working out a long term deal. The Chiefs bring in some help at TE with the FA signing of Kevin Boss who spent a season in OAK after spending his first 4 as a member of the Giants. Boss replaces Pope on the roster and will be used as the in-line TE with a hopefully healthy Moeaki moving around in formations similar to what Dallas Clark did in his career with the Colts. Added to the WR mix are a pair of late RD draft picks in speedster Devon Wylie (4th RD) and Michigan WR Junior Hemingway (7th RD). A healthier QB and RB corps should keep this unit fairly potent in 2012, especially if Baldwin finds his way onto the field and starts to live up to that 1st round billing.

OFFENSIVE LINE - After finishing a respectable 11th in 2009 in rushing (121 ypg, 4.4), KC earned the #1 rush offense in 2010 (164 ypg, 4.7) while trimming down the sacks from 45 in '09 (1 every 11.9 attempts) to 32 in 2010 (1 every 14.8 attempts) as GM Pioli made some shrewd FA moves to bolster the unit adding in OG Ryan Lilja and returning Casey Wiegmann, who spent 2001-07 here before moving on to DEN for 2 seasons. Both returned a season ago and the unit saw 79 of the possible 80 starts with Lilja missing the PIT game with injury. After being a longtime fixture at LG for the Chiefs Brian Waters was released prior to the season which saw the move of Lilja from RG to LG and the insertion of 2nd year pro Jon Asamoah into the starting rotation. With injuries at QB and RB this unit saw its numbers drop down to 118 ypg rushing (3.9) which was #15 in the NFL rankings. The group allowed 2 more sacks from the year prior or one every 14.7 pass attempts. The 2012 OL version appears to be ready for a rebound as LT Branden Albert finally gets a substantial bookend on the other side in RT Eric Winston who was released by the Texans prior to the draft after a minor ankle injury. Winston replaces Barry Richardson, who started all 16 games the past 2 seasons with little fanfare. Lilja and Asamoah return as the starting OG's while former OG and 2nd year pro Rodney Hudson slides over to the vacated center position left by the now retired Wiegmann. With depth concerns on the unit, the Chiefs invested 2nd and 3rd round DC's to bring in Jeff Allen and Donald Stephenson all though neither are expected to see significant time in 2012. New OC Brian Daboll is a little more conservative then Haley was so this unit may be an integral part of the success of the KC offense this upcoming season.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - The Chiefs DL isn't about creating plays themselves, its about standing up the OL and allowing the LB's to get to the ball. That was the message Crennel was trying to impart to his defense when he took over as the DC in 2010. Crennel also stripped the defensive playbook down to the basics which allowed the players to simply react and play. KC went from 30th to 14th in total defense and from 31st vs the run (157 ypg, 4.7) to 14th (110 ypg, 4.3). With the struggles of the offense to stay on the field for a significant period of time a year ago, this unit may have taken the brunt of the damage as while their total defense improved to 11th in the league, the rush defense finished 26th allowing 132 ypg (4.2) as the opposition found themselves sitting on relatively big leads and running out the clock. After having some problems originally adjusting to the 3-4 defensive scheme change, it appears that both Glen Dorsey and Tyson Jackson have both taken a liking to their new DE roles. The one thing that has been missing since the hiring of Crennel and the 3-4 conversion was a NT that could deliver solid play on a consistent basis. After the departure of LY's starter Kelly Gregg, the Chiefs used the 11th overall pick to select Dontari Poe out of Memphis who at 6'5" 350, has the size to clog the middle as desired but was also a bit under the radar prior to the combine playing for a team that won just 5 games in his 3 years in the collegiate ranks, not to mention facing some poor opposing OL's. The backups on this unit feature a couple of 2nd year pros and FA acquisition Ropati Pitoitua who recorded 19 tkls in the Jets' 3-4 defense a year ago. With the development of Dorsey and Jackson along with the upgrade at NT, a climb into the upper half of the rush defense rankings should be expected.

LINEBACKERS - In 2009 the Chiefs allowed an AFC worst 424 points as the LB's were overwhelmed in their conversion to a 3-4. In 2010 a stripped down system helped cut off nearly a td per game improving from 26.5 ppg in 2009 to 20.4. The Chiefs also improved their pass rushing numbers collecting 39 sacks compared to just 22 the year prior. KC had a good amount of cap room available following the lockout which allowed them to lock up OLB Tamba Hali for the long term as he may be one of the league's best pass rushers despite not having a strong option on the opposite side. Hali posted his 2nd consecutive season of double-digit sacks a year ago with 12 while it appears that the Chiefs may have also finally found a solid bookend on the opposite side in Justin Houston who tallied 5.5 sacks (3 vs CHI) as a rookie. Adding depth at the OLB spot again in 2012 is Andy Studebaker who is a spot-starter at best. With the introduction of the 3-4, ILB Derrick Johnson has put together his best 2 seasons of his career with 121 tackles in 2010 and 131 a year ago while earning 1st Team All-Pro honors. Jovan Belcher appears to be the frontrunner for the other ILB spot heading into the season but he may find some solid competition from Brandon Siler, who ended up on IR in his first season with the Chiefs after spending his first 4 seasons with SD. The ppg allowed in 2011 jumped up a smidgen to 21.1 but with increased production out of the front 3, the Chiefs could find themselves with their best ppg allowed numbers since 2006 (19.7).

DEFENSIVE BACKS - The Chiefs have improved in pass defense in each of the past 4 seasons going from 28th, to 22nd, to 17th and to 6th last year. They also made solid improvement in their def QBR from '08 to '10 and only dipped from 78.1 in '10 to 79.1 in '10. Via solid drafts and allowing the talent to develop the Chiefs had the nucleus for one of the better secondaries in 2011. Brandon Flowers and Brandon Carr were both in their 4th seasons starting together which gave them a big edge in reliability on the field. The two combined for 35 pbu's and 8 int's on the season while 2nd year pro Javier Arenas took the lion's share of reps as the team's NB option while rookie Jalil Brown also saw some action. Eric Berry was the star of the secondary in his rookie campaign of 2010 displaying incredible range and instincts and allowing just one passing td over the final 11 games of the season (led team with 4 int's). Berry saw his 2011 season cut extremely short after an ACL after just 5 snaps in the opener. Jon McGraw and Sabby Piscitelli started in his absence but neither stood out and won't return for 2012. FS Kendrick Lewis rounded out the starting rotation and doubled his tackle total from 30 in 2010 to 60 LY. The Chiefs do lose Carr this season after he signed as a FA with DAL but bring in Stanford Routt via FA from OAK. Routt is a press-man CB who is a good fit for the scheme that Crennel has installed however you have to weigh the good with the bad with him as while he recorded 4 int's a year ago, he also committed a league-high 17 penalties. While Carr was a solid asset to the team and will be missed, the return of Berry should allow this unit to potentially put together another Top 10 showing.

SPECIAL TEAMS - KC has struggled on special teams since 2003 (#2) when Dante Hall was then return specialist. After a #19 finish in our ST's rankings in 2009 the Chiefs attempted to make a splash in the return game during the 2010 Draft by selecting both Javier Arenas and Dexter McCluster. However, after McCluster took back a 94 yd PR in the opener, neither saw the endzone the remainder of the season (#23 finish). Everyone returned a season ago and improvement was expected. P Dustin Colquitt continued his steady play while increasing his net from 37.6 in '10 to 40.1 LY. After starting the season hitting just 1 of 4 FG's, Ryan Succop hit on 22 straight attempts and finished 24-30 on the year including 3-3 from 50+. Arenas and McCluster were serviceable at best and the unit finished with our #22 ranking. Everyone returns again this season and while the unit is fairly young, improvement should be expected.

OVERVIEW - When Todd Haley was hired as the HC of the Chiefs in 2009 he made the smart move of lining up a slew of position coaches that had vast success in the NFL. After a brutal 4-12 season in his rookie campaign Haley brought in proven coordinators Charlie Weis and Romeo Crennel to get his ship in order. The Chiefs made the most of an easy schedule in 2010 playing just 2 games all regular season against teams with a winning record. After winning the AFC West for the 1st time since 2003 (2-4 conf record), the Chiefs were manhandled in the Wildcard round of the playoffs against the Ravens. Weis departed after 1 season (Florida OC) and the new OC heading into LY was Bill Muir (3rd yr with team). KC suffered their most lopsided season-opening loss in franchise history and their worst home loss in 35 years when the Bills dominated with a 41-7 victory. After another embarrassing loss at the hands of DET (48-3), the Chiefs lost their 3rd straight to start the year in a 3 point loss to SD (late Cassel int). Amazingly, despite their struggles and injuries to their top offensive (Charles) and defensive (Berry) players, the Chiefs went on to win their next 4 (MIN, IND, OAK, SD) becoming the 1st team in NFL history to lose its first 3 games and share at least part of the division lead after 4 more (also 1st team since 2000 Steelers to win 4 straight after dropping first 3). Following the Charger victory, the bottom fell out for Haley as the Chiefs lost to previously winless MIA 31-3 (3rd largest MOV by a winless team that started the season 0-7 or worse in NFL history), to DEN by 7 despite the Broncos and Tebow completing just 2 passes the entire game and the Patriots by 31. After a 4 pt loss to the Steelers and a narrow win against the Bears without QB Cutler, the Chiefs were blown out by the Jets and Haley was let go. Crennel took over as the interim HC and started QB Kyle Orton for the final 3. The Chiefs would go on to win 2 of those contests (incl ending GB's undefeated run) and finish the season at 7-9. After conversations with about a half-dozen candidates, Crennel had his interim title taken away and takes over on a permanent basis. Muir opted to retire following the season and Brian Daboll now inherits an offense that returns its starting QB and RB back from injury. Crennel is a player's coach and should continue to have success here as the Chiefs look to reclaim the AFC West Title after a year absence. KC has a softer schedule this year (#22 vs #10), had 54 starts lost to injury and are much upgraded at RB and could be a surprise team this year with all the talk in the West about Manning and Denver.

DENVER BROKCOS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - Kyle Orton has proven to be a good, but not great QB in his NFL career with a decent arm, slightly above average mobility along with good decision making skills. He was actually an ankle injury away from throwing for 4,000 yd in '09. A revolving door of injuries at the RB position in '10 forced Orton to carry the offense and while his numbers were very impressive over the first 5 gms (347 ypg, 66%, 8-3 ratio, 97.8 QBR), opposing defenses figured out the offensive scheme and his numbers saw a significant drop to 240 ypg (53%, 12-6 ratio). The losing streak and the dismissal of HC Josh McDaniels followed and along with an "apparent rib injury" to Orton, the Tim Tebow era began in Denver. Despite very poor throwing mechanics, Tebow is gifted with a very good size/speed mix (6'3" 245, 4.72 spd) and impressed with his legs in the 12Q's of start time he was given. After nearly being traded away prior to the start of '11, Orton returned to the team and was named the starter by new HC John Fox as he prefers experienced players behind center. The Broncos started off at 1-4 and with Orton hitting on just 6-13 passes for 34 yd (w/int) in the 1H vs SD as fans chanted Tebow. Tim got the nod in the 2H and nearly rallied DEN back from a 16 pt 4Q deficit in the 5 pt defeat. Tebow earned his 1st start of the yr following the bye at MIA delivering his first of five 4Q comeback victories in 2011 (1st time a tm has rallied back from at least a 15 pt deficit in the final 3:00 of the 4Q since at least 1983). After getting thumped at home by DET the following wk, Fox and company scrapped a large chunk of the playbook and went to the read-option that Tebow ran at Florida. This, along with solid def play and an outstanding kicker resulted in the Broncos winning 6 straight. Following their OT victory over Chicago, the Broncos went on to lose 3 straight to end the regular ssn but backdoored themselves into the playoffs. One of those losses came at the hands of Orton who was released a few wks earlier and was picked up by the Chiefs. Tebow played a solid game against the Steelers and in their 4th OT game of the ssn, hitting an 80 yd td pass across the middle for the win. He struggled for a 2nd straight time vs NE the following week and their improbable ssn came to an end or did it? With 1st year VP John Elway giving Tebow his vote of confidence following the ssn, the Peyton Manning story was just heating up. After starting every game since his rookie year (1998), Manning (4,000 pass yd in 11 of his 13 ssns) went thru 4 neck surgeries in the 2010 offseason which forced him out of all of 2011. Once the Colts landed the 1st overall pick for the upcoming draft, Manning and his large contract were deemed expendable and the future Hall-of-Famer became arguably one of the biggest FA's in league history. After meeting with several suitors for an elongated period of time, Manning decided to sign here as he believed that Elway, Fox and OC Mike McCoy would give him the best opportunity to not only get to the Super Bowl, but to also let him use much of the playbook and terminology that he used during his career in Indy. To avoid any controversy, Tebow was then traded to the Jets a few days later. Brady Quinn was leapfrogged by Tebow early LY and was allowed to leave via FA and backing up Manning for the 2012 ssn is local product Caleb Hanie who earned 4 starts a year ago with the Bears (50%, 3-9 ratio) in place of the injured Jay Cutler. 2nd RD DC Brock Osweiler who is 6'7" with solid mobility (offered hoops scholarship to Gonzaga) has untapped potential but will remain a project unless a disaster occurs in the next year or two. This position (and team) is now on the shoulders "and neck" of Manning.

RUNNING BACKS - After finishing in the top 10 in rushing from 2000-'07 the Broncos' #26 finish in 2010 was incredibly painful as they had numerous injuries, sizeable OL issues and an offensive scheme that was extremely pass heavy. With the hiring of Fox a ssn ago it was a given that this group would return to the form of earlier in the decade. Fox is a huge proponent of the power rushing game and with questions about Knowshon Moreno being able to fill the role that Fox desired, DEN brought in veteran Willis McGahee after they were unable to lure DeAngelo Williams away from CAR. All McGahee did was become one of the best under-the-radar FA signees of 2011 as he posted a league-leading seven 100-yd games while breaking the 1,000 yard barrier for the first time since 2007. After rushing a combined 209 times his L2Y with BAL, McGahee had 1,199 yd on 249 carries last ssn (1st DEN 1,000 yd rusher in 5 ssns). With the addition of Tebow at QB, the Broncos led the NFL in rushing at 165 ypg (4.8). As successful as McGahee was, the same cannot be said for Moreno who saw just 37 carries on the year before being lost for the ssn with a torn ACL. In Moreno's absence, the Broncos used former UFA Lance Ball to spell McGahee throughout the year. Ball chipped in 402 yd (4.2) and may have the edge over former 1st rounder Moreno for a roster spot heading into 2012. The wildcard heading into the upcoming ssn is 3rd RD DC Ronnie Hillman out of SDSt who rushed for 3,200+ yd in just 2 ssns with the Aztecs while drawing several comparisons to another SDSt alum Marshall Faulk. McGahee became just the 2nd RB in NFL history to post 1,000 yd rush ssns with 3 different tms (Ricky Watters) but with him turning 31 this October, expect his carries to be a bit more limited as the team attempts to see if some of their younger backs have what it takes to make an impact in the league.

RECEIVERS - What a difference a year makes for the Broncos receiving corps after finishing 6th in the NFL in 2010 at 269 ypg, the limited throwing ability of Tebow a year ago saw this group's production drop 100 ypg. Brandon Lloyd came out of nowhere in 2010 to lead the league in rec yd with 1,448 (11 td) as Orton and Tebow's favorite target. After the rocky start to the '11 ssn, Lloyd was shockingly deemed expendable and traded to STL after wk 5. With Lloyd gone the rec game was led by the combo of Eric Decker and Demaryius Thomas who were both absent nearly their entire rookie ssns (2010) with injury. Decker led the team in both rec (44) and yds (612), significant drops from Lloyd's performance of '10. Decker is sneaky fast and is a solid intermediate threat that could easily become Manning's favorite target almost immediately. After slowly recovering from a torn Achilles, Thomas took off at the end of the ssn with 144 vs MIN, 116 vs NE and most importantly 204 on just 4 catches in the playoffs against the Steelers. After a rookie ssn that saw him grab 91 catches for 980 yd, injuries plagued the last 3 years of Eddie Royal's career (115 rec, 1127 yd) and he was allowed to leave in FA to SD. DEN signed a trio of FA's to help at this position in Andre Caldwell, Jason Hill and Brandon Stokley. Stokley was a big asset in the recruiting of Manning to DEN and while his production on the field won't be depended upon, his knowledge of the Manning terminology should help his fellow receivers catch on even faster. The TE position is very important to a Manning-led offense and DEN did a solid job filling this group in the offseason with the FA signings of Joel Dreessen (28 rec, 353 yd '11) and former Manning teammate Jacob Tamme who had 631 rec yd in Manning's final healthy year of '10. Julius Thomas saw limited action with the TE's a yr ago but could grow into a solid threat in years to come as he has good spd to go with excellent size (6'5" 255). Despite the large drop-off in numbers and the departure of both Royal and Lloyd, things look to be in better shape heading into 2012 as the addition of Manning and a more pass-happy offense should have DEN near the top of the league once again.

OFFENSIVE LINE - Stability and continuity are the cornerstones of a strong OL and the Broncos were lacking in both even before the 2010 season. Denver opted to fully commit to a power-pull scheme after essentially playing a role in the utilization of zone blocking in the NFL. With All-Pro LT Ryan Clady coming off of an offseason knee injury, his production slipped as he had very few snaps prior to the season to adjust to the new scheme. The Broncos drafted and installed a pair of rookies at C and LG in JD Walton and Zane Beadles. Both had the usual rookie growing pains. Without a legitimate RT and the changes in schemes, the Broncos allowed 40 sacks (1 every 14.5 att's) which was their most since 2002 (46). With RT still being a question mark heading into LY the Broncos drafted Orlando Franklin in the 2nd Rd to take over the spot. Despite the shortage of camp and practice time under new HC Fox, the DEN OL came together a lot faster than many thought. Franklin ate up defenders in the run game while limiting his hiccups when protecting Tebow's blindside. Clady was still getting his knee strength back early on but appeared to be back to his old self once the team hit the midseason mark. Walton and Beadles showed significant improvement in their 2nd seasons as starters while RG Chris Kuper remained one of the most highly regarded players in the unit. Kuper did suffer a significant leg and ankle injury late in the season and could find himself on the PUP to start 2012. Prior to his injury, the group had started all 15 games together and adapted well to the changing of schemes that included the read option (#1 in NFL in rush ypg 165 ypg, 4.8). They did allow a large number of sacks again (42, 1 per every 10.2) with a young QB behind center. Despite LY's success and the unit returning intact (assuming Kuper is healthy), it will be interesting to see if this very green group is able to adjust to another offensive scheme and give Manning (sacked just 43 times combined from '08-'10) the ample protection he needs to be successful and stay injury-free.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - This has been an area of concern for the Denver defense of late as they allowed 143 ypg in '07 (30th), 146 ypg in '08 (27th), 129 ypg in '09 (26th) and 155 ypg in '10 (31st) allowing the 2nd most rush yd in team history (2,473). After flirting with the 3-4 the previous 2 ssns, new DC Dennis Allen switched the group back to a 4-3. After missing the entire 2010 season with injury, the Broncos also got the return of their sack leader Elvis Dumervil who led the NFL in '09 with 17. The biggest issue the Broncos have had in the past was swinging and missing with veteran interior DL's who were more than often past their prime. After allowing 2010 DT starters Justin Bannan and Jamal Williams to depart, DEN brought in Ty Warren and Brodrick Bunkley to fill those starting roles. While Bunkley performed above expectations, Warren never saw the field as he was put on IR with a torn triceps muscle. With Warren out, the Broncos used the combo of Marcus Thomas, Ryan McBean and Kevin Vickerson to serve in the starting rotation. Lining up opposite Dumervil at DE is former 1st rounder Robert Ayers who finally appears to have settled into the position after bouncing back and forth from DE and OLB earlier in his career. As a group the unit finished #22 LY in rush defense allowing 126 ypg (4.1) while the defense as a whole collected 41 sacks (18 more than '10). The musical chairs continues at DT as gone are Bunkley, Thomas and McBean while Bannan returns after a year in STL and the Broncos also brought in high-motor 2nd RD DC Derek Wolfe (better pass rushing prospect than Bunkley and Thomas) to compete at the position. If Warren returns to the unit healthy, the Broncos could find themselves climbing into the upper half of the NFL's rush D rankings.

LINEBACKERS - Denver entered 2011 with their 6th different DC in 6 years and part of the reason has been the inability to correctly deploy their DB's. Moving to a 4-3 a year ago played to the strength of the unit as it consolidated the defensive talent. New VP Elway and many other NFL execs believed that Von Miller was the most explosive player in the 2011 Draft and his selection immediately paid dividends as he won the NFL Def Rookie of the Year honors while recording 64 tkl and 11.5 sk. Flanking Miller at the other OLB spot was DJ Williams who has posted 90+ tkl in each of the L/5 ssns incl LY when he missed 3 gm due to injury. The biggest question in LY's unit was whether MLB Joe Mays would be able to handle the duties as a starter for the first time in his career. Mays flourished as a run-stopper and should have enough to hold off 2nd year pro Nate Irving for the job again this year. The biggest concern the team has heading into 2012 is the 6-game banned substance suspension that Williams has on the table. With Williams out, expect former UFA and ST's stalwart Wesley Woodyard to fill the vacated role after earning 10 combined starts the last 2 seasons and leading the team in tackles LY with 97. Mario Haggan (23 tkl LY) departs and the depth here behind the starters and Woodyard is suspect at best for 2012 as they again are forced to start over with yet another new DC.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - The Broncos were the only team in 2010 to field a starting secondary in which all 4 players were 30 years or older. This unit was addressed in the 2011 Draft however as they brought in a pair of safeties in Rahim Moore (2nd RD) and Quinton Carter (4th RD). With Brian Dawkins being limited throughout the season, Carter received ample playing time and appears to be lining up as the team's starting SS this year ahead of Moore who battled inj's and poor play throughout LY. Champ Bailey remains one of the better cover CB's in the league today as Denver put the utmost trust in him again a year ago as he matched up against the likes of Santonio Holmes, Brandon Marshall, Calvin Johnson and Dwayne Bowe but delivered for the most part. Flanking Bailey at the other CB spot for 2012 is FA signee Tracy Porter who comes over from NO and is best known for intercepting his now Bronco teammate Manning in the Saints Super Bowl victory. With the addition of Porter, the Broncos deemed Andre' Goodman expendable and released him around the draft. Two former UFA's Chris Harris and Cassius Vaughn along with FA Drayton Florence round out the remainder of the CB position with one of those 3 likely landing the #1 NB spot. Another addition to the secondary in 2012 is FS Mike Adams who spent the L5Y as a member of the Browns. After a neck injury a year ago, 16-year veteran Dawkins decided to hang up his cleats with his next stop most likely being Canton in 5 years. With the slew of quality QB's the Broncos will face in their 2012 schedule (Roethlisberger, Ryan, Brady, Brees, Rivers 2x), this secondary will be under substantial pressure to perform all season long as they attempt to improve upon LY's #18 ranking (232 ypg, 62%, 24-9 ratio, 93.1 QBR, #10).

SPECIAL TEAMS - The Broncos haven't fared well in our special teams rankings with 2002 being the LY that they finished in the upper half (#15). While Tebow got a lot of the gratitude for the late game heroics, the real hero LY may have just been Matt Prater who had 4 walk-off kicks (28-29 in 4Q and OT in career) and that doesn't even incl his 59 yarder that put the Broncos into OT against the Bears. On the season Prater missed 6 FG's (19-25) but only one from inside 40 yd. Prater is 12-16 on FG's lifetime from 50+ and led the league LY in TB %. P Britton Colquitt had a much improved sophomore campaign as he found some consistency that had eluded him as a rookie and set a franchise record for net punting at 40.2. With Eddie Royal missing a good portion of the year with injury, the team brought in Quan Cosby to serve as the top KR (26.9) and PR (10.0). While the return units were solid, the coverage units had their fare share of struggles and DEN finished #18 in our ST rankings. Injuries and poor depth have dogged this team over past seasons but despite losing the often-injured Royal and Cosby to FA, with the re-signing of Prater, this unit has a chance to return to the upper half of our rankings.

OVERVIEW - After a 6-0 start in 2009 melted into a 5-15 record over the next 20 games the Broncos released Josh McDaniels. He wasn't helped by a string of very questionable decisions with the roster and an embarrassing videotaping incident involving the 49ers prior to the London game. The 2010 offense wasn't helped by the absolute absence of a run game or the attempted transition to a 3-4 defense that was crippled by the Elvis Dumervil injury. After the season the Broncos hired John Elway to be the Executive VP of Operations and Team President. Elway led a very transparent search for a new HC settling on John Fox. Despite his 2-14 record in his final season with the Panthers, his old school approach was something the Broncos desperately needed. After the team struggled thru the preseason with a slew of inj's among their starters, DEN opened up at home on MNF against the Raiders and lost their 4th consec gm to their arch rival at Invesco Field by a 23-20 score and so began the team's 1-4 start. With Tebow at QB and a more read-option friendly attack following the DET game, the Broncos were able to put together a 6-game winning streak in dramatic fashion. Denver's luck then ran out as they were dominated by NE and BUF by a combined 81-37 score and then in the home finale against the rival Chiefs and newly acquired Kyle Orton, the Broncos did nothing offensively and went down in the 7-3 defeat. A win by the Chargers over the Raiders a few minutes later still gave DEN the AFC West crown (1st Div Title s/'05) at 8-8 and a 1st round matchup against the Steelers (DEN 8th tm in NFL history to make the playoffs with 3 straight losses to end the ssn). The Broncos jumped out to an early lead vs the Steelers but were again forced into OT. On the first play of the extra frame, Tebow hit Thomas for an 80 yd td pass and the victory. The Broncos were outmatched the following week against the Patriots as their amazing season came to an end. The offseason proved to be even more exciting as not only did the Broncos bring in future HOF QB Peyton Manning, but also decided to trade away Tebow to the Jets. DC Dennis Allen moved on to take on the HC duties of the Raiders and Fox brought in former JAX HC and close friend Jack Del Rio to take over the defensive duties. A lot is riding on the acquisition of Manning but the Broncos do face one of the toughest schedules in the league in 2012.

OAKLAND RAIDERS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - After the Raiders finally moved past the JaMarcus Russell era prior to the 2010 season, Jason Campbell became the new signal caller in Oakland after improving his accuracy each of the previous 4 years as a member of the Redskins. Campbell earned 12 starts in his first season with the Raiders but was benched on 3 separate occasions (games 3, 4 and 12) by then-HC Tom Cable who preferred Bruce Gradkowski as the signal caller. Campbell reclaimed the starting job for the final 5 (Gradkowski put on IR) throwing for 213 ypg (65%, 6-2 ratio) over that span. With Cable and Gradkowski both headed out of town prior to the start of LY, new HC Hue Jackson and owner Al Davis had already stated that Campbell would be the team's starter heading into 2011 with Kyle Boller and Supplemental DC Terrelle Pryor rounding out the position. With a 3-2 record and in contention for the AFC West, Campbell suffered a broken collarbone and was subsequently placed on IR. Out of necessity, the Raiders then pulled the trigger on a trade with the Bengals to land semi-retired Carson Palmer to fill in as the starter for the remainder of the season and as the future face of the franchise. While Boller got the start against the Chiefs 4 days after the trade, Palmer (no TC and slim knowledge of the playbook) also saw action as the 2 combined for 6 int (3 each) in the 28-0 loss to KC (1st time OAK threw 6 int in a game since 1998). Palmer went on to start the final 9 games of the season (4-5 record) throwing for 275 ypg (61%) with a 13-16 ratio. Campbell and Boller move on for the upcoming season while the new backup here is Matt Leinart, who actually succeeded Palmer back in their collegiate days at USC. Now a career backup, Leinart has the benefit of knowing the system but is not a threat to unseat Palmer. He is one of the better #2 QB's based on talent but his lack of playing time is a concern. Palmer now enters a full offseason with his new team and has a solid arsenal of young offensive weapons around him.

RUNNING BACKS - For years the Raiders faltered in acquiring a premier RB to take some of the pressure off of their lackluster passing game. Darren McFadden was given the task to bring back the power element and help try and develop the offense. After only starting 12 of 32 games in his 1st 2 seasons due to injury, he became the Raiders' first 1,100 yd rusher since Napolean Kaufman (1294, 4.8) back in 1997 despite missing 3 more with injury. McFadden has an impressive blend of speed and power allowing him to break tackles. He has also established himself as a dangerous receiving threat out of the backfield including 47 catches in 2010 (#2 on the team). After missing a good portion of the preseason with injury, McFadden got off to a great start to the year as he ran for an NFL-leading 610 yards through the first 6 games including 171 in their victory over the Jets. The injury bug again bit McFadden however as he missed the final 9 weeks of 2011 with a Lisfranc injury to his foot. In his absence Michael Bush assumed the featured back role nearly eclipsing the 1,000 yard barrier with 977 (3.8) and 7 td's including a season-high 157 in the win over SD. Marcell Reece finished 3rd on the team in rushing on just 17 carries as his skills are unlike any other FB in the league today with the ability to also play the slot and be a downfield receiver after serving in that role during his collegiate days at Washington. McFadden (614, 5.4) was given a clean bill of health in May and should be a focal point again in the 2012 offense. Bush departs in FA (CHI) and serving as McFadden's backup this ssn is Mike Goodson who was acquired via trade from the Panthers prior to the draft for OL Bruce Campbell. Goodson (452 rush, 310 rec '10) served as 3rd string for most of his career in CAR behind DeAngelo Williams and Jonathan Stewart but landed on IR a year ago with a hamstring injury. While McFadden will still serve as the #1 back, look for the RB's to take a complimentary role as Palmer and the WR's have had a full offseason to get acclimated to each other.

RECEIVERS - After being labeled as a bust for the first 2 years of his career (35 rec, 490 yd '09-'10), former 7th overall draft choice Darrius Heyward-Bey did an excellent job shedding some of the criticism a year ago compiling a solid 64 rec's for 975 yds. Flanking Heyward-Bey on the opposite side in the starting lineup was rookie Denarius Moore who made an impact from his first day of TC and finished with 618 rec yds (18.7) on the year. While Moore and Heyward-Bey earned ringing endorsements a year ago, the same could not be said for Louis Murphy and Jacoby Ford, who both saw their numbers cut in half due to a slew of injuries. The Raiders had appeared to re-sign Zach Miller following the lockout but he decided to follow former HC Cable to SEA, leaving the TE position in turmoil heading into camp. The new unit consisted of a short-yardage, mediocre blocker in Brandon Myers, a rookie that was converting from WR in David Ausberry and a late FA signee from the Giants in Kevin Boss. Boss led the group with 368 yards but he departs after just one season in Oakland (FA) opening the door for a more expanded role out of Myers (151, 9.4) and Ausberry who showed some flashes of being a downfield playmaker. WR Chaz Schilens and veteran TJ Houshmandzadeh (brought in when Palmer joined team, 11 rec) are the only other members of this group that depart in 2012. Murphy and Ford should be healthier this season while Palmer singled out Moore as a player that he could not be more excited about. Expect this group and the full offseason of adjustments by Palmer to carry the Raider offense through the immediate future and for Heyward-Bey to deliver the first 1,000 yard season for an OAK receiver since 2005.

2012 Top 6 WR/TE Rec Yds ('09-'11):	4,467 (14.9) - #28
NFL Player Draft Rating:	6.50 - #30

OFFENSIVE LINE - For six straight years (2005-2010) the Raiders had finished 22nd or lower in sacks allowed with an average of 48 sacks per year or 1 for every 10.1 pass attempts. Opposing defenses were simply able to pin their ears back in pass situations as the combo of poor QB's and an underwhelming OL have allowed defenses to set their own terms. After spending 7 years and using three #1DC's at the position, it appears that the Raiders have finally found their franchise LT in Jared Veldheer, who was promoted to #1 LT in the 6th game of his rookie year and played very well the rest of the way. Veldheer is a huge blocker from a small college (Hillsdale) but found vast success in his 2nd year starting all 16 games while allowing a total of just 4 sacks. Without a 1st round selection in 2011, the Raiders used their 1st pick of the draft to add to this unit with the selection of Stephen Wisniewski. Wisniewski has NFL bloodlines and was expected to start immediately. While he did start the entire season, he slid over to LG for a good portion as the Raiders opted to bring back Samson Satele for another season. Rounding out the right side of the starting rotation were RG Cooper Carlisle and RT Khalif Barnes. Satele departs this season along with reserves Bruce Campbell and Stephon Heyer. Wisniewski slides over to the center position in 2012 and the group adds in Mike Brisiel to occupy the role as starting RG (Carlisle moves to LG) after spending his first 6 years as a member of the Texans. The reserves here are led by 2nd year pro Joseph Barksdale (could challenge Barnes in camp) and rookie 3rd rounder Tony Bergstrom. The 4 returning starters to this group each started all 16 games a year ago as the Raiders moved up to 7th in the NFL in rushing (132 ypg, 4.5) while allowing just 25 sacks or one every 21 pass attempts (vast improvement to 7th best in the league). With the development of Veldheer and more consistency at the QB position, expect this group to improve yet again.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - In 2010 OAK finished 29th in run defense for a 2nd straight year despite trimming 22 yards off that total (134 ypg) and snapping a streak of not holding consecutive foes to under 100 yd rushing (4 years). The Raiders were however able to get to the QB as the team's 1 sack per every 10.0 pass att's ranked them #1 in the NFL. The star of this unit is Richard Seymour who continues to set the tone as a team leader with toughness and versatility on the line. His 2011 production did take a hit during midseason however as he battled through a knee injury that cost him some limited action. Seymour's All-Pro selection may have been influenced by his reputation and not exactly his productivity from a year ago as he went through a 5-game stint when he recorded just one tackle and sack. Lamarr Houston has done a good job as a run-stuffing DE the past 2 years while steadily working on his pass-rush skills. He will be expected to make more of an impact this season as the team moves back to a 4-3. Tommy Kelly dropped 35 lbs prior to LY which resulted in him recording a team-high 7.5 sacks. Rounding out the new 4-3 starting lineup is Matt Shaughnessy, who played in just 3 games LY before being placed on IR with a shoulder injury. Prior to his shortened season a year ago, Shaughnessy became a legitimate threat in the OAK pass rush in 2010 with 7 sacks to go with his 56 tackles. Spelling Shaughnessy LY was Desmond Bryant who is arguably the strongest player on the unit and has the ability to play both inside or outside in the new scheme. Reserves Trevor Scott, John Henderson and Jarvis Moss all depart in 2012 with FA Dave Tollefson adding depth to an OAK DL that finished 27th a year ago in run defense (136 ypg, 5.1) and 19th in the NFL getting to the QB once per every 15.4 attempts (8 sacks less from 2010). New HC Dennis Allen did an excellent job as the DC in Denver a year ago and with the offense appearing to be somewhat stable, you can almost bet that a good amount of his focus will be driven towards this group of talented, yet underperforming players.

LINEBACKERS - The Raiders completely revamped their LB corps in 2010 with an emphasis of size over speed. In fact OAK thought so highly of this unit's progress that they traded away MLB Kirk Morrison (leading tackler from 2006-'09) to JAX. Rookie Rolando McClain (8th overall pick) immediately inherited the starting role vacated by Morrison and appeared to improve each week as the season went on. McClain saw his tackles climb LY from 85 to 99 but his slow reaction time to fill his run gap may have been another reason why the defense struggled so mightily vs the run. In the same year that OAK drafted McClain they also brought in Kamerion Wimbley via a trade with the Browns. Wimbley transitioned nicely and led the team in sacks with 9. LY he totaled 7 sacks as a nickel pass rusher but also vanished over periods of time as well. The Raiders cut ties with him and his lofty contract TY as the unit eliminates a position in the move back to the 4-3. Flanking McClain on the outside for 2012 are FA signee Philip Wheeler (84 tkl LY with IND) and former 4th overall pick Aaron Curry who the Raiders picked upped early last season in a trade with the Seahawks. Reserves Quentin Groves and Sam Williams also depart making this group of backups extremely green and inexperienced. McClain went back to his roots in the offseason to work with some of his old Alabama strength coaches along with extra work within the film room. This group does lose their top pass rusher and are a single injury away from being in critical shape.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - After the appearance of a promising front 7 developing for 2011, the Raider secondary sustained a big hit via a contractual loophole allowing one of the best CB's in the history of the league to leave via FA to PHI. Nnamdi Asomugha was so dominant that he was targeted just 2.2 times a game in 2010. Stanford Routt allowed just 39 completions in his first full season of '10 but struggled in the last 5 games of 2011 while also committing a league-high 17 penalties. Routt, Lito Sheppard and Chris Johnson were all allowed to leave heading into TY as the new starting CB combo features a duo that started just ONE total game a season ago in Ronald Bartel (FA STL, neck inj LY) and Shawntae Spencer (lost starting gig with SF in camp a season ago, played sparingly). 2nd year pros DeMarcus Van Dyke and Chimdi Chekwa fill out the 2 deep at the position but Chekwa's rookie campaign was derailed by a shoulder injury (1 start, 8 tkl) and Van Dyke had a rough go nearly the entire year in nickel and spot CB duty (4 starts, 13 tkl). Tyvon Branch is locked in as the starting SS after 3 consecutive seasons in which he recorded 100+ tackles (excels against the run) while Michael Huff opted to re-sign prior to LY but played in just 12 as he was plagued by both a concussion and hamstring injury. Mike Mitchell has struggled when given the opportunity to start due to injuries and poor play in his 3 years in the league. The lone bright spot last year along with Branch was the performance of Matt Giordano who led the team in int with 5 and appeared to make a name for himself when Huff was on the shelf. In their first year without Asomugha, they finished #27 in the league in pass defense (251 ypg, 54%) with their 31 td passes allowed setting a franchise record. Despite these lackluster numbers, opposing QB's had a QBR of just 81.3 (#11). The safety position looks to be in decent shape heading into the new season but CB will be what either makes or breaks them all together.

SPECIAL TEAMS

K	Sebastian Janikowski (1)	KR	Jacoby Ford (4)
P	Shane Lechler (5)	PR	Taiwan Jones (4)

stood atop the AFC West a season ago with a 7-4 mark at one point midseason. After averaging just 93 pts a season over the previous 7 years, Janikowski's powerful left leg was used early and often in 2010 as he hit a career-high 33 FG's en route to the top seasonal scoring output of his career at 142 points (one pt shy of #1 in the NFL). Surprisingly Janikowski had not earned a Pro Bowl bid throughout his 11-year career heading into last season. All Janikowski did in 2011 was convert on 31 of his 35 attempts including tying the NFL record (Tom Dempsey, Jason Elam) of a 63 yarder in the opener in Denver and converted 7-10 from 50+ and didn't miss a kick inside the 50 that wasn't blocked and he FINALLY earned a Pro Bowl nod. Lechler may be the best punter in NFL history and he has the stats to prove it including an 80 yard punt a season ago that kept the Raiders in a close game and eventual victory over CHI. Throughout his marvelous 12 years in the league, Lechler has career marks of a 47.6 avg and a 41.7 net! With every good kicker and punter, a good LS follows as well and Jon Condo is arguably one of the best and received a nice contract to stay on with this group. Ford tied for the NFL lead in 2010 with 3 KR td's but after an early td last season, his year was cut short due to injury with reserve DB Bryan McCann taking over the duties (27.8 avg). Rookie Moore not only started at WR but served as the PR as well averaging 8.6 on his 25 att's. Everyone returns for the upcoming year including the now healthy Ford making this group a clear candidate to claim the #1 spot after finishing #9 in 2011.

Head Coach - Dennis Allen, 1st year
Allen became the 18th HC in Raiders history after spending 2011 as the DC for the Broncos. At 39 years of age, Allen will be the youngest HC in the NFL for the upcoming season.
Offensive Coordinator - Greg Knapp, 1st year
Knapp returns to Oakland after being the OC here from 2007-08. He has 17 yrs of coaching exp (L2Y as QB cch at HOU).
QB Coach - John DeFilippo, 1st year
DeFilippo spent the 2007-08 seasons in Oakland in the same role. His most recent job was as OC/QB cch at San Jose St.
RB Coach - Kelly Skipper, 6th year
This is Skipper's 4th ssn as RB coach after spending his first 2 ssns coaching the TE's. He has 24 yrs of coaching exp. Skipper is the only 2011 OAK coach that was retained by Allen.
WR Coach - Ted Gilmore, 1st year
Gilmore enters his 1st yr here after spending LY as the WR cch at USC. Gilmore spent 2005-10 as the WR cch at Nebraska.
TE Coach - Mark Hutson, 1st year
Hutson spent the past 5 ssns as an assistant coach at Tulane including spending the L/6 gm of '11 as their interim HC.
OL Coach - Frank Pollack, 1st year
Pollack joins the Raiders after spending the L/5 years as an assistant OL coach with the Texans.
Defensive Coordinator - Jason Tarver, 1st year
Tarver spent 2011 as the co-DC and ILB coach at Stanford after spending 10 ssns on the coaching staff of the 49ers.
DL Coach - Terrell Williams, 1st year
Williams joins the Raiders after spending the previous 12 seasons as the DL coach at Texas A&M, Purdue and Akron.
LB Coach - Johnny Holland, 1st year
Holland spent the last 5 seasons as the LB coach of the Texans. He has 16 years of exp as an assistant coach.
Co-Defensive Backs Coach - Clayton Lopez, 1st year
Lopez spent the 2004-05 ssns here in the same capacity. He was most recently a DB coach with the Rams from 2009-11.
Co-Defensive Backs Coach - Johnnie Lynn, 1st year
Lynn joins the Raiders after spending LY as the DB coach of the Eagles. Prior to PHI, Lynn spent 5 ssns with the 49ers.
Special Teams Coordinator - Steve Hoffman, 1st year
Hoffman was the special teams coach for the Chiefs the past 3 seasons. He has 22 years of NFL coaching experience.

OVERVIEW - The Raiders are still attempting to stop being a team which takes 2 steps back after every step forward. In 2010 they broke a streak of 7 straight double-digit loss seasons to finish at 8-8. They were also the 30th team to go undefeated in division play since 1970 but the first to miss the playoffs. The 2011 team had some issues to attend to as the OL was being reworked, Asomugha departed in FA, the WR's were still unimpressive and the coaching staff had some turnover (5 new position coaches). Things looked to be on the up-and-up in the opener as they knocked off the rival Broncos on MNF in Denver. BUF scored a td with :14 left the following week to slide past OAK but behind a solid running game against the Jets, the Raiders moved to 2-1. After an expected loss to the Patriots, the organization suffered the death of their maverick owner Al Davis the night prior to their matchup with the Texans. OAK int'd HOU's final pass int in the EZ and they celebrated in tribute to Al. The Raiders were 3-2 when CLE came to town and while they escaped with a victory, the team lost QB Campbell for the remainder of the ssn. OAK would lose their next 2 as Palmer took over the starting reigns but then, on a Thur night in SD, the Raiders knocked off the Chargers to climb back to 5-4. Wins at MIN and at home against CHI followed and the Raiders were at 7-4 and in 1st place in the AFC West. Unfortunately the bottom fell out over the rest of the year as OAK lost in MIA the next week (Raiders now 6-25 in regular-season games played in the Eastern Time Zone), were demolished by GB and suffered a narrow loss to the Lions. After a 3-pt win vs KC the Raiders still had a shot to win the division with a win against SD and a DEN loss to KC in the finale. While KC came through with the win, OAK dropped their game against the Chargers shortly after. The Raiders finished 8-8 for a 2nd year in a row and lost out on the AFC West Title by percentage points to the Broncos. OAK set the single-season NFL record for penalties and yards penalized with 163 for 1,358 yards. Less than a week after OAK brought in Reggie McKenzie as GM, Jackson was shockingly fired and replaced with former Denver DC Allen. Allen inherits what looks to be a solid offensive nucleus led by Palmer and McFadden but will need to address the 29th ranked defense and their league-worst 5.1 ypc allowed right away if the Raiders are to contend in his inaugural season.

In 2008 PHI made it to their 5th NFC Title game in 8 yrs but lost for the 4th time. In '09 I was high on the Eagles and called for an 11-5 finish. They had the #11 offense and #12 defense. PHI had a rocky 5-4 start but won their next 6. If they had won at Dallas in Week 17 they would have been the #2 seed but they lost and had to play at Dallas again the next week losing the 2 by a combined 58-14. That tm had 70 sts lost to injury (4th most). In '10 it looked like Kevin Kolb would take over for McNabb but Vick took over and started 12 games. They were tied with the NYG at 9-4 and trailed 31-10 mid 4Q but pulled out the miracle win at the New Meadowlands, basically wrapping up the East. PHI was the #3 seed but lost 21-16 to GB. I was set to pick a diff team to win the East (NYG or DAL) but when the Eagles signed Asomugha, Young, Babin, Rodgers-Cromartie, Landri, Jenkins, etc, that changed. They were #2 on off and #12 on D in '10, looked a lot stronger and were the favorites to win it all. Things did not go as planned as they blew five 2H leads and opened 4-8 before winning their last 4. While just 8-8 they were one of 3 teams in the NFL to be in the Top 10 on off (#4) and def (#8). Most of LY's "dream team" players are back for '12. They add in LB DeMeco Ryans and some solid DC's and have a lot of factors pointing up. They were -14 in TO's LY, had 3 net close losses and were +74.2 ypg (2nd best NFL!). Despite their 8-8 record, and playing a tougher schedule that I rank #10 (#14 in '11), my main set of power ratings calls them the most talented team in the NFL. They could be Top 3 on both offense and defense if Vick and other key players remain healthy. They should also improve on spec tms in Bobby April's second year. Will this be the year Andy Reid finally gets to and wins the Super Bowl?

In 2007 a trip to the playoffs was in question as the NYG trailed Buffalo in the 4Q in week 15. Entering the playoffs as a Wild Card, they became yet another team this decade to win 4 playoff games away from home and upset the unbeaten Pats in the Super Bowl. The Giants' defense had 53 sacks and allowed just 98 ypg (3.8) rushing. They opened 11-1 in '08 but went 1-4 incl a home loss to PHI in the playoffs (#7 off, #5 def). In '09 the Giants opened 5-0 and were Super Bowl favorites. They then lost 8 of their last 11 finishing the year with blowout losses (comb 85-16) to CAR and MIN. That snapped a streak of 4 straight playoff appearances. After 8 weeks in '10 the Giants were the best team in the NFL statistically with the #2 off and #1 def. They were home vs 9-4 PHI in the battle for the NFC East. They had the game sewn up leading 31-10 mid 4Q but suffered an epic collapse and actually lost on a PR td with no time left. Instead of controlling the East they were basically two games back and missed the playoffs losing a tiebreaker to GB. They finished #5 on off and #7 on D. LY I just missed picking them to win the East. Things did not look good as injuries decimated the team early on and they opened just 6-6. NYG got healthier down the stretch and won a key game at Dallas. After an upset loss to WAS, they beat the NYJ and DAL the last 2 weeks basically knocking both out of the playoffs and getting them the NFC East Title at just 9-7. Then just like in 2007, they won FOUR playoff games including at GB and at SF then beat Belichick and company a 2nd time in the Big Game. They were just #8 on off and #27 on D. They are stronger TY and should remain healthier and be the rare SB winner that improves their record.

Dallas has won just one playoff game since 1996!! In '07 they went 13-3 (best record NFC) with new HC Wade Phillips. They were booted from the playoffs in the 1st round (at home vs NYG). Dallas was #3 on off and #9 on D and was the preseason favorite to win the NFC in '08. With the playoffs on the line, Dallas was destroyed by PHI 44-6. They were #13 on off and #8 on D (+51 ypg). They were also -11 in TO's (see page 10). In '09 DAL opened their new billion dollar stadium and were considered a Super Bowl contender. After a 6-2 start, they lost 3 of their next 5. DAL needed to beat PHI just to make the playoffs and that win also gave them the home edge the next week in a rematch as they got that lone playoff win (34-14). The next week they were bounced out by the Vikings 34-3. In '10 DAL was everyone's pick to win the East except mine. In their first 5 gms they were +119 ypg but were 1-4! They led the NYG 20-7 but lost Romo for the season to injury and lost that gm. After dropping to 1-7 they fired Wade Phillips and Jason Garrett was 5-3 in the 2H of the year. Dallas was #7 on off but their def fell to #23. They still outgained foes by 12.5 ypg, had FIVE net close losses, allowed a def YPP of 12.9 (see pg 16) and were -5 wins from the previous year. They did lose more than they gained in free agency. I mentioned in LY's write-up that they could be favored in as many as 12 games with Romo's return and that they were. Unfortunately, they blew a 14 pt 4Q lead vs the Jets and a 27-3 3Q lead vs DET but were still 7-4 and leading the East. They froze their own K and lost in OT to ARZ then blew a 34-22 lead over the Giants with 5:41 left which would have put them in control. In the finale with the division on the line DAL lost again to NYG 31-14. They were #11 on off and #14 on D. This year the secondary gets a large upgrade with #1 DC Claiborne and KC FA CB Carr. With their window of opportunity closing, I will call for just their 3rd double digit win season in the last 9 years.

Power Rating 93.68

In 2007 I called for WAS to return to playoff form and they went 9-7 before losing to SEA in the playoffs (21-14 FD edge). In '08 they lost coach Gibbs, OC Saunders and DC Williams. WAS opened up 6-2 with road wins over DAL and PHI in B2B weeks! They just missed the playoffs at 8-8. In '09 WAS did not catch any breaks as they had FIVE net close losses, were -11 in TO's, #7 in starts lost to injury and only -5 ypg despite being 4-12. Mike Shanahan brought in QB McNabb in '10 and they improved to 6-10 but had their worst home record (2-6) s/'94. LY Shanahan said he was comfortable with John Beck or Rex Grossman as his QB. I called it another rebuilding year and pegged them for a 3rd straight finish in the East basement. The Skins had a manageable schedule and actually lost to 7 teams that had a losing record in 2010 and had 4 games total vs teams that made the 2011 playoffs. The highlight of the year was beating the eventual SB Champ Giants TWICE but they had a regrettable 5-11 finish. They were #16 on off and #13 on def vs that soft schedule, OL and WR inj's decimated the offense. This year WAS traded three #1 DC's to land QB RG3 and even though he is a rookie, that is an upgrade at the position. They add in 4 players who had 10+ starts LY thru free agency. Factors pointing upwards this year are that they were -14 in TO's LY, had 2 net close losses, were only -3.1 ypg (like an 8-8 team) despite their 5-11 record WAS had a poor off YPP of 18.7 and had 65 starts lost to injury. On the negative side of the ledger is that the schedule gets a lot tougher this year (#18 to #3) and they play in the same division with a pair of Top 5 NFL teams (NYG & PHI) and I rate Dallas in the Top 10. I look for improved play but a record similar to what Carolina had with Newton LY.

PHILADELPHIA EAGLES

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - For over a decade stability at QB was commonplace with Donovan McNabb at the helm. Michael Vick signed here in 2009 and had 13 att's but made a run at the MVP award in 2010 proving all the doubters wrong and that he still belonged as an NFL QB. He finished topping 3,000 passing yards while completing 62.6% of his passes with a 21-6 ratio. He led the team in rushing in 4 games and finished with 676 (6.8) and 9 td's and was named AP comeback POY. The Eagles showed their support for the 31 year old Vick and he signed a massive 5 yr - $80 million contract. Vick became much more of a pocket passer in 2010 but in the '11 opener would end up rushing for season highs in both att's and yds (11-97). The next week he would be knocked out of the game in the 3Q vs ATL (conc) and a 31-21 lead turned into a loss. Vick wouldn't miss a start but was again knocked out the following week with a broken hand (non-throwing). Despite the injury he threw for a career high 416 yds vs SF, but also struggled after throwing a career high 4 int's vs BUF. The team struggled on the scoreboard and continued to do so until their bye. The battered Vick ended up missing 3 st (gms 10-12) and once he ret'd he clearly went away from running the ball avg just 2.8 att's the L/4 gms compared to 7.2 the first 9. Vick would go on to rank near the bottom of the league in int % and 3rd down passing. Mike Kafka who was a 4th RD DC in 2010 saw his first action as an Eagle replacing Vick vs ATL and again the following week vs the NYG but couldn't produce a score and had an 0-2 ratio. The Eagles signed Vince Young last year hoping that he could also rejuvenate his football career but it didn't go quite as planned. Young did start the 3 gms Vick missed and while he did lead them to a win over the NYG and threw for a career high 400 yds vs NE, he also threw an int every 12.7 att's. Young was let go for this year. Kafka continues as a backup but they also drafted Nick Foles (3rd RD). The Eagles will make yet another attempt with a veteran QB behind Vick as Trent Edwards was signed. Edwards did not play football last year but has 33 career st and had thrown for over 6,000 yds spending '07-'09 at BUF and 2010 at both BUF and JAX. Vick will have to temper his recklessness and become more consistent to lead the Eagles to a playoff berth. If Vick can come close to 2010's ratio of 21-6, my Super Bowl projection will look great.

RUNNING BACKS - The Eagles have averaged over 140 rush ypg in back to back seasons with the emergence of LeSean McCoy. McCoy can do it all as he rarely has to leave the field, even being a superb 3rd down back either by catching the ball out of the backfield or staying back to help in blitz pickups. The LeSean McCoy era began when the Eagles made him a #2DC in 2009. He made his first start in gm #3 with Brian Westbrook inj'd and went on to set the PHI rookie rush record (Correll Buckhalter, 2001) with 606 yds. Westbrook was released for the 2010 season and McCoy led with 1,126 (5.1) becoming a true dual threat as he also led the team with 78 rec (628, 7.7). QB Vick was the #2 rusher with 676 (6.8). Jerome Harrison was signed mid-season and he made 1 start and was the #2 RB with 239 (6.0) but 208 of his yds came in 2 gms with just 8 att's in the other 5 gms he played. LY McCoy's workload increased as he had 273 att's (219 in '11) and finished fourth in the league with 1,309 (4.8) despite sitting out the final game (ankle). He had career highs of 30 carries for 185 yards while rushing for two td's vs DAL in the 7th game of the season. Unfortunately McCoy would have just two more 100+ yd gms the rest of the year. He added 48 rec (315, 6.6) and set a new Eagle's record with 17 rush td's (20 overall) earning Pro Bowl honors. He also set the Eagle's record for consecutive games with a td after scoring in 9 straight to start the season. Ronnie Brown who had 16 st with MIA in '10 was brought in for insurance but he totaled just 136 (3.2) as the #2 RB while #5DC Dion Lewis had 102 (4.4). Owen Schmitt took the bulk of the FB snaps last year after 7th RD DC Stanley Havili was relegated to the practice squad. Coaches are high on Havili however which was shown even further when Schmitt was allowed to leave following the season. They also parted ways with Brown after one season and will again ride their workhorse and one on the league's elite in McCoy who received a lucrative contract extension in the offseason.

RB LeSEAN McCOY #25 5-11 208 Age: 24 4th Yr (15/15)
#2DC PHI '09 (Pittsburgh) - 1309 rush yd (4.8), 17 td, 315 rec yd (6.6), 3 td, 84 rush FD, 45 tfl, 25.4% of off, 1st Tm All-Pro LY. 12 st, 15 gm, 1080 rush yd (5.2), 7 td, 592 rec yd (7.6), 48 rush FD, 18 tfl, 26.8% of off '10.

RECEIVERS - The Eagles have set the standard on how to build a receiving corps through the draft. In 2007 PHI drafted TE Brent Celek. Celek had 318 (11.8) in '08 while PHI also drafted DeSean Jackson who blasted onto the scene as a rookie with 912 (14.7). In '09 they added #1DC Jeremy Maclin (773, 13.8) who along with Jackson (1156, 18.6) and Celek (971, 12.8) were #1, #2 & #3 in rec, yds and rec td's. Jackson (1056, 22.5) and Maclin (964, 13.8) were #1 & #2 again in 2010 and veteran Jason Avant was #3 (573, 11.2) as 5 players had 42+ rec & 500+ rec yds. LY was no different with the top 2 again being Jackson (961, 16.6) and Maclin (859, 13.6) however Maclin was less than 100% for a good portion of the year as he suffered an illness in the offseason that had him enter TC having lost a significant amount of weight (also out 3 w/hamstring). Celek was one of the rec leaders (811, 13.1) despite playing through a sports hernia as well as a torn labrum in his hip. They just missed being the 3rd NFL team to ever have 5 players with 50+ rec (McCoy 48 rec) and 4 topped 500 rec yds. Riley Cooper (#5DC '10) is a field stretching rec and after having only 7 rec (16.6) his rookie year, he had 16 rec LY but led the team with 19.7 ypc. Over the last three years Jackson and his 4.29 speed has led the league by averaging 19.0 ypc. I expect a now healthy Maclin to have a breakout year and reach 1,000 for the 1st time in his career. Deep, talented, elite and a challenge to any secondary make this unit a real weapon for any offense.

OFFENSIVE LINE - Philadelphia's OL struggled in 2009 opening holes for just 106 ypg (4.0) while allowing 38 sks (#21). In 2010 they made a great hire bringing in Howard Mudd, widely recognized as one of if, not the premier OL cch. Unfortunately with the work stoppage he was unable to fully prep this unit. With the mobile Vick you would expect the ypc to balloon and it did to 5.4 ypc (145 ypg) but the unit allowed 50 sks (#29). The group had to adjust to new blocking schemes with the new QB and after struggling early settled in from games 4-9 and allowed only 1 sack in four of those contests. Attrition became a factor as no OL started all 16 games. In 2011 the Eagles lost a LG (10 st) and C (7 st) in FA. They picked up Evan Mathis (0 st '10, 7 st CIN '09) and used their #1, #5 and #6DC's to bolster the unit. Jason Kelce (#6DC) battled for and won the C spot and started all 16 gms. Jason Peters is regarded as one of the league's elite LT and he continued to play at that level LY being the anchor of this line. Todd Herremans had been the starting LG but with the southpaw at QB they slid him to RT to protect Vick's blindside and the duo formed the leagues best OT combo. Mathis was the perfect fit and made 15 sts at LG. Mudd brought in Kyle DeVan who he coached at Indy a week prior to the opener and he started the first 4 and 5 overall at RG however #1DC Danny Watkins won the spot in gm 5 and started 11 gms including the L/9. The team rushed for 142 ypg (5.1) and cut the sacks to 32 (#9). They opened holes for 35 runs of 10+ yds which was #2 in the NFL. The OL went from a liability to a strength and the same 5 started the L/7. They looked to be one the leagues top units for 2012 with even more improvement as a pair of rookies had combined for 27 sts. The enthusiasm was tempered when Peters ruptured his Achilles twice in the offseason and will surely miss the year. Replacing him will be either Demetress Bell who made 22 sts at BUF the L2Y or King Dunlap who just re-signed a contract to be the swing OT after making 7 sts here the L2Y. Replacing a Pro Bowler that has 97 career st will be very difficult but if anyone can find a new mix it is coach Mudd.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - In 2008 the Eagles put up their best numbers in over a decade allowing 92 ypg (#4, 3.5) with 48 sks (#3) but unfortunately it was also Jim Johnson's final season with the DC succumbing to cancer. The unit slid a bit in '09 and again in 2010 when they allowed 110 ypg (#15, 4.2) and produced 39 sks (#10). LY they only lost a part time starter (5 gms) but added 3 players that made a combined 40 sts in 2010. The Eagles also promoted Juan Castillo to DC. Castillo's been an Eagles coach since 1995 (OL cch s/'98) but spent his entire career coaching the offensive side of the ball. In his first season the team allowed 113 ypg (#16, 4.4) but led the NFL in sacks with 50. The right side of the DL has been set with DE Trent Cole and DT Mike Patterson, both 4Y starters. Cole had 11 sks LY and has avg'd 10.6 sk/yr the L/4. The left side was new LY and was the reason the Eagles led the league in sacks. DT Cullen Jenkins was signed from GB and had 5.5 sks and 7.5 tfl. Patterson and Jenkins formed a solid duo on the inside that is formidable against the run as well as pushing the pocket back in passing situations. Jason Babin was dynamic coming over from TEN and was #3 in the NFL with 18 sks. He also became just the 10th player in NFL history with 3+ sks in back to back games. While the front 4 combined for 61 of the 64 sts the backups consisted of 3 players who made 31 sts here in 2010, which allowed DL coach Jim Washburn to rotate fresh guys in frequently. With Babin and Cole both reaching 10+ sks, the duo became the 1st PHI teammates to do so since '95 (William Fuller & Andy Harmon). This group should also see the return of former 1st rounder Brandon Graham who missed most of LY with microfracture surgery to his knee but appeared to be 100% and running with the 1st team at times in OTA's. TY the unit stays intact and is clearly one of the top DL's in the NFL.

LINEBACKERS - The Eagle LB's have never been considered an elite unit but they've been productive. They finished the 2008 season allowing just 18.1 ppg (#4). As with the DL, their numbers slid in '09 and again in 2010 (23.6, #21). LY they lost 2 starters (#3 & #4 tkl'rs) and decided to forego any FA signees. They did draft 3 LB's incl Casey Matthews in the 4th RD and Brian Rolle in the 6th RD. The lone returnee Moise Fokou made 7 sts on the ssn, all in the first 8 gms. Matthews started the first 3 but was a backup the rest of the season. Jamar Chaney (2 st, #8 tkl'r '10) bounced between MLB and WLB early but started all 16 incl the L/9 at MLB finishing as the #1 tkl'r. Rookie Rolle started the L/13 and finished as the #4 tkl'r. Akeem Jordan (3 st '10) started 7, all in the L/8 gms. TY they all return but will have to fight for spots with an upgraded unit. Tackling machine DeMeco Ryans was obtained via a trade with HOU as he never felt at home a year ago with the Texans in their switch to the 3-4 and is now a year removed from an Achilles injury suffered back in 2010 (235 tkls '08-'09, 118 tkls '10-'11). The Eagles used their #2DC on Mychal Kendricks who earned the Pac-12's DPOY honors at Cal last season. The front 7 will rival any in the league and with the solid additions of Ryans and Kendricks should see substantial improvements.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - When the Eagles acquired Asante Samuel it gave them a hard nosed man to man coverage CB allowing them to blitz more often. Their defensive QBR was #5 in the league in 2008. In '09 they decided to part ways with their emotional leader Brian Dawkins but still finished #11 in def QBR. More turnover came in 2010 as they let a starting CB and SS go in FA. They allowed 217 ypg passing (most here s/'90) and the 31 pass td's allowed was 3rd worst in the NFL as well as the worst in franchise history. No single unit saw a bigger upgrade than this one in 2011. Dominique Rodgers-Cromartie was obtained in the Kevin Kolb trade and 2-time 1st tm All-Pro Nnamdi Asomugha was acquired via FA. Asomugha started 15 and saw plenty of action in a hybrid-CB position lining up on both the inside and outside and being used in a lot of zone, something that he rarely did in OAK as he was relegated to solely matching up to the opposition's top receiver with the Raiders. Samuel started 14 while Rodgers-Cromartie made 2 sts at CB and 1 at NB. SS Kurt Coleman made 1 start as a rookie in 2010 but quickly matured into the SS role and finished as the teams #2 tkl'r a season ago. Coleman may find himself fighting for a job in TC however with LY's 2nd RD pick Jaiquawn Jarrett looking for more time on the field after starting 2 and recording 17 tackles as a rookie. Nate Allen (#2DC) made 13 sts as a rookie in 2010 and finished as the #3 tkl'r only starting 12 while still recovering from a patella injury that cost him the final 3 games of his first season. Despite the influx the numbers were solid but not overwhelming. The unit allowed 212 passing ypg with a 27-15 ratio which translated into a def QBR finish of #19. This year they said goodbye to Samuel in a trade prior to the draft as he was owed $8 mill. Obviously this unit is a huge part of why the Eagles led the NFL in sacks as both CB's can press allowing them to send extra blitzers.

SPECIAL TEAMS - For 13Y David Akers handled the kicking duties here. In '11 the Eagles made Alex Henery the highest drafted K s/'06 (#4DC). Henery left Nebraska as the most accurate K in NCAA history and did not disappoint his rookie season. He hit 24-27 incl 1-2 from 50+. PHI also went with a rookie at punter. Chas Henry didn't quite have the success of his kicking counterpart as he avg'd 42.9 (#29) with a net of 36.9 (#27). The return game has been problematic and after finishing #25 in the NFL in KR's in 2010 they gave that duty to Dion Lewis (21.6) and the team finished #31 LY. DeSean Jackson was the main PR but after averaging 11.6 in 2010, he only avg'd 6.7 with the team finishing #27. The Eagles had their 1st top 10 finish in our ST rankings (#9) s/'03 in ST cch Bobby April's 1st ssn ('10) but LY's #26 finish was clearly a disappointment. All are back and PHI should move up TY.

WR/PR DeSean Jackson

Head Coach - Andy Reid, 14th year
Reid is the longest tenured HC in the NFL and in just the 4th HC to reach 100+ wins in a decade. Philadelphia has been to the playoffs in ten of his thirteen seasons as HC.
Asst HC/Offensive Coordinator - Marty Mornhinweg, 10th yr
After working as the 49ers OC/QB coach from 1997-2000, Mornhinweg was the Lions HC from 2001-'02. He joined PHI as a Senior asst in 2003, was the asst HC in 2004-'05 before being named the OC in 2006.
QB Coach - Doug Pederson, 2nd year
Pederson was a career bkp West Coast QB from '96-'04 with GB, PHI and CLE. He was a HS coach from '05-'08 before joining PHI as an off QC coach for '09-'10. 2011 was his 1st yr as an NFL position coach.
RB Coach - Ted Williams, 18th year
Williams was a college coach for 14Y and started as Philly's TE coach for 1995-'96 before being moved to RB coach.
WR Coach - David Culley, 14th year
Culley has been an NFL WR's coach since 1994 when he joined Tampa Bay for 2 years. He was with Pittsburgh from 1996-'98 before joining Philadelphia in 1999.
TE Coach - Tom Melvin, 14th year
Melvin spent his first 3 yrs as the Quality Control Assistant for the offense. He is now in his 11th season as the TE coach.
OL Coach - Howard Mudd, 2nd year
Former OG Mudd was named to the 1960's NFL All-Decade team. From '98-'09 he was the IND OL coach. He is regarded as one of the Top 5 OL coaches in the NFL.
Def Coordinator - Juan Castillo, 2nd year, 18th overall
Castillo had worked on the offensive side of the ball for PHI his entire career. In 1995-'96 he was an offensive asst, moved to TE coach in 1997 and promoted to OL coach from 1998-2010. 2011 was his fist season on the defensive side of the ball.
DL Coach - Jim Washburn, 2nd year
Washburn is one of the elite DL coaches in the NFL. He was the Tenn Titans DL coach for 12 years from 1999-2010.
LB Coach - Mike Caldwell, 2nd year
Caldwell was primarily a backup LB for 11 years in the NFL with 21 combined st for PHI from 1999-2001. He worked as a defensive QC coach from 2008-'09, an asst LB coach in 2010 before being promoted to LB coach for 2011.
Secondary Coach - Michael Zordich, 1st year, 4th overall
Zordich was an NFL safety for 12 years including here from 1994-'98. He rejoined Philadelphia's staff in 2009.
Special Teams Coordinator - Bobby April, 3rd year
April is one of the Top 5 special teams coaches in the NFL. From 2004-'09 the Bills ranked 6th or better in our special teams rankings under April's tutelage. In his first year here the Eagles ST's had their highest finish in our rankings s/'03.

OVERVIEW - Since the 2005 season the Eagles have had a season below .500 but in Philly being mediocre doesn't cut it. After getting to the NFC Championship game in '08 as the #6 seed, they lost their WC game to Dallas in '09 also as the #6 seed. They named Michael Vick the starter and exceeded expectations in 2010 winning the NFC East but lost another WC game hosting GB. The fan base was energized and with the arriving new talent the bar was raised to a new level when they were quoted as being the "Dream Team" before the season even began. They won the opener at STL but a reoccurring pattern would build as Vick got knocked out vs ATL with the lead and they lost. Against the NYG Vick broke his non-throwing hand and was knocked out again as a 16-14 4Q lead turned into another loss. Vick started vs SF despite the inj and threw for a career-high but this time PHI failed to hold onto a 23-3 3Q lead. After a loss to BUF they stood at 1-4. A win at WAS and a bye reenergized them as Andy Reid improved to 13-0 following the bye in a convincing 34-7 victory vs DAL. For the fourth time last season PHI lost a 4Q lead, this time to CHI. Arizona was without former Eagle Kevin Kolb and Vick got knocked out from the game again and for an amazing 5th time a 4Q lead turned into defeat. At 3-6 they were tied for last place in the NFC East. Vince Young would start the next 3 gms but after pulling the upset at NYG, losses to NE and SEA dropped them to 4-8. To their credit and to Reid's, the team ran the table to finish 8-8 while also becoming one of just three NFL teams (HOU & PIT) to finish in the Top 10 in both offense (#4) and defense (#8). This year they are not the clear cut Super Bowl favorite but once again brought in some solid players in the offseason, but this time with out all the attention. They used their first 3 draft picks on defense and bring in one of the NFL's best LB's from Houston in DeMarco Ryans and I rate their defense #2 in the NFL. On offense they need to keep Michael Vick healthy. If he stays healthy for an entire year they could easily lead the NFL in scoring and total offense. Unlike LY when they were the favorite to win the Super Bowl, this year they are just inside the top 10. If not for those blown leads LY they would have been as good as 13-3 so they are under the radar this year and are the most talented team in the NFL if they stay healthy.

NEW YORK GIANTS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - In 2010, Eli Manning threw an NFL-high 25 int's and was often criticized for his poor decisions. In fairness he did have a banged up WR corps and many of his int's were on balls that were deflected. Last year prior to the season, Manning went on a radio show and proclaimed that he was an "elite" QB which drew criticism from many of his detractors. Those detractors were feeling confident after 14 gms with Manning coming off an abysmal 0-3 ratio against the Redskins and the Giants, after a 6-2 start, were sitting at 7-7. Manning however would go on to prove all his doubters wrong leading the Giants to six consecutive wins, another Super Bowl Title, earning SB MVP while averaging 313 pass ypg (66.3%) with a 12-1 ratio in the last five games! One of the improvements in Manning's gm was his ability to face pressure and move outside the pocket. While he will never be known as a mobile QB, in 2009-'10 Manning threw for just one td pass in 60 attempts outside the pocket but would go on to throw 6 td passes last year! Manning finished the year with a career high and franchise record 4,933 yds (61.0%, 29-16 ratio, 92.9 QBR). Backing him up again is former #1 pick David Carr who is in his 2nd stint here after they signed him last August. While Manning has thrown 16 or more int's in five of his eight seasons, his career int % (3.3%) compares favorably to HOF QB's John Elway (3.1%), Dan Marino (3.0%) and Troy Aikman (3.0%). As Manning goes, so do the Giants. In their seven losses, he had an 11-12 ratio but in their 13 wins he had an amazing 27-5 ratio. If Manning can build off last year's finish he will no doubt live up to his "elite" QB billing in 2012.

RUNNING BACKS - The Giants have had a lot of success in the last six years with a 1-2 punch at RB. In 2008 both Brandon Jacobs and Derrick Ward topped 1,000 yards and in 2010 the Giants ranked 6th in rushing (138 ypg) as Ahmad Bradshaw and Jacobs combined for 2,058 yds and 17 td's. HC Tom Coughlin liked to use both in a smash-mouth attack with Bradshaw being the quick, shifty player and Jacobs as the hammer. After Bradshaw became the feature back in '10, they inked him to a new 4Y, $18 million dollar deal last year and Jacobs took a pay cut to return, but the overall output of the position had to be one of the biggest disappointments for the Giants as they averaged an NFL low 89 rush ypg (3.5). Both Bradshaw and Jacobs missed time battling injuries and the rebuilt OL did a poor job in run-blocking. The run gm got off to a slow start averaging just 84 ypg (3.2) in the first 5 gms (Jacobs out 2 gms with a knee inj) and then Bradshaw had the Giants' first 100-yd gm of the year vs BUF. Bradshaw would then miss four gms with a broken foot and they averaged just 77 rush ypg (3.2) in that span. As both RB's got healthier the run gm improved down the stretch, averaging 110 ypg (4.2) which helped in their playoff run (172 yds vs ATL). One of the more pleasant surprises was rookie FB Henry Hynoski. While he didn't have any carries, he proved to be a reliable pass-catching threat out of the backfield which helped the concerns they had at the TE position. This year they decided to not renew Jacobs (now at SF) and while they probably would have preferred a more powerful back like Boise's Doug Martin, who went to TB, they drafted David Wilson who is known more for his speed with their #1 pick. Bear Pascoe, who plays more of an H-Back role, gives them an additional rec threat. Even without the bruising Jacobs who leaves as the #4 all-time rusher in NYG history, the Bradshaw/Wilson duo should have no problem topping last year's 1,230 yds (3.8) that Bradshaw/Jacobs produced.

RECEIVERS - For the past several seasons, the Giants have had one of the best, and certainly most underrated rec corps in the NFL. However, one of the big questions in training camp LY was how the Giants would replace WR Steve Smith and TE Kevin Boss, who both left in FA. Even QB Manning expressed his concern. Mario Manningham was expected to assume a larger role in the offense while a combo of Bear Pascoe, Travis Beckum and Jake Ballard were expected to fill the shoes of Boss. Adding to their early ssn woes was Domenik Hixon being lost for the year in Week 2 (ACL). With Manningham banged up nearly all year (missed 4 gms with a knee inj) the Giants needed someone to step up outside of Hakeem Nicks. What they got was 2nd yr WR Victor Cruz, who spent much of the lockout working with Manning. Cruz would go on to be arguably the biggest surprise in the NFL last year setting a Giants record with 1,536 yds (18.7) including a NYG record 99 yd td rec in the key win over the NYJ in Week 15. Nicks, who was the leading rec in '10 (1052, 13.3), had another solid season becoming a more complete receiver with 1,192 yds (15.7). In the franchise's 87 seasons, Cruz and Nicks were the first duo to have 1,000+ yds in the same year. Ballard ended up being the best rec threat at TE and actually had more yds (604) than Boss (531) had in '10. Unfortunately Ballard tore his left ACL during the 2nd half of the Super Bowl and Beckum (ACL) also had knee surg in Feb. Both are likely to begin the season on the PUP list and this year they bring in Martellus Bennett from DAL. After his sensational postseason, Manningham cashed in, leaving for SF. Nicks (broken foot in OTA's, limited to start TC) and Cruz both return TY and they add #2DC Rueben Randle, who adds size to the position. Jerrel Jernigan who played mostly special teams last year as a rookie, is also back and should have more impact and Hixon returns from injury. If Ballard can come back healthy by September this again looks like one of the best receiving units in the NFL.

OFFENSIVE LINE - The Giants OL had been largely unchanged since the end of the 2007 season during which they fielded the quintet of LT Chad Diehl, LG Rich Seubert, C Shaun O'Hara, RG Chris Snee and RT Karem McKenzie. They were the top rush off in the NFL in '08 averaging 157 ypg (5.0) and were #6 in '10 averaging 138 rush ypg (4.6) while allowing only 16 sks (#1). Last year they made massive changes on their OL in the offseason, deciding not to bring back the aging interior OL in Seubert and O'Hara. Will Beatty moved to Diehl's old LT spot, Diehl moved to LG for Seubert and newcomer David Baas went to C for O'Hara. The results were not pleasant as the Giants fell to 89 rush ypg (3.5), their worst numbers s/'99. The unit dealt with several injuries as Beatty missed 6 gms (eye), Baas missed 5 gms (neck/head) and Snee had his streak of 101 consec starts snapped (concussion). They ended up winning the Super Bowl with Diehl at LT and Boothe starting at LG. One positive was that the pass protection remained in the Top 10 (#7) but they still allowed nearly double the sks (28) they did in '10 and it could have been worse if not for Manning's improved pocket presence. This year they lose McKenzie to FA but bring in Locklear from WAS who has 82 career starts. Boothe was inj'd in May with a torn pectoral muscle and could be out the first few gms. There's only one way to go after their last place finish and provided this unit stays healthy they should be much improved.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - The Giants have one of the best 8-deep DL rotation's in the league. They have finished in the Top 6 in sks in four of the past five seasons while also perfoming well in the run gm, finishing in the Top 10 in three of the past five seasons. Their depth was certainly put to the test last year. 2x Pro Bowl DE Justin Tuck, who became the primary vocal and physical presence on the defense after Michael Strahan and Antonio Pierce departed, would miss the opener with a neck injury and also dealt with a groin injury that saw him miss a total of 4 games. After recording 11.5 sks in '10, Tuck's sk total dropped to 5 (lowest s/'06). He was not alone on the injured front as rookie #2DC DT Marvin Austin spent the season on IR (pectoral inj) and DE Osi Umenyiora missed 7 games with an ankle injury. Despite the injury and contract issues, Umenyiora would finish the season with 9 sks. With Mathias Kiwanuka being moved to strong-side LB, the Giants needed former #1DC Jason Pierre-Paul to step up and he delivered, becoming an All-Pro with 86 tkls and 16.5 sks. At the DT spot Linval Joseph, who barely played as a rookie, had to replace NT Barry Cofield and did a fine job filling the gap while DT Chris Canty, who stands at 6'7", continued to hold the point as well. Overall the unit got off to a fast start with 26 sks in the first 7 gms (5-2 record) but slumped to just 11 sks in the next 7 gms (2-5 record) as they faced some of the best offenses in the league. As the unit finally got healthy towards the end of the year they would finish with 22 sks in the last 6 gms incl 11 in the final 2 regular season gms which were a big reason why they made the playoffs. The Giants 48 sks (#3) were the most here since their 2007 Super Bowl team and this year they could be just as good. DT Austin is finally healthy and they add in massive vet Shaun Rogers to back up Canty. Both Tuck and Umenyiora return and expect to be much healthier while JPP may be the finest young DE in the NFL. This unit remains one of the premier DL units.

LINEBACKERS - In '10 the Giants had an average LB corps on one of the best D's in the NFL as they gave up 38 and 45 pts in losses to PHI and GB which kept them out of the playoffs. Last year with so much depth on the DL, former DE Mathias Kiwanuka was moved to SLB in the preseason to boost the corps and gave the Giants yet another pass-rusher from a different position. Kiwanuka would finish with a career-high 84 tkls (11 tfl, 3.5 sks). MLB Michael Boley was the unit's best player in '10 and despite missing 2 gms with a hamstring injury LY, was the teams 2nd leading tkl'r (93). One of the bigger surprises had to be rookie #6DC Jacquian Williams (tm's fastest LB) who would finish as the teams #6 tkl'r despite only starting 2 games. Despite the addition of Kiwanuka, the Giants slipped to allowing 25.0 ppg (#19). However, as the Giants got healthier later in the year, they did not yield more than 20 points in each of their final 6 games. This year all the key players return and Kiwanuka was signed to a 3 year contract extension in April. They also bring in former #1DC Keith Rivers from CIN, who missed all of last year with a wrist injury, and has played just 35 gms since being drafted in '08. Adding depth are MLB Chase Blackburn, who is a special teams ace leading the Giants in ST tkls in each of his six seasons, and former #2DC Clint Sintim, who has battled knee injuries throughout his career. This unit has much more depth than last year and should climb back into the Top 10 in ppg allowed.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - The Giants produced the 9th best pass defense in the NFL in 2010 (210 ypg), led the NFL in takeaways (23 fumbles, 16 int) and held opponents to a 57.1% completion rate (5th). Last year #1DC CB Prince Amukamara was added to the mix with three experienced CB's in Terrell Thomas, Corey Webster and Aaron Ross. They also re-signed S Deon Grant, who would be paired with 2010 FA acquisition S Antrel Rolle and S Kenny Phillips. This unit was expected to be a strength but of all the units that dealt with injuries last year, none were as ravaged as the DB's were, especially in the early part of the season. Amukamara broke his foot in August, which slowed his progress all season. Thomas tore his ACL in the preseason, forcing NB Ross to start opposite of Webster all year. Due to the inj's the pass ypg slipped to 255 ypg (#29) which was their highest in the Super Bowl era (1970) and the completion % rose to 61.3% while their def QBR was 20th in the league at 86.1. Rolle would lead the tm in tkls (96) while Phillips was #5 with 82 and Webster and Ross combined for 10 int's and 28 pbu's. This year they lose Grant (64 tkl) and Ross to FA but all the other key players return and Thomas comes back from injury. Amukamara should have better production his 2nd year while S Tyler Sash was singled out by HC Coughlin as one of the better rookies on the team last year. They drafted CB Jayron Hosley in the 3rd round for depth and provided they remain healthy, this could be the most improved secondary in the NFL this year.

SPECIAL TEAMS - The NY special teams unit fell apart at the end of the 2010 season and it cost them a playoff berth when they allowed DeSean Jackson to score on a punt return on the final play in game 14. In fact, their #29 ranking was the lowest ranking in Coughlin's long tenure here. Last year they brought in P Steve Weatherford from NYJ who was used to the swirling winds of the Meadowlands as he battled the inconsistent Matt Dodge in training camp. Weatherford ended up winning the job and averaged 45.7 (#15) with a net of 39.2 (#13). Lawrence Tynes hit 19-24 FG's (lowest FG's made in NFL) but did make the key OT winning FG in the NFC Championship Game. Their

Head Coach - Tom Coughlin, 9th year
Coughlin has led the Giants to 7 straight non-losing ssns which is the 2nd longest in club history (1954-'63). He became the oldest HC to ever win the Super Bowl LY & Coughlin now has 7 road postssn victories tying him with Tom Landry for the most in NFL history.
Offensive Coordinator - Kevin Gilbride, 9th year
In Gilbride's 5 seasons as the Giants OC they have finished in the Top 10 for ttl offense 4 straight years. He was the QB coach here from '04-'06 and has 23 years experience in the NFL.
QB Coach - Sean Ryan, 8th year
Ryan moves back to coaching the QB's (2007-'09) after coaching the WR's the L/2 yrs. Under his watch LY Cruz & Nicks became the 1st pair of 1,000 yd rec in the same ssn in Giant history.
RB Coach - Jerald Ingram, 9th year
Ingram has produced a 1,000 yd rusher in 7 of his 9 yrs as the RB cch. He has been an asst to Coughlin in some form for 21 yrs.
WR Coach - Kevin M Gilbride Jr, 1st year
Gilbride is the son of the OC and has been an offensive quality control cch and off asst here the last 2 yrs. He's been in demand as the Giants denied TB permission to interview him in Feb.
TE Coach - Mike Pope, 1st year
This marks Pope's 30th consecutive ssn as an NFL coach. This is his 13th ssn of his 2nd tour with the Giants (22nd with team).
OL Coach - Pat Flaherty, 9th year
Flaherty joined NY after coaching the Bears TE's from 2002-'03. The Giants had the same 5 starters for 38 straight gms from 2007-'09 but LY's overhauled unit finished last in the NFL in rushing.
Defensive Coordinator - Perry Fewell, 3rd year
Fewell was Coughlin's DB coach in JAX from 1998-2002. After working for STL and CHI he was the DC at BUF from 2006-'09 and was also the Bills interim HC for the last 7 games of '09 (3-4).
DL Coach - Robert Nunn, 3rd year
Nunn was the TB DL cch in '09 after serving as the DT cch for GB in '05-'08. He has also worked for MIA & WAS as a def asst.
LB Coach - Jim Herrmann, 4th year
Herrmann served as the Jets LB coach from 2006-'08 before coming to the Giants in 2009. He was the Michigan DC from 1997-2005 leading the nation in D his 1st year.
Cornerbacks Coach - Peter Giunta, 7th year
Giunta joined NY in '06 after 5 ssns as KC's DB cch. He was the DC in STL from 1998-2000 and also coached with NYJ & PHI.
Safeties Coach - David Merritt, 9th year
Merritt broke into the NFL in 2001 as a defensive asst for the Jets staying there for 3 years. In 2004-'05 he was a defensive assistant here then was promoted to safeties coach in 2006.

Special Teams Coordinator - Tom Quinn, 7th year
Quinn was Stanford's ST's cch from 2002-'05 and also coached TE's in 2002-'03 and OLB's in 2004-'05. He joined NY as a ST's asst in '06 and took over as STC in '07.

OVERVIEW - The 2010 season was one to forget for the Giants as they blew a 21 point 4Q lead to PHI which cost them a playoff berth and QB Manning threw an NFL high 25 int's. Last year's offseason did not give the fan base much room for optimism as they reshuffled what had been one of the most consistent OL's for 5 years and one of their best WR's Steve Smith and starting TE Kevin Boss were lost in FA. Expectations were low as PHI was the consensus pick to take home the NFC East. Injuries decimated the DB's in the preseason and a couple other starters on D were out for week 1. In the opener, the secondary concerns were validated as they allowed 305 pass yds to Rex Grossman as the Redskins ended a six game losing streak to NY beating the Giants for the first time at home since 2005. Despite being outgained 367-323, NY took advantage of several STL miscues and beat them 28-16. The next week they knocked out PHI QB Vick and won 29-16. The following week NY trailed ARZ 27-17 with just 5:16 to go but thanks to a ? call that overturned a fumble, were able to rally for a 31-27 win to move to 3-1. Despite outgaining the Seahawks 464-424 they lost at home 36-25 with a 94 yd IR td being the key play of the game. After expected wins over BUF and MIA at home to move to 5-2 and atop the NFC East, they travelled to take on NE who had won 20 straight regular season games at home. Manning led a late comeback throwing a td pass with :15 left and the Giants escaped with a 24-20 win. The bottom would fall out as they dropped the next four (3 by a td or less). Despite outgaining SF 395-305 they lost 27-20. Facing PHI, who was playing with Vince Young at QB, they lost at home 17-10. Then on MNF the D was torched for 577 yds and 49 pts by NO. They welcomed in unbeaten GB and played valiantly in a 38-35 loss but were 6-6 and behind DAL in the division. In a key NFC East matchup at DAL on SNF they found themselves down 34-22 with 5:41 left and their season on the brink. Manning would lead them to a pair of td drives and DE JPP would block a DAL FG attempt on the final play as they escaped with a 37-34 win. They shockingly dropped a home gm to WAS the next week as Manning had an 0-3 ratio but inspired by NYJ HC Ryan's comments beat their cross-town rival 29-14 setting up a winner take all rematch vs the Cowboys in the finale. They jumped out to a 21-0 HT lead and would cruise to the Div Title with a 31-14 win. In the Wildcard they destroyed ATL 24-2 (442-247 yd edge) then in a rematch at GB pulled the shocking upset on the frozen tundra over the defending champions, winning 37-20. Again travelling, they beat SF in OT 20-17 in the NFC Championship Game to set up a Super Bowl 42 rematch vs NE who had won 10 straight gms since their loss to NY earlier in the year. Trailing 17-15 in the 4Q deep in their own territory, Manning hit Manningham on a key 38-yd pass which fueled the game-winning drive. For the 2nd time in 5 years they became unlikely Super Bowl Champions! This year they return many of their key players and figure to be an even better team as they had 37 starts lost to injury last year (finished just 9-7)! Following their Super Bowl win 5 years ago they followed it up with a 12-4 season and could do the same again this year. However, it will be hard to duplicate their postseason run from a year ago as the 2003-'04 NE Patriots have been the only team in the last 20 years to repeat as Super Bowl champs.

DALLAS COWBOYS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - Statistically speaking Tony Romo is clearly the most successful QB ever in Cowboys' history. However, this position is judged by Super Bowl wins (Roger Staubach, Troy Aikman). In '10 Romo missed 10 games with a broken clavicle. DAL acquired vet Jon Kitna in the '09 offseason and he led in '10 filling in for Romo with 2,365 yards (65.7%, 16-12 ratio, 88.9 QBR). Romo was fully healthy for last year's opener but two costly 4Q TO's by him led to a 14-pt blown lead in a loss to NYJ. The following week playing with throbbing pain from a fractured rib and collapsed lung, Romo led DAL to a comeback OT win vs SF. The injuries clearly affected his performance as through Sept/Oct Romo had a 62.7% completion rate with just an 11-7 ratio. As he got healthier later in the season, Romo was back to his Pro Bowl form. Vs BUF he set a DAL single-game completion % record with 88.5% completing 23-26 passes (Danny White, 87.5%) and his 148.4 QBR was his highest since '06. He also had a stretch of 128 straight passes w/out an int and in the months of Nov/Dec, he improved to a 68.2% completion rate with a sensational 18-2 ratio. Romo then injured his hand vs PHI (Gm #15) and was pulled. Stephen McGee, who moved up from 3rd string when Kitna was placed on IR in Dec, took over in the gm throwing for 182 yds (63%, 1-0 ratio). Romo finished with a 102.5 QBR, his highest ever (262 ypg, 66.3%, 31-10 ratio) and 2nd highest in club history behind Roger Staubach's 104.8 in 1971. DAL made a great pickup this year in signing experienced vet Kyle Orton who made 8 combined starts w/DEN and KC last year throwing for 1,758 yds (59.5 %, 9-9 ratio, 78.4 qbh) and has 14,532 career pass yds. He will serve as the backup with Kitna opting to retire. Romo, who already owns several DAL QB records, started off his career with a 19-7 record but is just 28-23 s/'08 (6-7 w/out him) due to lineup changes and his own injuries. The 36 sks he endured LY were a career-high and now at 32 years old and in his 10th year, it's now or never for Romo to silence his critics about his performance in big gms. If DAL is to contend in the NFC East, they desperately need Romo to stay healthy all year and have him build upon last year's Nov/Dec performance.

RUNNING BACKS - Marion Barber was either the #1 or #2 rusher on the Cowboys for 6 straight years but in '10 he dealt with some injuries and saw his role as the Cowboys' power back diminish and was released in July. Felix Jones, who showed explosive potential as a #1DC in '08, hasn't been healthy or consistent enough to be the every-down back which DAL has been looking for since Emmitt Smith left the team in '03. Despite a great training camp last year, Jones again was not 100% all year (separated shld'r vs SF, along w/ankle & hamstring inj) which opened the door for rookie DeMarco Murray (#3DC). Many scouts saw Murray as possibly being relegated to third down duty, but he put on some weight and got bigger and stronger in the offseason. Murray broke Smith's single-game rush record (237 yds vs PHI '93) vs STL as he ran for 253 yds (10.1) which included a 91-yd td run which was the 2nd longest in DAL history (Dorsett 99 yds '83). Murray was the engine of the DAL vehicle in the middle of the season with 761 (6.2) of his season total 897 rush yds (5.5) coming in a 6 game stretch (DAL 5-1 in those 6 gms). Unfortunately, Murray was lost in Gm #13 vs NYG to a season-ending ankle inj but he still led all rookies in rush yds. With Murray sidelined, Jones was the only TB on the roster as undrafted rookie reserve Phillip Tanner (hamstring inj) had been placed on IR just days prior. Depth issues were so bad that DAL had to call up 34 year old vet Sammy Morris off the couch to be the backup. Jones did manage B2B 100-yd efforts vs NYG and TB but only had 54 yds (3.6) in the L/2 gms (both losses). At the FB spot DAL picked up Tony Fiammetta off of waivers from CAR but after missing 3 gms due to illness, DAL activated #7DC Shaun Chapas from their practice squad to take over. This year Murray, Jones and Chapas are back and they added veteran FB Lawrence Vickers as a true FB who can make a difference in the run gm. Expectations are high for Murray this year as his emergence possibly gives DAL that long awaited featured back. Jones is expected to be the change-of-pace back again and if Murray can stay healthy all year, he should become only the 2nd DAL rusher to top the 1,000 yard mark in the post-Emmitt era.

RECEIVERS - The main staple in the DAL rec gm has been TE Jason Witten who had been their #2 rec every year from '07-'10 and went to 7 straight Pro Bowls ('04-'10). Miles Austin, who used his first career start in '09 as a launching pad (team-record 250 yds), led the Cowboys in '09 and '10 in receiving yds and was selected to the Pro Bowl in each of those years. In '10 DAL used its #1DC pick on Dez Bryant and he didn't disappoint with 561 yds (12.5) in his rookie season. All 3 returned last year (Roy Williams #4 rec released) giving DAL one of the better WR units in the NFL. Austin slipped to #4 with just 579 (13.5) as he battled a nagging hamstring inj and missed 6 gms. This allowed Witten to lead DAL in rec yds for the first time in his career (942, 11.9) as it was his 8th straight year with at least 60 rec although his Pro Bowl streak was surprisingly snapped. Bryant, despite not topping 100 yds in a game, finished #2 with 928 yds (14.7) and 9 td's but the breakout player was Laurent Robinson who spent his first 4 seasons of his career w/ATL & STL. Robinson, who originally signed with the tm on Sept. 7, was released on Sept. 13 but returned to the club just a week later to fill a need for depth and shockingly led the Cowboys with 11 td receptions and finished #3 with 858 yds (15.9). This year Robinson departs via FA along with TE Martellus Bennett who never fulfilled his potential. DAL did draft a 4 year starter at Virginia Tech in WR Danny Coale in the 5th RD. Witten signed a 5 year, $37 million extension at the beginning of last year and is in the top 5 all-time in NFL history in receptions and yards by a TE. Last year was only the 2nd time in franchise history that 3 WR's caught at least 40 passes in a season (1983). If Austin can remain healthy and Bryant can continue to improve in his 3rd season, this again looks like a very solid receiving corps.

OFFENSIVE LINE - For the first time since '07 DAL revamped its starting 5 OL last year after finishing 16th in rushing and 10th in sacks allowed in '10. They released RG Leonard Davis, RT Marc Colombo and C Andre Gurode while only 2 starters returned in LT Doug Free and RG Kyle Kosier. For the first time since owner Jerry Jones purchased the Cowboys in 1989, they drafted an OL in the 1st RD in 2011 (just the 4th OL in the 1st RD in team history) and Tyron Smith didn't disappoint, starting all 16 gms as a rookie LG and was surprisingly the team's best OL. The unit opened the season with three 1st year starters (C Phil Costa, OG Bill Nagy and Smith), including two rookies. It was the first time in franchise history that DAL started two rookies on the OL in a season opener. Not surprising DAL fell to #18 in rushing (112.9 ypg, 4.4) while giving up 39 sks, their most since '05. They ended up bringing back vet Montrae Holland to solidify things at RG in place of Nagy who was banged up but the struggles continued all season. The biggest disappointment was Free who signed a $32 million contract ($17 million guaranteed) in the offseason but failed to live up to expectations. He led the team in penalties and sacks allowed. This year Smith will move to LT which is where the Cowboys originally projected him but didn't want to make the move in his 1st year in the league (didn't play LT in college). Free will be moved back to RT where he played in '09 before manning the left side the past two seasons. Kosier suffered a torn MCL in the season finale and he was let go along with Holland. DAL brings in a pair of vets to man the OG spots in LG Nate Livings, who started all 16 games in each of the L/2 years in CIN, and RG Mackenzy Bernadeau, who started 13 games for CAR in the L/2 years. After a disappointing season last year, expect DAL to cut down on the sacks allowed and if RB Murray stays healthy, the run game should have its highest finish s/'09 (#7).

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - The entire DAL D struggled in '10 which led to the midseason firing of Wade Phillips. The 109 rush ypg (4.3) allowed (#12) was the most since '04 and the 35 sacks (#16) generated was the lowest since '06. They brought in new DC Rob Ryan last year to make a difference as he is known for running a very aggressive 3-4 style with an emphasis on pass rushing. The Cowboys brought in DE Kenyon Coleman in FA from CLE who had familiarity with Ryan's system after playing for him for 2 seasons with the Browns. It is his 2nd stint in DAL after being here for 4 seasons ('03-'06) earlier in his career. DE Jason Hatcher earned the starting job over former #1DC Marcus Spears with a stellar training camp but missed 3 games and did not start for 5 games (Spears started the other 5) after suffering a calf injury in Week 3. He still posted a career-high 28 tkls and 4.5 sks. DE Igor Olshansky was demoted to second team and was moved from RE to back up Coleman. Undersized NT Jay Ratliff made the Pro Bowl for the 4th straight year but his numbers have been in decline with just 2 sacks last year after posting 3.5 sacks in '10, 6 sacks in '09 and 7.5 sacks in '08 and it seems that he is beginning to wear down from all of the double teams in the middle. Overall the Cowboys showed improvement in both the run game allowing 99 ypg (4.1, #7) and improved their sack total to 42 (#7). This year the top 4 players again return and added to the mix is rookie DE Tyrone Crawford from Boise St (#3DC) who will need to put on some weight if he expects to see significant action. DAL has finished in the top 7 in sacks in 4 of the L/5 years and in the top 12 in rush ypg allowed for 6 straight years. In the 2nd year of Ryan's D, I expect even better numbers as this is another solid unit.

LINEBACKERS - DAL transitioned to the 3-4 D under former HC Bill Parcells and ILB Bradie James would go on to lead the Cowboys in tackles for 6 straight seasons ('05-'10) to become the first DAL player to lead the team 6 times overall since they began keeping track of tackles in 1979. DAL used their #2DC in '10 to select Sean Lee out of Penn St in hopes to groom him as a future starter on the inside. Lee, who played a 4-3 in college (also suffered an ACL inj), took time to adjust to the new scheme. Despite having one of the best OLB combos in the NFL in DeMarcus Ware and Anthony Spencer (combined 20.5 sacks), the Cowboys broke team records for most points allowed (27.2 ppg, #31) and most yards allowed (5628, #23) in '10. Last year DAL shuffled the LB corps. Lee took over as the starting RILB over Keith Brooking and would go on to lead the team in tackles (105) while improving his pass coverage skills tying for the team lead with 4 int. Ware earned his 6th consecutive Pro Bowl trip topping the team with 19.5 sacks and became just the 5th player in NFL history to have 6 straight seasons with 10 or more sacks. Spencer had 66 tackles last year and added 6 sacks. Long-time NFL vet Brooking, who came to DAL in '09 after leading ATL in tackles for 8 consecutive seasons, assumed a reserve role. The changes to the lineup worked as while the D still allowed 343 ypg (2nd most in L/10 yrs), the ppg allowed improved by nearly a td to 21.7 ppg. This year DAL released the aging Bradie James after he posted 44 tackles and also let Brooking go. The top three return and they also add in Dan Connor from CAR (75 tkls last year) to man the inside with former Penn St teammate Lee. Last year's #2DC Bruce Carter spent much of his rookie season on the PUP list recovering from an ACL injury suffered in college so look for more of a contribution from him. With the emergence of Lee on the inside to go along with one of the league's finest OLB combos, this again looks like a premier LB corps.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - The Cowboys allowed a franchise-record 33 td passes in '10 and the 243 pass ypg allowed were the most in more than a decade. The numbers were surprising as the Cowboys returned two solid corners who both made the Pro Bowl in '09 in Terrence Newman and Mike Jenkins. Last year DAL desperately tried to sign CB Nnamdi Asomugha in FA but failed. They again signed FS Gerald Sensabaugh to a 1 year deal and also brought in Orlando Scandrick in hopes that he could take over for Newman as the starter. DAL was depth shy to start the season as Newman was out the first two with a groin injury while Scandrick and Jenkins (dislocated shoulder) played through injuries. Newman would finish with 4 int and 57 tkls but his play deteriorated noticeably as the season progressed as teams actually targeted him. SS Abram Elam, who played under Ryan at CLE, was brought in and he finished as the #3 tkl'r (68). Despite the additions, the 3,906 pass yards allowed were the 2nd most in franchise history. The secondary again was the biggest need this offseason but this time the Cowboys got their man as they traded up to get the top corner in the draft in CB Morris Claiborne who figures to take the starting spot over from Jenkins immediately. Newman was a salary cap casualty so they brought in CB Brandon Carr from KC (64 sts, 4 yrs) to man the CB spot opposite Claiborne, while Scandrick and Jenkins should provide quality depth. At the S spot Elam was let go but Sensabaugh is back (signed 5 year extension in Dec) after he was #2 on the team in tkls (75) and they also brought in SS Brodney Pool who also played under DC Ryan in CLE. There's only one way for the secondary to go after two miserable seasons (#29 QBR '10, #25 QBR '11) and clearly with Claiborne in the lineup, DAL should post its best QBR since 2009 (83.5, #16).

SPECIAL TEAMS - The Cowboys usually field a good ST's unit which finished 5th in 2009 and 9th in '10 with all of the main performers returning last year. K David Buehler, who was inconsistent in '10, was limited with an injury for the first half of the last season and lost his starting spot to rookie Dan Bailey. Bailey would go on to make 26 consecutive FG's including 3 game-winners on the final play and his 6 FG's made vs WAS made him only the 3rd rookie K in NFL history to make a half dozen FG's in a game. He did miss a couple of key FG's in the ARZ and NYG gms which began the Cowboys' late season slide. P Mat McBriar, who became the first DAL P to lead the league in both gross punt avg (47.9) and net punt avg (41.7) in '10, was slowed in the 1H of last season with a left foot injury and would average 43.8 with a net of 36.1. DAL would sign rookie Chris Jones to take over for him on two occasions and he had a total of 10 punts (42.6) with a 40.5 net. The P fell to #26 as a tm in avg and #28 in net. The Cowboys drafted Dwayne Harris (28.9) to help out in the return game and DAL avg'd 23.3 on KR's. Bryant was the #1 PR (6.9) but again DAL was among the worst in the NFL avg 7.1 ypr (#27). The coverage units were solid allowing 9.3 on PR's while the KR D was among the best in the NFL allowing 21.4 ypr. This year Bailey returns while McBriar and Buehler were let go. If DAL can get more out of the return game, look for them to improve upon last year's #21 ranking.

Head Coach - Jason Garrett, 3rd year
Garrett is the first former Cowboys player to become HC. He led the team to a 5-3 record as an interim HC to close out 2010 before leading them to an 8-8 finish last year. Garrett was the OC from '07-'10 with 2nd, 13th, 2nd and 10th finishes.
Offensive Coordinator/Offensive Line - Bill Callahan, 1st year
Callahan comes to Dallas after spending the L/4 years as the Assistant HC/OL coach for the NY Jets. He was the Nebraska HC ('04-'07) and was the HC at Oakland ('02-'03) taking the Raiders to the Super Bowl in his first season. He was also the OC at Oakland ('99-'02) and an OL cch for Philly (1995-'97).
Quarterbacks - Wade Wilson, 6th year
A 19 year NFL QB, Wilson was the QB coach for Dallas from 2000-'02 working with Troy Aikman. He was also the QB coach for Chicago from '04-'06 before rejoining the Cowboys in '07.
Running Backs - Skip Peete, 6th year
After serving as the Raiders' RB coach for 9 years ('98-'06), Peete joined Dallas in 2007 in the same role. Since then the Cowboys have avg'd 114 ypg rushing (4.4).
Asst. HC/Wide Receivers - Jimmy Robinson, 2nd year
Robinson came over from Green Bay last year after being the Packers' WR coach for 5 years. Prior to joining GB, Robinson was New Orleans' WR coach ('04-'05).
Tight Ends/Passing Game Coordinator - John Garrett, 6th year
Prior to his time with the Cowboys, Garrett spent 3 seasons coaching at the University of Virginia.
Defensive Coordinator - Rob Ryan, 2nd year
A career DC, Ryan has 11 years of NFL experience in that role between New England ('97-'99), Oakland ('04-'08) and Cleveland ('09-'10) before being hired as the DC here last year. Dallas improved many of the Def numbers including reducing the ppg allowed from 27.3 ppg to 21.7 ppg.
Defensive Line - Brian Baker, 2nd year
Baker was Carolina's DL coach from '09-'10 and prior to that St Louis' DL coach from '06-'08. Last year's Dallas DL improved to 42 sacks (#7) and the rush D was also #7.
Linebackers - Matt Eberflus, 2nd year
Having spent '09-'10 with Cleveland as their LB's coach, Eberflus was picked by Ryan to head up his LB unit here. He was Missouri's DC from '01-'08.
Secondary Coach - Jerome Henderson, 1st year
Henderson was the Cleveland secondary coach from '09-'11 working with Ryan for the first two years. He also was the NY Jets' secondary coach from '07-'08.
Special Teams Coach - Joe DeCamillis, 4th year
DeCamillis has been a ST's coach since 1988 with Denver ('88-'92), NY Giants ('93-'96), Atlanta '(97-2006) and Jacksonville ('07-'08). He joined the Cowboys in '09 and Dallas has had two top 10 ST rankings in his three years here.

OVERVIEW - From 1966-82 the Cowboys appeared in 12 NFC Championship games in 17 years. They won 3 Super Bowls in the early 90's but have failed to make it the NFC Championship game since 1996 and have just one playoff win to show for it. "America's Team" clearly has not lived up to that billing as of late. Last year expectations as usual were high in HC Garrett's 1st full season. The Cowboys led the Jets 24-10 in the 4Q of the opener but shockingly lost 27-24 as Romo had 2 key TO's. Dallas had been 246-0-1 all-time when leading by 14 pts in the 4Q! Romo, playing through multiple injuries, led them to B2B wins over the 49ers in OT and the Redskins on MNF but against the Lions, Dallas blew its largest lead in franchise history (led 27-3 in 3Q) losing 34-30. Against New England they again blew a 4Q lead to fall to 2-3 which was their 11th straight game decided by 4 points or less dating back to '10. Murray set the team rush record as they crushed the Rams 34-7 but the following week were blown out by a fired-up Philadelphia team after some off-season remarks by DC Ryan. After a win over Seattle, Dallas enjoyed its most lopsided win since 2000 with a 44-7 crushing of Buffalo. After a pair of close wins over Washington and Miami, Dallas stood at 7-4 and atop the NFC East and things were looking good. However, Garrett inadvertently iced his own K at the end of regulation vs ARZ by calling a TO just before a made FG which would have given them the win and they would go on to lose in OT. In a key division matchup, Dallas led the Giants 34-22 with 5:41 left but once again blew a 4Q lead losing 37-34 after the Giants blocked Dallas' game-tying FG on the last play. They rebounded to beat Tampa Bay 31-15 and then lost 20-7 to PHI in a meaningless game. In the season finale at NYG, it was a winner-take-all showdown but after cutting the Giants' lead to 21-14 in the 4Q, Dallas gave up the final 10 points to finish 8-8. All of the key pieces return this year including Murray who will be counted on as the Cowboys' featured back. Romo had an excellent finish despite the team's 1-4 record down the stretch and after they addressed their biggest weakness (secondary) in this year's draft, the Cowboys again on paper look like a playoff contender.

WASHINGTON REDSKINS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - Ready or not, Robert Griffin III is the QB of the present and the future for the Redskins. The team certainly gave up a boatload of picks to move up to the 2nd spot in the draft to get him. But will RG3 solve the team's long-time problem at the position which dates back to Joe Theismann? WAS has started 21 QB's over the L/19 seasons. Griffin has plenty of talent and many are comparing him to LY's Roy Cam Newton. He's a difference-maker, a player who makes things happen by extending plays when nothing's there. He's exciting on the move, extremely fast, makes big throws, is good in the red zone and throws a deep ball well. He will have to learn the pro offense however Mike Shanahan will have to adjust his offense to Griffin's talents (and limitations). In Shanahan's 32 gms as the WAS HC, his QB's ran the ball 61x's total! The team wants Griffin to improvise on 3rd Dn but also stay in the pocket as much as possible. RG3 ran a spread offense in college and is not totally comfortable under C, as he can be skittish in the pocket and doesn't move through his progressions very well. WAS ranked 14th in the NFL in pass off with an avg of 235.8 ypg LY, which was pretty good considering the in-season changes from Rex Grossman to John Beck and back to Grossman again, as well as the lack of quality receivers. Beck is gone and Grossman will tutor RG3 on the pro game, although the skills of the 2 QB's are as different as night and day. LY Grossman started 13 gms and threw for 3,151 yds (57.9%) with 16 td. However, Grossman was turnover-ridden all season, with 20 int (tied 3rd most in NFL) and 5 fmbl lost. When he's on Grossman can be very good in the play-action passing game. He is a good short-to-intermediate passer who struggles on long passes, especially 3&long. While WAS seemed to have so many other needs, they surprised everybody by drafting another QB, Kirk Cousins, in the 4th RD. Cousins is also a different kind of player than Griffin. He has good size and spd and spent 5 years in a pro-style offense at Michigan St. He performs well within the system and is very accurate. Shanahan has staked his job at WAS on RG3 as his QB we expect him to line up as the opening day starter in 2012 and not look back.

QB ROBERT GRIFFIN III #10 6-2 220 Age: 22 Rookie
1st round, 2nd pick out of Baylor. Tied or set 54 BU records in his 3Y. Heisman and Manning Award winner LY.

RUNNING BACKS - WAS has had a mediocre ground gm for 3 years in a row, ranking 27th, 30th and 25th s/'09. LY, WAS went through 5 RB's (starting 4 of them) and just barely cracked the 100 ypg mark (100.9) ranking 25th Avg 4.0 ypg (t#21). This year their top 3 rushers Roy Helu, Tim Hightower and Evan Royster are back, but they desperately need a consistent runner to balance the offense. If Hightower returns from a knee inj, it should make for an interesting TC competition for a HC who prefers to rely on one back. Hightower was acquired in Aug from ARZ, where Heran rushed for a career-best 736 yds in '10. He was having a solid debut season with WAS when he was OFY (knee) in wk 7. The Redskins say he's ready to go. Hightower is a good receiver and blk'r who needs to learn patience as a runner. He seems to be a good fit for the offense as he runs hard and finishes plays. In his 5 gms, he ran for 321 yds (3.8) and caught 10 rec (7.8). Helu took over as the st'r and posted 3 straight 100 yd gms late in the yr before getting nicked up in wk 15. A change-of-pace back with spd and explosion, he rushed for a team-high 640 yds (4.2) and added 379 rec yd (7.7). When Helu was injured, 6th RD DC Royster was given an opportunity and topped 100 yds in each of the L/2 gms. He's a between-the-tackles runner but can be explosive. He gained 328 yds with an excellent 5.9 avg. Ryan Torain, who had finished 2010 as the st'r, was cut after 15 gms after rushing for 200 yds. FB Darrel Young was serviceable in his 1st yr as a st'r. A converted LB, he missed 3 gms with inj. With five combined 100 yd performances by Helu and Royster and the way Hightower ran early last season, RB should be a position of depth and quality for the Redskins.

RB ROY HELU #29 5-11 219 Age: 23 2nd Yr (5/15)
#4DC WAS '11 (Nebraska) - 640 rush yd (4.2), 2 td, 379 rec yd (7.7), 1 td, 31 rush FD, 14 tfl, 18.9% of off as a rookie LY.

Tim Hightower #25 6-0 222 Age: 26 5th Yr (5/5)
#5DC ARZ '08 (Richmond) - 5 st, 5 gm (ACL), 321 rush yd (3.8), 10 rec, 78 rec yd (7.8), 1 td, 13 rush FD, 8 tfl, 7.4% of off LY. 13 st, 16 gm, 736 rush yd (4.8), 5 td, 136 rec yd (6.5), 30 rush FD, 18 tfl (11.8%), 20.2% of off w/ARZ in '10.

FB DARREL YOUNG #36 5-11 246 Age: 25 3rd Yr (8/13)
UFA WAS '09 (Villanova) - 33 rush yd (5.5), 1 td, 138 rec yd (9.9), 0 tfl, 0.6% of off LY. 16 gm, 19 rush yd (4.8), 1 rec (3.0), 1 rush FD, 1 tfl, 0.4% of off in '10.

2011 RB Total Yards:	1,976 - #20
2011 RB YPC:	4.7 - #18
2012 Top 3 RB:	1,289 (4.4) - #17
2012 RB Rushing ('09-'11):	2,623 (4.5) - #23
NFL Player Draft Rating:	6.80 - #29

RECEIVERS - WAS carried 9 WR's at times LY, but none were true playmakers. Santana Moss is 33 and showing some signs of age. #3DC Leonard Hankerson flashed briefly before suffering a season-ending inj and Anthony Armstrong, a huge surprise in '10, disappeared in '11. The Redskins went out and signed Pierre Garcon from the Colts and Josh Morgan from the 49ers. Now if RG3 can show some consistency at QB, WAS has a solid group of receivers, not to mention TE's Fred Davis and Chris Cooley, who can produce. WAS ranked 8th in passing off in '10, their only top 10 ranking in the last decade. LY they slipped to 14th at 235.8 ypg. Moss is out to prove that last season didn't represent a changing of the guard as he wasn't the tm's leading receiver for the 1st time in his 7Y here (Jabar Gaffney, 68). He started 12 gms (broken hand) catching 46 passes for 584 yds (12.7) and 4 td, his lowest totals as a Redskin. Moss is known for finding the void in defenses and making big plays after the catch. Garcon has started 43 gms the L3Y after being drafted in the 6th RD by IND in '08. On the worst team in FB which went through 3 QB's, Garcon still managed 947 rec yds (13.5) and a team-best 6 td. He has improved his stats every season and is a fundamentally sound receiver who runs good routes and has excellent hands. Hankerson had some issues with the playbook early, though he was starting to come on when he was OFY (hip) in Nov. In the 2 gms prior to the inj, he had 12 rec and a 100 yd game in his 2nd start. Morgan is an underrated and productive 5th yr wideout who caught only 15 passes (14.7) for SF LY because of a broken leg. He had 96 catches in '10-'11. Armstrong's productivity declined from 44 catches in '10 to 7 in '11 and he will fight to make the team. He's the team's fastest WR and his 19.8 ypc in '10 was 3rd in the league. Diminutive Brandon Banks is truly a return specialist, although he earned some snaps on offense late in the season. Davis had a career year at TE with 7 of the Redskins' first 13 completions of 20+ yds and was leading the team in catches, rec yds and td when multiple positive drug tests got him susp for the L/4. Cooley struggled and lost his starting job (8 rec, 65 yd) before succumbing to knee and finger injuries in wk 6. He never quite got on track with the QB's after the 8 year vet had a breakout season with 77 rec for 849 yds and 3 td in '10. This year's unit is just as deep, but still there's nobody on the roster who scares opposing DC's.

OFFENSIVE LINE - It was a patchwork OL at times LY because of inj's and only C Will Montgomery and RG Chris Chester started all 16. LT Trent Williams, the 4th overall selection in '10, was having a better 2nd season prior to being susp for the L/4 after a positive drug test. Williams is slated to start again at LT. He is a top-tier athlete with a great package of power, strength, mobility and footwork who will only get better if he stays out of trouble. He allowed only 3 sks LY after giving up 11.5 as a rookie. Kory

Lichtensteiger suffered a torn ACL after 5 gms LY but returns at LG. A 4th RD DC of DEN in '08, he's a real mauler in the run game. Montgomery assumed the C job when Casey Rabach was cut in TC. He is a smash mouth blk'r and valuable swing man who can play both G and C. LY's 7th RD DC, Maurice Hurt, is to be Lichtensteiger's eventual successor after '10's #7DC Eric Cook bombed in his 2 gm trial at C (with Montgomery at LG). Chester started all 16 after coming over from BAL where he was a 2Y st'r. A converted TE, he's a great athlete who needs to be more physical on the inside. RT Jammal Brown is 31 and has struggled to regain the Pro Bowl form he displayed in NO before his hip woes began in '09. FA Tyler Polumbus was able to put in some solid relief for Brown. Knowing that their OG play is the weak spot on the OL, WAS drafted two TY. Third-rounder Josh LeRibeus from SMU was criticized by some as a reach pick, but 5th-rounder Adam Gettis played in a Shanahan-like zone-blocking scheme at Iowa under former NFL OL coach Kirk Ferentz. Gettis will compete with LeRibeus and Hurt to become the #3 guard. #7DC Tom Compton will compete for a job at OT. When your running game ranks only 25th (100.9 ypg, 4.0) and you've all'd 41 sks (t #11, 9 in 1 game alone), perhaps it's time to make a change on the OL. Shanahan is going with what he has however as all 5 st'rs return but there's a more mobile QB behind center.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - WAS allowed 117.8 rush ypg LY (4.3), ranking 18th. That was a slight improvement over the 128 ypg (4.6) all'd in 2010 but still the 2nd most in the L5Y. The Redskins did get 41 sks, the most by the team in more than a decade, though that was mainly due to the play of the LB's. LDE Adam Carriker, NT Barry Cofield and RDE Stephen Bowen hold down the line. They are all veteran players who hold the POA. Carriker, was more comfortable in his 2nd year of DC Jim Haslett's 3-4 scheme LY after coming over from STL in '10. A '07 1st-rounder, he tallied 5.5 sks and can dominate at times while playing the run. Former Giant Cofield adjusted well in his first year with the Redskins giving them the inside presence they lacked in '10. Big and powerful, he's a great technician. He had a career-high 54 tkls and 4 sks in '10 and followed that up with 25 stops and 3 sks LY while taking on more double-teams. Bowen, who signed from DAL, provided good bookend help opposite Carriker. He notched 6 sks and 41 tkls. He's more of a 1-dimensional player and is somewhat a liability vs the run. Former starting RDE Kedric Golston was serviceable before going on IR (MCL) in wk 11. He made 30 sts from 2008-'10 but had to rotate with Bowen LY. He made 16 tkls and 1.5 sks in limited action. Second-rounder Jarvis Jenkins (ACL in the preseason) is massive and surprisingly powerful, and he has the quickness to get into the backfield and the size to plug lanes. LY's 7th RD DC, Chris Neild, had 1.5 sks in the opener but did little after that. Darrion Scott effectively replaced him as the bkp NT in Dec. No unit showed more improvement from '10 to '11 than the DL and all of the starters return.

LINEBACKERS - Brian Orakpo and Ryan Kerrigan combined for 16.5 sks in their first season together in '11. Kerrigan made a swift transition from college DE to NFL OLB and proved to be a disruptive edge rusher from the start. He still needs to work on his instincts and fluidity but a DD sk season should be around the corner. Orakpo has 28.5 sks in 3 NFL seasons after being drafted in the 1st RD. He's tenacious and powerful but not a pure tkl'r, though he has improved his tkl ttl each yr. London Fletcher has played in 224 consecutive gms, a remarkable streak which includes 1,782 tkls. LY he registered 166 tkls (tops in the NFL) while setting the tone for the D with his all-around play. Like a coach on the field, he is a true playmaker who reads plays, anticipates and puts himself in position to get to the ball. Perry Riley is the other starting ILB. A #4DC in '10, he made enough strides in his 2nd season to beat out Rocky McIntosh, who was injured in wk 10. He notched 68 tkls in 8 sts and specializes as a run defender. To strengthen the unit, the Redskins signed former NYG st'r Jonathan Goff, who will be the backup on the inside. Goff was a 16 game st'r for NY in '10 who missed all of LY with a knee inj. ILB Lorenzo Alexander started 12 gms in '10 but is better suited as a reserve. #4DC Keenan Robinson will play ILB and on ST's. The Redskins may have the best young outside pass rushers in the NFL with Orakpo and Kerrigan, to go with 37 yr old wonder Fletcher on the inside. Another solid performance out of this group should be expected in 2012.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - Even though WAS improved its defensive QBR from 89.6 (#24) in 2010 to 87.4 (#24) in 2011, the secondary play was disappointing. CB's DeAngelo Hall and Josh Wilson will return for their 2nd yr together, but there will be 2 new st'rs on the back end and lots of competition for the reserve roles. Hall cost the Redskins 2 victories over rival DAL when he was burned on big plays. Last season he started every game and made 90 tkls (#2 on tm). FA signee Wilson came over from BAL and played better down the stretch. The st'r of 48 gms the L4Y in SEA, BAL and WAS (11 int in that time), he is an underrated cover CB who has great speed and is very physical. Vying for playing time will be Cedric Griffin, who played himself out of a starting job in MIN LY and former NO bkp Leigh Torrence. Both are an upgrade over Kevin Barnes, a 3rd RD DC in '09 who played nickel back in '11. SS Brandon Meriweather, a former Pro Bowler with NE in '10 will try to resurrect his career after being cut by the Pats and Bears in the last year. Tanard Jackson started for 4Y in TB but lost his job due to poor tackling. He's an excellent pass defender, especially in zone schemes. Reed Doughty started 11 gms in both S spots and was second to Hall in tkls in the secondary. He will be a backup along with Madieu Williams. Williams started 38 gms for MIN from '08-10 and played in SF LY. He has nice range on deep balls and is a willing tkl'r. This unit was disappointing in '11, even though their pass defense improved from 262.0 ypg (31st) to 222.1 ypg (12th), it was still the 2nd worst by the team in the L10Y. As a whole, the unit needs to make many more big plays, having intercepted just 10 passes, forcing just 5 fmbls and recovering only 3. Although the secondary should continue to improve, it's still the D's weakest unit.

SPECIAL TEAMS - Led by ST star Lorenzo Alexander, STC Danny Smith's coverage units were among the NFL's best again LY. WAS ranked 2nd in KR coverage (20.8) and 10th on PR (7.8). Return specialist Brandon Banks averaged only 9.1 on PR and 23.0 on KR after averaging 11.3 and 25.1 a year earlier. Anthony Armstrong, Terrence Austin and Niles Paul could challenge Banks in TC. Overall, WAS was 28th in our ST rankings and haven't been in the top 10 s/'07. UFA signee Sav Rocca provided WAS with their best punting in years until slowing after injuring an ankle in Nov. He had a 43.1 avg and a 39.0 net good for 18th in the league. Where Rocca stood out was with his 28 In20 kicks on 42.4% of his punts which ranked 1st in the NFL. K Graham Gano set franchise records with a 59 yd FG and 4 kicks of at least 50 yds, but he also had a league-most five FG's blk'd and 10 total misses. Not counting the blocks, Gano was 31 of 36. Gano also had 32 TB on KO (45.7%, 13th). WAS brought in veteran Neil Rackers for some serious competition for the still-unproven Gano. Let go by HOU, Rackers was 32-38 on FG last season (84.2%). He missed 4 of his 8 tries from 40-49, though he was 4-5 from 50+.

Head Coach - Mike Shanahan, 3rd year
After 14 yrs with DEN ('95-'08) and sitting out the '09 season, Shanahan became the HC of his 3rd team in '10. Shanahan is the owner of 157 career reg ssn wins.

Offensive Coordinator - Kyle Shanahan, 3rd year
Kyle's 1st job as a position cch was with HOU (WR's) in '06 and he was their QB cch in '07. Shanahan was promoted to OC for '08-'09 before joining WAS in 2010.

QB Coach - Matt LaFleur, 3rd year
LaFleur served as an offensive asst for HOU in '08-'09 working with the WR's and then QB's. 2010 was his 1st yr as a full-time NFL position coach.

Asst HC/RB Coach - Bobby Turner, 3rd year
Turner was the Broncos RB coach from '95-'09. DEN had eleven 1,000 yd rushing seasons by 6 diff RB's in his tenure.

WR Coach - Ike Hilliard, 1st year
Hilliard was a #1DC and an NFL WR for 12Y. He coached WR's for 2 ssns in the UFL and was an asst WR cch for MIA LY.

TE Coach - Sean McVay, 3rd year
Prior to his time here with the Redskins, McVay spent time on both the TB coaching staff and in the UFL.

OL Coach - Chris Foerster, 3rd year
With 19 yrs of coaching exp under his belt, Foerster has worked as an OL cch and OC in the NFL. He was BAL's OL cch from 05-'07 then went to SF in '08-'09 to work with their OL.

Defensive Coordinator - Jim Haslett, 3rd year
Haslett has been a winner in the NFL as a player (8Y), DC (10Y) and HC (7Y). He won the 1979 NFL Def ROY and the 2000 NFL Coach of the Year serving as NO's HC ('00-'05).

DL Coach - Jacob Burney, 3rd year
Burney was the Broncos DL coach from '02-'08 under Mike Shanahan. After sitting out 2009, he joined WAS in 2010.

LB Coach - Bob Slowik, 3rd year
Slowik has 19 years coaching in the NFL with 10 as a DC including the '07-'08 seasons with DEN. After coaching the DB's the L2Y here, this will be his 1st with the LB unit.

Defensive Backs - Raheem Morris, 1st year
Morris became the NFL's youngest HC when he took over TB in '09. He was TB's DB cch for 2Y prior to his promotion.

Special Teams Coach - Danny Smith, 9th year
Smith cch'd the BUF ST's from '01-'03. He joined WAS in '04.

OVERVIEW - The Redskins did not seem to improve in their 2nd season under HC Mike Shanahan in 2011. They've now had a team-record 4 straight last-place finishes in the NFC East and LY lost 6 straight HG's to end the yr (1st time s/'94). While the offense was struggling at midssn, failing to top 20 pts in 7 straight, the D played well and allowed an avg of just 20. But when the offense finally got on track, avg 21 ppg over the L/7, the D faltered and surrendered an avg of 27. The result was a 5-11 record, the worst of Shanahan's 17 full NFL seasons. He fell to 11-21 in WAS, one game worse than the records which cost predecessors Jim Zorn and Steve Spurrier their jobs. But Shanahan remains very much in command of the organization, as once-brash owner Dan Snyder exhibits uncharacteristic patience with a coach who staked his reputation on Rex Grossman and John Beck in a division which boasts SB winner Eli Manning, MVP candidate Michael Vick and 3x Pro Bowler Tony Romo at QB. WAS got off to a surprisingly strong start in 2011, upsetting the eventual SB champ NYG in the opener, en route to a 3-1 record, also taking down ARZ and STL. But WAS was never the same after their wk 5 bye. Six consec losses followed and the team played QB roulette for a while before pulling out of the tailspin with a Gm 11 win over SEA. WAS then lost to NYJ and NE before inexplicably sweeping the Giants. Instead of finishing the ssn with 3 straight victories and heading into '12 with some momentum, they were embarrassed by MIN and then folded in the 4Q vs PHI. DC Jim Haslett hasn't quite had the impact he did earlier in his career and OC Kyle Shanahan's offense lacked dynamic playmakers. A -14 TO ratio (tied for 30th in the league) didn't help matters any. WAS may have mortgaged its future by trading three 1st RD DC's (and a #2) to move up 4 spots to draft RG3. If he's anywhere near the franchise player Shanahan expects him to be however, the trade will have been well worth it. A quick check of LY's schedule shows it was #28 in the NFL and Wash lost to 7 teams which had a losing record in 2010 and only faced 4 teams which made the playoffs. They were #16 on Offense and #13 on Defense. There are a lot of factors pointing towards an improved record this year (see Division forecast) but playing in the same division with two of the top 5 teams in the NFL and a 3rd playoff contender it looks like a 5th straight year in the NFC East basement.

In '08 GB had to replace Favre and dropped 7 more gms from the yr prior (13 to 6 wins), the worst drop in tm history. There were plenty of signs pointing up in '09 though. They had SIX net close losses so they were a handful of plays from being 12-4. Despite their 6-10 record GB outgained foes by 174 ypg. I pointed out they would face the #31 sked and I really liked their new DC, Dom Capers, who switched the D to a 3-4. Naturally GB improved and was one of 4 tms in the NFL to rank in the Top 10 on both off and def (#6, #2) and they finished +95 ypg. GB was the best tm in the NFL the L8W going 7-1 but lost a shootout at ARZ in the 1st RD of the playoffs. They benefitted from +24 in TO's and were +5 wins from '08. Those factors projected a weaker record in '10 and then GB was the most banged up tm in the NFL (91 sts lost). They opened just 8-6 and needed to win their L/2 (NYG, CHI) and catch some breaks. At 10-6 they won tiebreakers vs NYG and TB and got the #6 seed. GB then got past PHI, whipped ATL and topped CHI all on the road and then beat PIT in the SB (outgained in 2). Despite the inj's they were #9 on off and #5 on D. LY I called for GB to win their 1st Div Title s/'07 and said they must be considered the SB fav as I expected better health. They started out strong and gained momentum weekly with wins at CHI, ATL, SD & DET. After they beat the NYG on the road everyone was speculating on that PERFECT ssn and whether they would rest players. All that ended with their 5 pt loss in KC and despite resting st'rs they won their final 2 incl vs DET with bkp QB Flynn. GB was beaten at home by eventual SB champ NYG in their 1st playoff gm! Naturally most factors point down TY with +24 in TO's, +4 net close wins, +5 overall wins (10 to 15) from '10 to '11, super off and def YPP's and the fact they were actually outgained by 6.4 ypg despite their 15-1 record. Still I look for the D to rebound from its #32 finish (#5, #2 prev 2Y) and GB is the clear SB fav TY.

I have had a pretty good pulse on the Bears as they have been an up-and-down team since getting to the Super Bowl in '06 going 13-3, 7-9, 9-7, 7-9, 11-5 and back down to 8-8. In '10 all my key offseason indicators had Chicago as one of the most improved teams and predicted that both MIN and GB would have weaker records. At one point I was going to go out on a limb and pick the Bears to win the North. I backed off and regretted that a lot that offseason. Chicago was only #30 on off and #9 on D and for most of the year looked like a middle-of-the-road team. They opened 11-4 and could have kept GB from the playoffs and despite having their seeding clinched played the Pack tough in a 10-3 loss. They whipped SEA 35-24 (led 35-10) but Jay Cutler came out of the NFC Title game and they lost 21-14 to those Packers. They benefitted from great YPP's on both off and def (pg 16) and had 4 net close wins. LY I went out on a limb and called for the NFC's #2 seed of '10 to miss the playoffs in '11 despite some fine FA signings. The Bears were poised to prove me wrong opening 7-3 despite being just #17 on off and #25 on def. They lost QB Cutler (OFY) and then two weeks later RB Forte was OFY. They went 1-5 down the stretch to finish just 8-8 with the #24 off and #17 D. TY I look for the usual bounce back as both Cutler and Forte return and they finally added talent at WR in Marshall (played with Cutler at Denver) and rookie Jeffery. The Bears are much better prepared if Cutler misses a game with Campbell added as the bkp QB. The schedule goes from #8 to #30. This year is similar to 2010 in that 3 of my 5 sets of power ratings play out the season and say that Chicago will end up in first and we all know division champs only repeat 30% of the time. Still just like 2010, I did not pull the trigger but do call for the Bears to top this year's chic pick DET and make the playoffs.

DET finally ended its playoff drought (since 1999) but still has won just ONE playoff game since 1957 (54 YEARS!). The Lions came into LY just 39-121 over the previous 10 yrs. My forecast of 3-13 in '08 proved too generous as DET had the NFL's first ever 0-16 season. DET's 517 points allowed was 2nd worst ever and they did manage to finish 30th on offense (not last). They "improved" to 2-14 in '09 as they were -18 in TO's (see pg 10) and had 63 sts lost to injury. In '10 DET was just 2-10 but did remarkably well over their last 4 (3 opp still in playoff hunt) to get to 6-10. They lost all 3 QB's to injury at some point and did upset eventual Super Bowl Champ GB, 7-3. DET managed to stop their streaks of 19 straight divisional losses and also their NFL record streak of 26 straight road losses. LY they got Matthew Stafford back and had a potentially dominating D-line. With all those high DC's - from 9 DD losing years in 10 seasons - DET was talented and had gained confidence. I went out on a limb and called for them to stop their streak of losing seasons at 10 years. The Lions opened a super 5-0 and after a 45-10 win over Denver were 6-2 midseason. They went 4-4 in the 2H and made the playoffs for the first time in 11 yrs but were booted out by NO in the first round, 45-28. They went 0-6 (incl playoffs) vs NFC playoff teams and did not defeat a team that finished with a winning record. The Lions lose only one starter but had another solid draft. They are even more talented and this year have big expectations and hope to end that playoff win drought. The Lions' schedule does go from #4 to #21 but there are some factors pointing downwards. They were +4 wins from '10, had 2 net close wins LY, only had 23 starts lost to injury, had an off ypp of 13.4, were +11 in TO's and they face 8 teams whom I project with a winning record. It may come down to tiebreakers at the end.

In '08 I called for MIN to grab its first Div Title s/'00 and they did not disappoint but did lose in the 1st round of the playoffs at home. In '09 they signed Brett Favre and went 12-4. MIN destroyed DAL 34-3 in the playoffs and then had a 475-257 yard edge on the road vs NO but lost on a late Favre int. In '10 I wondered if Favre could have the same type of year he did in '09 (68%, 34-7 ratio) and they had only 16 sts lost to injury with 2 net close wins. They drew NO, NYJ, GB & NE but I was surprised to see them plummet to 6-10 (last place in North, 1st time s/'90). Favre's ratio was a poor 11-19 and Childress was fired at 3-7. The Metrodome roof collapsed and they played "home games" in Detroit and TCF Bank. Frazier was 3-3 as a interim HC despite not having his QB and playing in tough situations. They had the #23 off and #8 def. The Vikings did lose 3 starters from the D front 7 and WR Rice was lost to FA and talent-wise 2011 looked to be a rebuilding year. MIN blew THREE DD leads in the first 4 games and opened 0-4. They got to 2-6 but lost the next 2 and then RB Peterson to injury. The losing streak climbed to 6 (did face GB, ATL, DEN, DET and NO in that stretch) before they beat WAS on the road. They finished 3-13 and last place in their division for the 1st time since 1990! MIN had the #18 off and #21 def. Eight players departed in the offseason that had 11 or more starts and they only added 1 that fit that category. Will RB Peterson regain his form coming off an ACL? They do go from facing the #2 schedule to the #19. They also had an amazing SEVEN net close losses LY, were only -28.5 ypg (good for 3-13), were -3 wins from the previous year and had a def YPP of 12.8. All those factors point upward but they play in the same division as 3 playoff contenders and figure to be a unanimous pick for the basement.

GREEN BAY PACKERS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - In a few short years Aaron Rodgers has rapidly made his mark at QB which is very impressive considering the QB legacy for this franchise. Rodgers set an NFL record with a 122.5 QBR while becoming the first QB ever to pass for at least 4,000 yds with 6 or fewer int. For the year he completed 68.3% for a career-high 4,643 yds and 45 td (1 behind Drew Brees). Now 28, he makes plays with his head, arm and legs. He felt constant pressure last season (36 sk), yet his mobility bought time for him to find a multitude of rec's. He had more td passes, yds and better accuracy than Brett Favre did in any of his 3 MVP seasons. Rodgers moves D's with his eyes, scrambles out of jams and challenges the best DB's long. On passes of 30+ yds LY, he had a 130.6 rating, hitting 28 of 52 for 1,152 yds, with an 11-0 ratio. He also had a 131.4 QBR vs the blitz. Rodgers' red zone stats are astronomical in the L3Y (75-2 ratio!). GB has a problem, though after losing backup Matt Flynn in FA this year. Graham Harrell was signed as an undrafted rookie in '10 but has never taken a snap. He put up monster numbers at Texas Tech, and while he's very accurate, lacks an NFL arm. In the 7th round, GB drafted BJ Coleman, who is a confident small-school product who has the tools to play in the NFL. Either Harrell or Coleman will have to be brought up to speed quickly. If Rodgers were to get inj'd, GB would be sunk because they lack a productive running game which could carry the offense. Rodgers is among the NFL's elite but the lack of depth is a small concern.

QB AARON RODGERS #12 6-2 225 Age: 28 8th Yr (15/15)
#1DC GB '05 (California) - 4,643 pass yd (68.3%), 45-6 ratio, 9.2 ypa, 122.5 QBR, 257 rush yd (4.3), 2 td, 36 sk, NFL MVP, 1st Tm All-Pro LY. 15 st (inj), 3,922 pass yd (65.7%), 28-11 ratio, 8.3 ypa,101.2 QBR, 356 rush yd (5.6), 4 td, 31 sk in '10.

UFA GB '10 (Texas Tech) - GB's practice squad the L2Y.

2011 QB Rating:	122.56 - #1
2012 QB 1 and 2:	122.78 - #1
QB Career Start Record:	41-21 - #3
2012 QB Starts L2Y:	30 - #13
QB Career Playoff Record:	4-1 - #1
NFL Player Draft Rating:	8.68 - #22

RUNNING BACKS - The GB running game wasn't much of a factor on the #1 scoring team in the NFL LY. The Packers rushed for only 97.4 ypg (27th), their 1st time under 100 yds s/'05 and only ran fro 12 td's (T #16). Things don't look like they will be any better in '12. Brandon Jackson, '10's leading rusher, was let go LY and this offseason GB didn't re-sign Ryan Grant, who fell 19 yds shy of the tm rushing lead in '11. Though not the player he was prior to his '10 ankle inj, Grant was a veteran influence, rushing for 559 yds (4.2). James Starks will start, but he was only so-so in his 1st full season, rushing for 578 yds (4.3) with 216 rec yds (7.4). As a rookie #6DC in 2010, he was on the PUP list for 9 gms (hamstring) and inactive for 4 before getting playing time late in their Super Bowl run, when he ran for 315 yds and impressed the coaches. LY he took over the lead role late in the season, before missing 3 of the L/4 (knee, ankle inj's). He did return for the post season. Brandon Saine will get a better look after the 2011 UFA impressed the coaching staff in minimal playing time (18-69 rush, 10-69 rec). He's raw but fast, strong and a good blk'r. Alex Green was a #3DC in '11 but was OFY with a knee inj. Fan favorite John Kuhn made the Pro Bowl as the NFC's FB. Kuhn is better as a lead blocker than a pass protector. An improved run game would help out the defense more by slowing down the game, especially when GB is up big.

RECEIVERS - GB has the NFL's best group of WR's and the deepest set of TE's, with 5 players who caught at least 37 passes and scored 6 or more td's last season. The surprise was Jordy Nelson, who had a standout performance in Super Bowl XLV and parlayed it into a breakthrough ssn. On a team stocked with elite talent, it was Nelson who led the Packers with 1,263 yds (18.6) and 15 td (only Rob Gronkowski and Calvin Johnson caught more scores). His scores included distances of 93, 84, 58, 55, 50 and 40 yds. Greg Jennings fell shy of 1,000 yds for the first time s/'07 (949, 14.2, 9 td) due to a knee injury late in the season which caused him to miss 3 games. Over the L4Y, he's avg'd 73 rec, 1,155 yds and 9 td. Donald Driver returns for his 14th season but is no longer the #1 option, though he'll still see plenty of action. His receiving totals have dropped the L3Y from 74 to 70 to 51 to 37, and he totaled only 1,010 yds the L2Y combined, though he did score 10 td's. James Jones is an underrated deep threat who scored 7 td on 38 catches (635 yds) LY. Over the L3Y he's averaged 40 rec, 585 yds and 6 td's, excellent stats for a #4 wideout. Randall Cobb, a #2DC a year ago who specializes as a RS, is also a threat at WR (375, 15.0, 1 td). The TE in GB is more than just a safety valve, and the Packers carried 5 TE's on their roster for a variety of duties LY. Jermichael Finley finally stayed healthy for an entire season, setting career highs with 55 rec for 767 yds and 8 td. He is a matchup nightmare who can be split out wide to dominate undersized CB's or beat LB's over the middle. Andrew Quarless and Tom Crabtree are both considered blockers rather than receivers (though Quarless caught 21 balls in '10 when Finley was inj'd). They both play 25-30% of the snaps. Aaron Rodgers has a bevy of receivers in his arsenal that is unmatched by any other team and there's no reason GB won't have one of the top 3 passing attacks again this year.

OFFENSIVE LINE - The Packers' OL was only partially at fault for the team's #27 rush ranking (subpar RB's) but were solely to blame for the 41 sacks allowed and 7.4 sack %, both ranking 21st. While the 41 sacks was better than the league worst total of 51 given up in '09, it was their 2nd highest total s/'92. Chad Clifton was the oldest starting LT in the NFL at 35, a mainstay in GB since his rookie ssn, but he suffered through hamstring and back inj's which limited him to 6 starts. He was cut in the offseason but Bryan Bulaga won't move over from RT, where the coaches think he is on the verge of being a Pro Bowler. GB had made Bulaga their #1DC in 2010 with the idea that he would take over for Clifton at some point. Bulaga, replaced an inj'd Mark Tauscher at RT early in his rookie yr and has remained there. Either Marshall Newhouse or Derek Sherrod will take over as Rodgers' blind-side protector. Newhouse, who started 12 at LT LY, was a #5DC in '10 who didn't play as a rookie. He was projected to play OG and he seems overmatched at LT, allowing 11.5 sks LY. Sherrod, a #1DC in '11, is a natural LT who is on track to be ready for TC after suffering a broken leg in Dec. He played in 5 (0 starts) and had a failed experiment at OG before moving back to OT. Sherrod has ideal size and bulk to go with smarts and toughness. This year's #7DC Andrew Datko could be in the mix if Newhouse and Sherrod struggle but that's if his often injured left shoulder doesn't hinder him again. RG Josh Sitton was the best OL on the team LY and one of the more under appreciated OG's in the league. He's started 46 games in the L3Y, allowing only 6 sks. TJ Lang moved into the starting lineup last year, playing all 16 after being drafted in the 4th RD in '09. He's a late bloomer who has versatility, as he started 2 at RT when Bulaga was inj'd. GB elected not to re-sign 8 year C Scott Wells, opting to sign UFA Jeff Saturday from IND. Saturday is in his 14th year and is the 2nd oldest OL in the league. He is an undrafted overachiever who can get to the 2nd level to chip LB's. Although he is neither overpowering nor overly athletic, he makes great calls and adjustments. GB ended the season with 3 st'rs out injured and had a vulnerable OL in the playoffs, one reason for their early exit. There will be some new faces TY, though that might not necessarily mean an improvement.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - The major reason for GB's NFL-worst D (411.6 ypg) and pass D (299.8 ypg) was an anemic pass rush. The Packers mustered just 29 sks (tied #27) LY, as its unstoppable off covered up for the D's many flaws. The absence of a consistent pass rush allowed opp's to shred GB on the back end. The sk total was the 2nd fewest by the tm in more than a decade. Only a year earlier, in their SB yr, GB had the 5th rated D, buoyed by 47 sks. The Packers clearly missed Cullen Jenkins (7 sk '10), who signed with PHI as a FA. NT BJ Raji did make his 2nd straight Pro Bowl. He's a tremendous athlete who is deceptively quick with a compact build. The Packers thought he would be more of a pass rusher to make up for Jenkins' loss, but his sack total fell from 6.5 in '10 (which led NFL NT's) to 3 LY. DE Ryan Pickett adds more heft to the DL at 6'2" 340 but he has only 2.5 sks in 51 starts over the L4Y. He's versatile and can swing inside, but hasn't played a full season s/'08. The other DE spot was a revolving door all season, with Howard Green, Jarius Wynn and CJ Wilson seeing action. Green wasn't much of a factor (only 11 tkl) and wasn't brought back. Wynn made 3 sks and 19 tkl in 16 gms LY, but he's undersized and gets caught up by blockers. Wilson was productive with 26 tkl, but the #7DC in '10 seems to be better suited for a 4-3 D. Mike Neal, a #2DC in '10, was slated to replace Jenkins but the Packers have gotten next to nothing out of him because of shoulder and knee inj's which have limited him to 9 gms and 6 tkl in 2 years. He'll be susp the 1st 4 gms of 2012 because of PED's. GB selected Jerel Worthy in the 2nd RD, and the former collegiate DT will get a long look to fill the void. GB also signed DE Anthony Hargrove, a journeyman who will be susp the 1st 8 (NO's bounty program). Mike Daniels, a #4DC TY, is an undersized college DT who utilizes quickness and tenacity and will provide depth. The DL's productivity will have to increase this year if the Packers are to become a legit threat for the Super Bowl Title.

LINEBACKERS - GB had a banged up LB corps LY, one that was only average vs the run, weak in pass coverage and didn't pressure the QB. The Packers' 3rd Dn D was 5th worst at 42.6%. LOLB Clay Matthews didn't have anybody on the other side to complement him LY, so he slipped to only 6 sks and wasn't able to become the game-changing playmaker he'd been in his 1st 2Y. He still made an impact, finishing 4th in the NFL with 38.5 comb QB hits and kd. Opposite Matthews, GB spent all season trying to piece together the ROLB position using '10 street FA Erik Walden, 2nd yr player Frank Zombo and reserve Brad Jones. Walden struggled as a pass rusher (3 sk in 16 gm) while Zombo dealt with inj's and Jones was ineffective. To keep offensive attention from being shifted to Matthews again, GB drafted Nick Perry with the 28th overall pick and he will be counted on to start and deliver right away as long as he can make the transition from college DE to pro OLB. Perry is athletic with explosive pass rush abilities and will be a fine complement to Matthews. ILB's AJ Hawk and

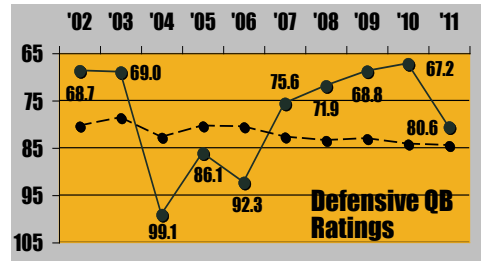

LB Clay Matthews

Desmond Bishop combined for 199 tkl LY after getting 214 in '10. Both are good run defenders who shed blk'rs and attack the gaps, but neither excels in coverage. Depth will be provided by Walden, Zombo and Jones on the outside, and DJ Smith and Rob Francois on the inside. #5DC Terrell Manning will also play inside, as he has shown flashes of playmaking abilities. The basis of the GB D starts with being able to threaten offenses from both sides and with the addition of Perry, it appears that this could come to fruition.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - GB allowed an NFL-record 4,988 gross passing yards last year and ranked last in total D, a huge drop from their #5 ranking in 2010. After Pro Bowl S Nick Collins suffered a neck inj in the 2nd game. GB could not prevent big plays, as the team's CB's, with the exception of Charles Woodson, endured drop-offs. With the front 7's inability to create pressure, the loss of Collins hurt. But Collins was released in the offssn, so the starters will remain the same, which means only a much stronger rush will help the pass coverage. Woodson has proved after 14 years that he's not too old to be an NFL CB. He's the best combo tkl'r/ball stripper in the NFL, and his 8 ttl takeaways (7 int, 1 fmbl) led the league. He always seems to be around the ball as his 11 career IR td is 2nd all-time. After a good '10, Tramon Williams struggled a season ago as he surrendered more rec yds (1,120) than any other DB in the league. He has 19 int in the L4Y because he gets targeted so often. NB Sam Shields made 4 int and had been the surprise of the SB ssn when he came out of nowhere and showed strong coverage ability. Charlie Peprah replaced Collins and made 5 int but doesn't have ideal speed or size for SS. Morgan Burnett moved from SS to FS after Collins' injury and made 107 stops. In the 2nd RD, GB moved up 28 places to draft CB Casey Hayward, an aggressive, instinctive playmaker who could contribute immediately in the nickel-heavy scheme ahead of Shields. Although the Packers haven't made any commitments, if Hayward can prove to be starter-ready as a rookie, it could pave the way for moving Woodson to S on a permanent basis. Woodson has been used in a versatile role in recent seasons at CB, nickel, dime, S and even LB. Dime back Jarrett Bush was re-signed to provide depth, and GB added S Jerron McMillian in the 4th round. With a league-leading offense and pulling in an NFL-best 31 int, the poor pass D didn't cost the team any games and they amazingly finished 9th in def QBR at 80.6. It's unrealistic to believe the Packers will be as fortunate in those areas in 2012 so overall improvement is a must.

SPECIAL TEAMS

P	Tim Masthay (U)	PR Randall Cobb (2)

SPECIAL TEAMS - GB was 13th in our ST rankings LY, their best mark s/'07, as all phases improved with the exception of kick coverage. PK Mason Crosby has averaged 127 pts per season in the last 4 yrs. The once-maligned PK was 24-28 on FG's, an 85.7% that was the best of his career and his 1st time over 80%. He has one of the strongest legs in the NFL, as he had 49 TB on 106 KO (46.2%, 12th). Thanks to the league's new KO rule that was a huge improvement over his 4 TB in 2010. P Tim Masthay has had B2B solid seasons after struggling early on as a rookie. LY he had a 45.6 avg and 38.6 net (tied 22nd), and he ranked 3rd with 23 In20 (41.8%) and his +19 In20/TB ratio was 13th. All were solid improvements from his '10 numbers. He has proved to be a solid weapon in the field-position game and has been able to nullify top returners such as Devin Hester and DeSean Jackson with good hangtime and placement. The coverage units were average (12.7 PR and 23.4 KR). Rookie KR Randall Cobb injected life into the team's moribund return game, which finished 26th in KR and 22nd in PR in 2010. He averaged 11.3 on PR (80 yd td) and 27.7 on KR (108 yd td). To help the Pack finish 11th in KR and 12th in PR last season. If GB can improve its cover teams, it could become a Top 10 ST unit.

Head Coach - Mike McCarthy, 7th year
McCarthy started in the NFL as a QC asst with KC in '93. He eventually became the NO OC from '00-'04 as his offenses finished 11th or better 3x's.

Offensive Coordinator - Tom Clements, 1st yr, 7th overall
As a QB Clements led ND to a NC in '73. After 3Y as ND's QB coach, he joined NO and since then he's been a QB cch for KC, PIT and BUF before coming to GB in '06.

QB Coach - Ben McAdoo, 7th year
McAdoo takes over the QB coaching duties after spending the past 6 years as the Packers' TE coach.

RB Coach - Alex Van Pelt, 1st year
This is Van Pelt's 7th ssn as an NFL coach. He spent the L2Y as the QB coach of the Buccaneers.

WR Coach - Edgar Bennett, 8th year
Bennett was a #4DC for GB. He became the Packers first 1,000 yd rusher in 17 years in '95. He joined GB in '01 and was the RB coach since '05 and this is his 2nd as WR cch.

TE Coach - Jerry Fontenot, 6th year
Fontenot was drafted by CHI in the 3rd RD in '89 and played 239 NFL gms. He has been an asst OL coach s/'07 being promoted to RB's coach from '05-'10.

OL Coach - James Campen, 9th year
Campen was an NFL C from '87-'93 incl the C for Favre's first start in '92. He has been the GB OL coach s/'07.

Defensive Coordinator - Dom Capers, 4th year
A DB cch by trade, Capers was an NFL HC for 8Y with CAR and HOU and a DC for 8 with PIT, JAX and MIA. His units have seven top 10 finishes in total D and in points all'd as a HC/DC.

DL Coach - Mike Trgovac, 4th year
Trgovac was GB's DL coach in 1999 but left to be the DL coach at WAS. He was CAR's DC from '03-'08 before returning to GB in '09.

OLB Coach - Kevin Greene, 4th year
Greene played 15Y as an OLB with 5 Pro Bowls. He joined GB as an OLB coach in 2009.

Asst HC/Inside LB Coach - Winston Moss, 7th year
Moss was drafted by TB (#2DC '87) and played for 11 years with 146 starts. He worked with McCarthy in NO from '00-'05 as a LB coach and joined GB in that capacity in 2006.

Secondary/Safeties Coach - Darren Perry, 4th year
Perry played 9Y as a FS after being drafted by PIT in '92's 8th RD. He has coached safeties for 3 tms over the past 9 yrs.

Secondary/CB Coach - Joe Whitt Jr, 5th year
Whitt was an asst DB cch for ATL in '07 before joining GB as a def QC cch in 2008. He was promoted to CB coach in 2009.

Special Teams Coach - Shawn Slocum, 7th year
After 15 yrs as a college cch, Slocum joined GB in 2006 as an asst STC. After 3 yrs in that role he was promoted to STC in '09 with GB finishing #13 in our rankings last year.

OVERVIEW - Mike McCarthy might be the most underrated HC in the NFL. He has a 63-33 record in 6Y and one SB Championship. Although the Packers lost their only playoff game LY after a 15-1 reg ssn finish while setting milestone after milestone, there were 2 stats which didn't get much attention as they had just 14 TO's and 76 pen's, both of which were the fewest in a 16 game season in team history. His team had 38 takeaways (tied #1 NFL) and was +24 in TO margin (#2). That's good coaching. McCarthy runs the offense and cedes the defense to Dom Capers. He's had a top 10 offense for the last 5 years, and his teams play with supreme confidence. The Packers could have scored more than their 560 points (#2 NFL history) if they didn't back off late in some gms. OC Joe Philbin left to be MIA's HC and was replaced by QB coach Tom Clements, who finally gets his shot after having been widely heralded for years (but McCarthy calls the plays). Defensive issues were covered up all season by Rodgers and the team's prolific offense and they were never more exposed than in the playoff loss to Giants. Still, a complete defensive turnaround wouldn't be a huge surprise. LY Capers was forced to play a 2-4-5 scheme on more than 60% of the snaps, but with 2 pass rushers and an improved secondary he can go back to his base 3-4 zone blitz. GB was the 6th team to have at least 15 victories. They won their 1st 14 gms of the season, most of them in easy fashion, scoring 24 or more points in every game (and 40+ in 5). GB was seemingly on the way to an undefeated reg ssn when they went into KC and were upset 19-14 in Romeo Crennel's 1st gm as the Chiefs' interim head coach. That marked the Packers' fewest points all yr. They closed out the season with wins against CHI and DET but were then upset at home 37-20 by the eventual SB champion NYG. They'll be favored to win the division again and probably the NFC, too. And if the defense gets back to form, another Super Bowl could be in the forecast. Keep in mind Green Bay was #2 and #5 on defense in '09 and '10 respectively and has much the same or even upgraded personnel. The Packers are the clear favorite in Vegas to win the Super Bowl this year and in fact are currently favored their first 15 games. The 4 toughest tests are road trips to Houston, the NYG, Chicago and Detroit but they have a great shot of getting back to and winning their 5th Super Bowl Championship this year.

CHICAGO BEARS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - In '11, Jay Cutler was well on his way to his best season as a Bear when he suffered a freakish, season-ending thumb injury. The Bears were 7-3 but lost 5 in a row and missed the Playoffs. Caleb Hanie took over but lost 4 straight games, as he had just a 3-9 ratio and was sacked 19 times in only 102 att. Josh McCown came off the street to finish the season and lead the team to its last win. Cutler had never missed a game until that injury. Seemingly always under pressure (he has had the highest sack rate in the league), when he has time to throw, Cutler is one of the NFL's best passers. He has a strong arm and a career ratio of 117-86. In CHI, he throws from the pocket more than he did in DEN. Once again he has a new OC in Mike Tice who will move the Bears to a pass game similar to DEN's in 2008 when Cutler had his best season (4526, 62%, 25-18). In 2011, Cutler completed 58.0% of his passes for 2,319 yards (13-7 ratio) and he didn't force as many passes. Cutler was sacked only 23 times in his 10 games, as the team went to max protection and often sent out only 2 WR's. CHI signed Jason Campbell as a UFA, and he gives the team its best backup QB in years. He lost his starting job in OAK due to a broken collarbone and then the in-season trade for Carson Palmer. He has always been an accurate passer who has been held back in his development by having a new OC in almost every year, going back to his days in WAS. Campbell has a 74-50 career ratio, solid arm strength and the mobility to elude pass rushers. McCown, a 9-year vet who hadn't started since '07, may have won a backup job with last season's performance if CHI goes with 3 veterans. If not, Nathan Enderle (#5DC in '11) will hold the No. 3 spot as Hanie signed with DEN. Because of Cutler's injury and Hanie's poor showing, the Bears' 2011 stats are somewhat skewed. They ranked 24th on offense (314.1 ypg) and only 26th in passing (188.2 ypg) with just 18 passing td and 20 int (4 returned for td). CHI tied for 5th worst in 3rd down conversions (32.5%) and ranked 17th in scoring (22.1 ppg). The Bears also added key personnel from DEN's dynamic '08 offense in WR Brandon Marshall and new QB coach Jeremy Bates to help Cutler reach his potential.

RUNNING BACKS - Matt Forte is one of the most underrated but most productive RB's in the NFL. Last year Forte was leading the NFL in yards from scrimmage when he suffered a season-ending sprained knee in Week 13. CHI averaged 32 ppg during a 5-game winning streak prior to his injury, and he represented 38% of the team's offensive yards in that span. Forte still finished with 997 rushing yards on a career-best 4.9-yard average, and he led the team with 52 receptions for 490 yards. Forte is quick with great vision and is receiver. He has averaged about 100 yards from scrimmage per game over his career. The Bears signed former OAK RB Michael Bush as a UFA. Bush capably replaced the injured Darren McFadden midway through last season and rushed for a career-best 977 yards (3.8 avg, 7 td) and was 2nd on the team with 37 receptions for 418 yards (11.3 avg). Bush is a power back who is excellent near the goal line (15 td in '10-11). Kahlil Bell rushed for 337 yards while showing good vision, quickness and power along with pass-catching ability on 3rd downs as Forte's replacement last year. However, he fumbled three times in the last two games. FB Tyler Clutts is an ex-CFL and Arena League player who proved to be a good lead blocker and can catch the occasional dump-off. As long as Forte remains healthy, he is among the NFL's most versatile backs.

RECEIVERS - The Bears have had some talent at WR but have lacked a true top-flight receiver which defenses had to scheme against. That has changed for '12. The offseason trade for Marshall to go along with drafting Alshon Jeffery in the 2nd round probably means the Bears will have 2 new starters in '12, as well as a lot of good depth. They also have the tallest receiving corps in the league. Marshall is the team's long-awaited No. 1 WR. While he didn't quite live up to expectations in MIA because of the team's QB problems, he caught 167 passes for 2,228 yards (13.3) and 9 td's in 2 seasons. It was his previous 2 years in DEN when Marshall proved he was a superior WR (104-1265-6 in '08, 101-1120-10 in '09). Although he drops too many easy passes (6 dropped passes in the endzone last year), Marshall is a tall, shifty receiver with great hands and is a big-play threat. Jeffery is another big WR who can be special. In '11 when South Carolina went run-heavy, Jeffery's receptions plummeted from 88 to 49 and his yards from 1,517 to 762. Pairing 6'3" Jeffery with 6'4" Marshall will give Cutler a dangerous twin threat in the red zone. Devin Hester will now be a backup as the Bears' plan to install a package which would limit his snaps but make more efficient use of his playing time so he can specialize on ST's. He regressed as a WR for the 2nd straight season after an illness and a sprained ankle limited his impact (only 7 rec in the last 7 games). Hester has great speed and open-field running ability but still seems uncertain as a route runner and has some inexplicable drops. Earl Bennett missed more than 1/3 of last season with a chest injury but his return boosted the pass attack even as the QB play declined. Bennett has a longtime rapport with Cutler going back to college and is a sure-handed receiver underneath and on 3rd downs. Johnny Knox suffered a horrifying season-ending back injury after 14 games but did have team-highs with 727 yards and 37 catches. Knox has deep speed and is a big-play threat, but he could miss all of '12. Dane Sanzenbacher surprised LY as an undrafted rookie. He is effective underneath with his quickness and smarts but needs to limit his drops. Eric Weems (mostly a KR) and Devin Thomas provide more depth. With OC Mike Martz having been replaced by Tice, the Bears want more of a vertical stretch TE in the passing game. The two veterans on the roster, Kellen Davis and Matt Spaeth (both 6'7"), are used mostly as in-line blockers. Davis caught just 18 passes for 206 yards but did lead the team with 5 td's. Though blocking was his primary duty, he has enough athleticism, size and ball skills to be more of a factor in the passing game. Spaeth is also a blocker first, frequently playing in two-TE sets. #4DC Evan Rodriguez is an undersized but athletic pass-catching TE but is more of an H-back type of player. This looks like one of the NFL's most improved receiving corps.

OFFENSIVE LINE - Once again CHI enters the season with major question marks on a perpetually patchwork OL. Yes, the Bears need to improve their pass blocking, but to not consider the improvements made by the OL last season would be a mistake. It was the 2nd-best running season by the offense since '90 with a 4.4 ypc and more than 2,000 yards. The sack rate of 1 for every 9.7 att ranked 31st and the total of 49 tied for 5th worst, but Cutler was sacked only 23 times in 10 games and the total would likely have been around 37 if he'd stayed healthy. CHI allowed 26 sacks in the final 6 games. C Roberto Garza and LT J'Marcus Webb were the only 2 OL to start in the same position all 16 games and two opening-day starters (#1DC RT Gabe Carimi and LG Chris Williams) wound up on IR. Garza settled into C, a position he hadn't started at since '01, filling a void left by the departure of Olin Kreutz. Garza can pull and lead and he allowed only 1 sack. Chris Spencer made the not-so-easy transition from C to RG after coming over from SEA where he was a #1DC in '04 and he was better than expected. He is athletic and plays with leverage and has started 44 games in the last 3 years. Chris Williams started the 1st 9 games at LG before suffering a wrist injury. A #1DC in '08, he was moved to OG in '10 but may move back to LT if the Bears decide to replace Webb. Williams cut down on his penalties last year, but he has yet to live up to his billing. Carimi played only 6 quarters before dislocating a kneecap.

He suffered a setback in a November practice and was placed on IR. Carimi is on schedule with his rehab and has the ability to be a very good RT. He is a terror in the running game and has enough athleticism to hold his own in pass protection. Lance Louis filled in for the rest of the season but it was clear that he's a better OG. Out of position, he allowed 10 sacks in 13 starts. A #7DC in '10, Webb allowed 38 qbh, a team-high 13 penalties (mostly false starts) which resulted in 8 stalled drives and 14 sacks while playing every snap. That poor showing is why the Bears might move Williams back to LT if they can replace him at LG (Carimi will not switch to LT). There are 3 potential replacements at LG. Edwin Williams is being groomed as the team's C of the future, but started the last 7 games after Chris Williams went down. UFA acquisition Chilo Rachal started 38 games at RG for SF in the last 4 years and Louis started 6 games at RG in '10-'11. All 3 will add depth if they don't challenge for a position. The Bears need their injured players to return and have to solve the problem at LT, but this year's OL isn't the disaster it used to be.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - The DL was supposed to be a team strength but it did not live up to the lofty expectations in '11. CHI ranked 5th in run defense (96.4 ypg), the 3rd time in the last 4 yrs they had allowed under 100/game, but the Bears made only 33 sacks (5.2%, 29th) marking their 2nd-lowest total since '03. DE Julius Peppers was slowed by a knee sprain but was a consistent force vs the run and pass making 37 tackles, 11 sacks and 5.5 tfl. He has 100 sacks for his career tying for 3rd among active players and his 36 FF are 4th most in the league since '02. Peppers is a unique athlete who can play low despite his 6'7" frame. He is streaky but the 32-year-old Peppers is still a perennial Pro Bowler who handles regular double teams. Israel Idonije started 31 games at DE in the last two years but might be replaced by #1DC Shea McClellin. Idonije is a solid run defender, but he had only 5 sacks LY. McClellin, the 9th DE drafted by CHI since '02, has a track record for getting to the QB. He fills a need as a pass rusher but the Bears think he has every-down ability and can set the edge vs the run. McClellin is hard-working, smart and technically sound. Corey Wootton was a #4DC in '10 who hasn't developed because of injuries. Last year the Bears moved little-known Henry Melton into the critical "3-technique" under tackle, hoping that the converted RB/DE could play the role of interior playmaker last filled by Tommie Harris. Melton made the first 15 starts of his career and flourished making 7 sacks, 2nd most among NFL DT's. Matt Toeaina has 22 starts in the last two years and is solid against the run. Stephen Paea (#2DC in '11) filled in at DT and showed excellent quickness and the ability to disrupt, earning more snaps by December. If McClellin can upgrade the pass rush, the Bears DL may finally live up to its hype.

LINEBACKERS - MLB Brian Urlacher and WLB Lance Briggs have played together for 9 years. Along with underrated SLB Nick Roach, the Bears have one of the NFL's best LB trios. Even at the ages of 34 (Urlacher) and 31 (Briggs), neither player has exhibited much drop-off. Briggs led the Bears with 105 tackles, followed by Urlacher's 102. Urlacher is the key to the defense, a run-stopper in the middle who can play TE's in coverage. He has excellent speed and range and he reads QB's and screens exceptionally well. Briggs never leaves the lineup and has superior size, speed, range and instincts. He's one of the best cover LB's in the league and pursues well on the backside and disrupts running plays at the LOS. Roach has quietly been a starter for the better part of four years (he lost his job for part of '10) and he started 15 games for the 2nd time in 3 years in 2011. He lacks great size and speed but he makes plays and does the dirty work while Urlacher and Briggs get the notoriety. The Bears don't blitz their LB's often preferring to let their DL get the pressure which is why the 3 starters had no sacks in '11. There isn't much depth behind the starters other than Geno Hayes (UFA from TB). Hayes, who will back up Roach, averaged 81 tackles while starting 42 games in the last 3 years. The other reserves (Patrick Trahan, JT Thomas and Blake Costanzo) have only 5 career snaps between them. This remains one of the league's most solid LB corps.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - In 2011, the CHI Cover-2 pass defense allowed 254.1 ypg (28th), the most by the Bears in more than 10 years. The CB's played well but the young S's were under pressure all season long and the weak pass rush failed to help. Charles Tillman made his first Pro Bowl in his 9th NFL season. He's not a classic shut-down corner, but he's big and strong enough to match up with tall receivers and tough enough to support against the run. He also has elevated stripping ball-carriers to an art form (27 FF s/'03, most among all DB's). Tim Jennings struggled opposite Tillman and was briefly benched in favor of Zackary Bowman (gone in UFA) late in the season. Jennings is undersized at 5'7" but relies on toughness and experience. NB DJ Moore has a knack for being around the ball (8 int L2Y) and his lack of size (5'9") doesn't seem to be a hindrance. Kelvin Hayden is a classic Cover-2 CB who was signed as a UFA to provide depth. He started 29 gms for IND from '08-'10 but only one game last year for ATL since he didn't fit the Falcons' system. The Bears had new starters at S in 2011, but they used 8 different starting combinations at the position and are still desperately in need of a playmaker on the back end. Brandon Meriweather was cut by NE and signed by CHI before the first game. The former #1DC started 4 times before being benched. Major Wright, a #3DC in '10, took over the starting SS job from Danieal Manning but didn't make much progress. Last year's #3DC Chris Conte showed promise in 9 starts at FS after replacing Meriweather. He has good sideline-to-sideline range and athleticism. Backup Craig Steltz made 5 starts and is an assignment-sound in-the-box S. For the 8th straight yr the Bears drafted a S, but #3DC Brandon Hardin must be converted from a college CB. At 6'3" 217, he has the toughness, size and tackling ability to thrive at SS. CHI added to its CB depth by signing CB Jonathan Wilhite (54 GP since '08) and drafted CB Isaiah Frey (6th) and CB/KR Greg McCoy (7th). Despite the big increase in pass ypg allowed, the Bears def QBR only rose from 74.4 (#3) in 2010 to 79.3 (#8) in '11. With the added talent expect CHI to stay in the top 10 of the QBR.

SPECIAL TEAMS - The Bears were 3rd in our ST rankings in '11, their 10th straight top 10 ranking mostly under STC Dave Toub. KR extraordinaire Devin Hester performed spectacularly in the first half of the season before nagging injuries limited his production. He had a disappointing 21.9 KR avg (1 td) but averaged 16.2 yards on PR's (2 td) which gave him 18 career td returns, or one behind Deion Sanders' NFL record. Under Toub, the Bears have had an NFL-best 22 KR td's compiled by 6 different players in less than a decade (not including 2 missed FG's returned for td's or Hester's KR td in Super Bowl XLI). Even with Hester on the roster the Bears signed UFA Weems, who had td's on both PR and KR for ATL in '10, when he led the NFC with a 27.5 KR avg. Last year his number slipped to 23.5 on KR and 9.8 on PR. K Robbie Gould is nearly flawless. He is the 5th-most-accurate FG kicker in NFL history, and he hit 27 of 31 last season (87.1%) including 6-for-6 from 50+. He ranked 9th on KO's with a 54.4% for 43 TB's. P Adam Podlesh had a 40.4 net which was the highest in franchise history. That was an improvement of 5.2 yards over Brad Maynard's net from '10. Podlesh is accurate enough to keep teams from getting much on PR's (only 5.4 avg in '11), but he had only 21 inside the 20. With all of the key players back this again looks like one of the NFL's premier ST units.

Head Coach - Lovie Smith, 8th year
Smith entered the NFL as the Bucs' LB coach from '96-'00. He took over as the Rams' DC from '01-'03 finishing 3rd, 13th and 16th in total defense. He was named the Bears' HC in '04.

Offensive Coordinator - Mike Tice, 1st year, 3rd overall
Tice had a 14-yr career as an NFL TE with SEA, WAS and MIN. He has been a TE/OL cch since '96. Tice was the Vikings' HC from '02-'05 then moved on to JAX as an asst HC/TE cch.

Quarterbacks - Jeremy Bates, 1st year
Bates comes to CHI after serving as the OC at SEA ('10). He has also coached in TB, NYJ, and DEN where he worked with current Bears' QB Jay Cutler in their 3 seasons there.

Running Backs Coach - Tim Spencer, 9th year
Spencer previously was the RB coach at Ohio St from '94-'03.

Wide Receivers Coach - Darryl Drake, 9th year
Drake previously was the WR's coach at Texas from '98-'03.

Tight Ends Coach - Mike DeBord, 3rd year
DeBord spent most of his coaching career in college serving as Mich's OC ('97-'99, 2006-'07) and C Mich's HC ('00-'03).

Offensive Line Coach - Tim Holt, 1st year
Holt comes to the Bears after spending 3 yrs ('09-'11) as the OL cch at TB. He also has 14 yrs of collegiate experience.

Asst HC/Def Coord - Rod Marinelli, 3rd year, 4th overall
Marinelli has been an NFL cch for 15 yrs spending 10 with TB ('96-'05). He was the Lions' HC from '06-'09. He joined CHI in '09 and was promoted to asst HC/DC in his 2nd ssn.

Defensive Line - Mike Phair, 2nd year
Phair came to CHI after 6 yrs in SEA where he spent his first 3 years as a scout ('05-'07) before working as an asst LB coach ('08), an asst DL coach ('09) and a defensive asst ('10).

Defensive Backs - Jon Hoke, 4th year
Hoke previously was the DB coach for HOU from '02-'08.

Special Teams Coordinator - Dave Toub, 9th year
Toub has entrenched himself as one of the top STC's in the NFL. He was the Eagles' asst STC ('01-'03) prior to joining CHI.

OVERVIEW - Lovie Smith has a 71-57 record as the Bears' HC with 1 Super Bowl appearance. The team was cruising toward a playoff berth with a 7-3 record and a 5-game winning streak last year when trouble hit. First QB Cutler was injured in the 10th game, and then RB Forte went down 2 games later. CHI suffered 5 consecutive losses and had no chance for the postseason with Hanie at QB. The season started off with a win over ATL before losses to NFC powerhouses NO and GB. The Bears beat CAR but lost to DET with fans wondering if they were any good. Then they reeled off victories over MIN, TB, PHI, DET and SD, the game in which Cutler was knocked out. Losses followed to OAK, KC, DEN, SEA and GB before the Bears rallied behind street FA QB McCown to defeat MIN in the season finale to go 8-8. In a 1-5 finish, CHI averaged only 14.2 points per game. Sometimes, as they say, you don't know what you've got 'till it's gone. But Cutler and Forte are back, and the Bears added some prime offensive talent in WR's Marshall and #2DC Jeffery, RB Bush and backup QB Campbell. After last season Smith fired OC Martz and promoted OL coach Tice to OC. CHI also hired Bates to coach its QB's, reuniting him with Cutler. Bates was out of the league last year but previously worked with Cutler as an assistant for 3 years in Denver. The Bears have had only 1 top 20 offense in the last decade but a top 10 ranking could be in the works for this season as long as the key players remain healthy. CHI's passing attack could even be one of the best in the NFL. The defensive staff remained the same under DC Rob Marinelli but while the run defense remains one of the best in the league, there are holes in the pass defense which need to be rectified. STC Toub's units have produced 8 individual Pro Bowl berths in 8 years and are always among the best. The Bears won the division 2 years ago and played in the NFC Championship game but there's certainly more talent on this '12 team. Another NFC North title and playoff berth are possible, although CHI will be picked to finish 3rd behind GB and DET by most folks this year. Three of my 5 sets of power ratings call for them to top GB in wins while the other two call for a tie. Just like in 2010 when I did not pull the trigger and the Bears won the North, I call for 2nd but a return to the playoffs.

DETROIT LIONS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - In 2011 Matthew Stafford proved he can stay healthy and cemented himself as the Lions' franchise QB after having the finest passing season in team history. Stafford validated the faith HC Jim Schwartz had in making him the #1 overall pick in '09. Stafford started all 16 and threw for 5,038 yds (4th in NFL history) and 41 td's. Stafford had missed 19 of 32 gms in '09-10 with injuries to his knee and both shoulders. LY he played with a splint on a broken right index finger for 4 gms in Nov, yet he avg'd 357 passing ypg in the 2H of the year. He is prone to TO's when forced into a one-dimensional game after the running attack stalls but he keeps firing until the passing game clicks, and he doesn't hesitate to throw the ball to every receiver on the field. He likes to play out of the shotgun to stay away from the pass rush, which is understandable considering his inj history. He engineered 4 comebacks of 13 or more points LY, and the Lions seemingly were never out of a game. Shaun Hill is the only veteran bkp now that Drew Stanton has been traded away. Hill was a pleasant surprise when he replaced Stafford in '10 and threw for 2,686 yds (61.8%), with a 16-12 ratio in 10 sts. He showed his consistency by throwing for at least 222 yds and a td in 9 of those gms. Hill is an experienced #2 who is accurate, decisive and can make plays on the run. Kellen Moore was signed after a record-setting career at Boise St and will be the #3. He's undersized at 6'0" but can make every throw in the book and he knows how to win. DET's red zone offense was 4th LY (63.8%), but the 3rd down rate was only 20th. With another season or 2 like LY, Stafford will be within range of the elite QB's.

MATTHEW STAFFORD #9 6-2 232 Age: 24 4th Yr (16/16) #1DC DET '09 (Georgia) - 5038 pass yd (63.5%), 41-16 ratio, 7.6 ypa, 97.2 QBR, 78 rush yd (3.5), 36 sk, NFL Comeback POY '11. 3 st, 3 gm (inj), 535 pass yd (59.4%), 6-1 ratio, 11 rush yd, (2.8), 91.3 QBR, 4 sk '10.

Shaun Hill #14 6-3 220 Age: 32 11th Yr (0/2) UFA MIN '02 (Maryland) - 2-3 pass (33 yd) LY. 10 st, 11 gm, 416 pass yd (61.8%), 16-12 ratio, 123 rush yd (5.6), 81.3 QBR, 17 sk in '10.

RUNNING BACKS - Heading into last season, the Lions thought they had an inside-outside threat at RB with speedy 2nd yr back Jahvid Best and powerful rookie Mikel Leshoure. Inj's took their toll as Leshoure was lost in TC with a torn Achilles and Best was sidelined at midseason with 2 concussions. The result was a patchwork rush attack which is why DET ran the ball for an NFL-low 33.6% of their offensive plays. Best played in only 6, but his 390 rush yds still led the team, an indication of how much the run game sagged in his absence. DET finished 29th with 95.2 ypg (4.3) and had only 9 rushing td's. With both players healthy, the Lions plan to pair Best and Leshoure to form a dynamic 1-2 punch. A 2010 #1DC, Best insists that his playing career is not over because of the concussions. A talented, quick and instinctive open-field runner, he can make the 1st defender miss and is an important outlet receiver on 3rd down (58 rec, 487 yds in '10). Leshoure, a #2DC, will play a big role. He's an inside runner with size, power, toughness and instincts who waits for his blocks and gets yardage after contact. He's been injury-prone and inconsistent going back to college and will have to prove he can handle the load. Kevin Smith was a great comeback story LY. A #3DC in '08, he spent most of '10 on IR, wasn't offered a contract last summer and was out of FB until he was signed Nov 7. He wound up being the st'r with some productive moments (535 yds from scrimmage and 7 td, and a career-best 140 yds vs CAR). Smith then suffered a high ankle sprain and limped down the stretch. If he can stay healthy, he will contribute. Veteran Maurice Morris ran for 316 yds in 5 sts and has been a valuable and trustworthy player both in the backfield and on ST's. Keiland Williams is a short-yardage runner who has fumble issues. Joique Bell was signed off the NO practice squad late last season and will get an opportunity. The only FB on the roster is undrafted rookie James Bryant, but DET rarely uses 2-back sets. The Lions have spent recent high picks on 3 RB's only to see them suffer serious inj's. If they can stay healthy, the Lions' running game will significantly balance the passing attack.

RB JAHVID BEST #44 5-10 199 Age: 23 3rd Yr (6/6) #1DC DET '10 (Cal) - 390 rush yd (4.6), 2 td, 287 rec yd (10.6), 1 td, 15 rush FD, 11 tfl, 10.7% of off LY. 9 st, 16 gm, 555 rush yd (3.2), 4 td, 487 rec yd (8.4), 2 td, 25 rush FD, 30 tfl, 19.2% of off as a rookie.

Mikel Leshoure #25 6-0 233 Age: 22 2nd Yr (0/0) #2DC DET '11 (Illinois) - Torn Achilles in Aug as a rookie.

RECEIVERS - Calvin Johnson was the best WR in the game even before Matthew Stafford had his breakout ssn in '11 and the tandem could be ready to set records for years to come. In his 5th season but his 1st with a quality QB throwing to him for 16 gms, Johnson caught 96 passes (4th) for 1,681 yds (1st) and 16 td's (2nd) despite seeing every kind of coverage imaginable thrown at him. A freak of nature with deep spd, great hands, leaping ability and brute strength, Johnson has had 12+ td's in 3 of the L4Y (matching Jerry Rice and Lance Alworth). Veteran Nate Burleson and '11 #2DC Titus Young gave OC Scott Linehan what he'd been yearning for the L2Y, complementary weapons to make teams pay for concentrating on Johnson. Both started slowly but finished fast, combining for 121 catches, 1,364 yds and 10 td's. Burleson is a wily 9 yr pro who works the slot with speed and quickness. He made 36 FD's on his 73 rec's LY. Young stretches the field, makes plays on 3rd Dn and has been groomed to start opposite Johnson. He gets single coverage and gained more looks from Stafford down the stretch, making 17 of his 48 rec's in the L/4 gms. #2DC Ryan Broyles is the all-time leading receiver in NCAA history and the Lions see him as a Wes Welker-type possession receiver, only with more spd. He had ACL surg Nov 21 and may not be ready for training camp so the Lions will bring him along slowly. Broyles should flourish once he's healthy. After letting bkps Rashied Davis and Maurice Stovall go, the Lions are a little thin if Broyles can't play right away. Stefan Logan is mainly a KR. DET is loaded, however, at TE and the Lions used mostly three-WR and two-TE sets after Best was injured. Brandon Pettigrew and Tony Scheffler present mismatches in the middle of the field. Pettigrew broke his own single-ssn records for catches (83) and yds (777) and scored 5 td's. He was, for all intents and purposes, the DET running attack in some gms - catching short, safe passes. Tony Scheffler had a career-high 6 td's on 26 rec's. Will Heller was the team's H-back, a mammoth-RT-type who seals the edges. Johnson and company rank among the league's best receiving corps.

WR TITUS YOUNG #16 5-11 174 Age: 23 2nd Yr (9/16) #2DC DET '11 (Boise St) - 607 rec yd (12.6), 6 td, 33 rec FD, 56.5 catch %, 9.8% of off as a rookie LY.

OFFENSIVE LINE - Not having a good running game puts stress on any OL but DET's is not solely to blame for the tm's miserable ranking of 29th in rushing off (95.2 ypg). The Lions allowed 36 sks on 666 pass plays (5.4%), which ranked 10th. This is an experienced veteran unit that had 79 sts in 80 gms LY (RT Gosder Cherilus missed 1). All 5 st'rs return TY, though 3 of them are over 30. LT Jeff Backus enters his 12th year amid rumors he could be replaced by #1DC Riley Reiff. Although he re-signed for what will probably be his final yr. Amazingly, Backus has started every game of his career, a Lions record 176 straight. Backus appeared to struggle with his strength at times LY, when he allowed 8.5 sks. Reiff has been compared to TEN Pro Bowl OT Michael Roos. He is a big, tough, former state wrestling champion who is a top run blk'r and good pass protector. At RT, Cherilus is an adequate st'r but allowed too many sks (9.0). LG Rob Sims hasn't missed a snap in 2Y since coming over from SEA and is noted as a power blk'r, while RG Stephen Peterman is another straight-ahead run blk'r. C Dominic Raiola is the fiery captain who has made 156 sts, including all 16 in 9 of his 11 seasons (only 4 missed gms total). Jason Fox, a #4DC in '10, was believed to be the heir apparent to Backus but his first two seasons were marred by surgeries. He and Corey Hilliard, the primary OT bkp the L2Y, are likely fighting for one opening. Reserve G/C Dylan Gandy sees his action on special teams and rarely on the OL. Dan Gerberry, Johnny Culbreath and Jacques McClendon fill out the depth. With a healthier RB corps the Lions rushing numbers should improve in 2012.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - The Lions have an underrated pair of DE's and a trio of DT's who are the envy of any tm. DET likes to use 8-9 DL per game, rotating more than most tms. They are agile and athletic across the defensive front and can rush the passer with the 4 linemen without heavy blitzing from the LB's. DET plays a wide-nine alignment that was originated by DC Gunther Cunningham, so they can apply pressure off the edges. However, that exposes them to inside runs, which is why DET ranked 23rd in run D LY (128.1 ypg) while getting 41 sks (#10). DT Ndamukong Suh was actually a disappointment in his 2nd yr. He appeared set for super stardom after a rookie season which included a 1st Tm All-Pro nod. He is a rare talent with strength and quickness who can stuff the run game or punish the QB. LY he was unable to keep his emotions in check at times, most notably his in-game stomping of GB's Evan Dietrich-Smith on Thanksgiving (he also has 8 PF's in 2Y). Worse, Suh's play slipped. His sks went from 10 to 4, his tkls from 66 to 36 and his reputation went from exciting young talent to dirty player. Corey Williams complements Suh well and plays at a Pro Bowl level at times. Williams specializes in the bull rush and makes plays in the backfield, although he's sometimes undisciplined. Nick Fairley was the #13 overall DC LY playing in only 10 gms after preseason surg (foot inj in college) and then an ankle sprain. He saw heavy action in the rotation late in the yr and could be a force TY although he is likely to be suspended at least 2 gms due to off field issues. Ideally sized, he is explosive off the ball and can get to the QB. DE Cliff Avril is coming off the best season of his career, though he is the least-discussed member of the starting unit. Previously viewed as a run-stopper, he has increased his sks the L4Y from 5.0 to 5.5 to 8.5 to 11.0 and he had 6 FF in '11. LY he became the first DET player to record DD sks, a FR td and an IR td in the same season. He benefits from being lined up next to Suh, who gets double-teamed often. However, Avril was the 4th most penalized player in the NFL. RDE Kyle Vanden Bosch, coming off neck surg, had 8 sks and 4 FF. A veteran leader and high-motor player, he may have lost a step at 33 but continues to play well. Sammie Lee Hill is a steady and dependable bkp DT who would start for a lot of tms. DE Lawrence Jackson, despite missing 5 (thigh inj), had 4.5 sks and has 10.5 total over the L2Y despite playing only 1/3 of the snaps. Andre Fluellen fills in at both DT and DE, while Willie Young is a #7DC from 2010 who is improving as a pass rusher. TY's #4DC, Ronnell Lewis, is a tweener who will play on ST's. This is one of the league's deepest DL's.

LINEBACKERS - This unit was much improved in '11 because of the acquisitions of MLB Stephen Tulloch (tm-high 111 tkls, 2 int, 3 sk) and SLB Justin Durant (68 tkls). Those two added spd and tenacity which was missing the previous couple of yrs and they knew how to cover up holes in the wide-9 D. Tulloch, a FA who spent his first 5 seasons with TEN, is a reliable tkl'r who plays the spy role well vs mobile QB's, a huge problem in the past for DET. Tulloch is a tkl machine who had avg'd 131 tackles a season s/'09. Durant came from JAX where he started for 4Y. He has spd, athleticism and play-making ability, although he's undersized at 6'1" 240. DeAndre Levy was the only returning st'r, moving to WLB from the middle. A #3DC in '09, he is a promising player who seemed out of place at times on the outside. He was good in the run game for the most part (109 tkls) but is suspect in coverage. The Lions got only 2 sacks from their OLB's LY because of rare blitzes. With veteran backup Bobby Carpenter gone via FA, depth is suspect. Doug Hogue, a #5DC in '10, is still a year or 2 away and Ashlee Palmer is more of a ST's player. Neither contributed much on defense LY. DET drafted 2 LB's late this year. Tahir Whitehead (5th RD) is an OLB who plays with spd and is good in coverage, while Travis Lewis (7th RD) is a tackling machine who had a disappointing senior year at Oklahoma due to injury. DET's 3rd Dn D was the 2nd best in the NFC at 32.7%. Even though the ppg allowed fell from 23.1 ppg in 2010 to 24.2 in 2011, this unit is likely to improve this year.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - The DET pass D ranked 22nd LY (239.4 ypg), a drop from 16th but better than any year since '05. DET did get 34 takeaways (21 int, 13 FR), 3rd in the NFL. Those 21 int's were a key reason opposing QB's had a QBR of just 82.1, good for 12th best in the league. The secondary is still the weak link and they need an upgrade at CB, which is why they drafted 3 of them. Eric Wright started all 16 but wasn't brought back because he got burned for 67 rec's. His replacement will be either TY's #3DC Dwight Bentley or undrafted 3rd yr pro Aaron Berry. Bentley is an aggressive, smooth-moving cover CB but whether he can make the big jump from Louisiana to the NFL in time for the opener might be asking too much. Berry played in 11 with 3 sts and seems to have all the tools. The Lions are in much better shape on the other side with Chris Houston, who had the best year of his career leading the team with 5 int's (2 for td). Despite shoulder and knee inj's that cost him 3 sts, Houston has the talent to be a shut-down corner, but he hasn't shown it on a consistent basis yet. Alphonso Smith was expected to start LY, but he couldn't crack the lineup and played as the nickel. DET signed FA Jacob Lacey and the former Colt CB could find some PT. He had 27 sts over the L3Y but seems to be a better nickel back than cover CB. Two late draft picks will get a look. Chris Greenwood (5th RD) is a potential diamond in the rough from Albion (Mich). Jonte Green (6th RD) has spd and aggressiveness with great reactions. The S position is set with SS Louis Delmas and FS Amari Spievey. The Lions need Delmas' athleticism in the back end as he's the secondaries best defender. His durability is becoming a concern however because he plays so hard and recklessly. He missed the L/6 gms in '11 (MCL) and has yet to play any of his 3 seasons at full strength though he has 41 sts. Spievey has come a long way in 2 seasons after being drafted in the 3rd RD in '10 (24 sts), but is still learning the position. Erik Coleman started 33 times for ATL from '08-'10 and is a strong, experienced tackler. He played in just 4 gms for DET LY before being inj'd. John Wendling is a gunner on ST's. At midseason, the Lions had all'd the fewest number of big pass plays in the NFL. But down the stretch, the back 4 gave up too many long passes, never more so than in wk 17 when GB bkp Matt Flynn tore them apart (480 yds, 6 td) and Drew Brees threw for 466 yds in the Wildcard game ending the season on a sour note. This unit is the defenses biggest question mark.

SPECIAL TEAMS - The Lions were 28th in our rankings LY and they haven't been in the top 10 s/'04. The coverage teams were poor, ranking 31st on PR (13.4) and 26th on KR (25.6). Their own return tms weren't much better, avg only 7.9 yds on PR (26th) and 24.0 on KR (14th). Stefan Logan handles both PR and KR but he wasn't as productive as he was in '10. The Lions may open up the return jobs, possibly with Titus Young or Joique Bell getting shots. Jason Hanson is the oldest PK in the NFL, heading into his 21st season. LY he had another productive year hitting 24-29 FG, incl 5-7 from 50+ with 45 TB's on KO's. Ryan Donahue inj'd his quad after week 8, but the rookie P had beaten out 8 yr starter Nick Harris. For the season Donahue had a 42.7 avg with 13 In20. The Lions will give him every opportunity to reclaim his job, but he'll be challenged by Ben Graham, the lefty Aussie rules veteran, who was extremely effective with his directional kicking the L/7 gms. Graham avg'd 44.1 with 10 In20. The team's net was a combined 36.0, ranking 31st in the league. This unit needs work if the Lions hope to become serious contenders.

Head Coach - Jim Schwartz, 4th year
Schwartz was the Titans' DC from 2001-'08. TEN had 3 top 10 finishes in total D during that time. DET has improved in the win column each year under Schwartz.
Off Coordinator/QB Coach - Scott Linehan, 4th year
Linehan was the Vikings' OC/QB coach from 2002-'04. In 2005 he was the MIA OC. He became the Lions' OC after serving as the Rams' HC from 2006-'08.
RB Coach - Sam Gash, 6th season
In 2007 Gash was DET's asst special teams coach. Gash was the Jets' asst RB/asst special teams coach from 2005-'06 after a 12 year career as a FB in the NFL.
WR Coach - Shawn Jefferson, 8th year
Jefferson, a 13Y NFL vet, joined DET as an off asst ('05-'07) before being named WR's cch in '08.
TE Coach - Tim Lappano, 4th year
Lappano was the OC/QB cch at the Univ of Wash from '05-'08 and the RB cch w/SF from '03-'04 before being named TE cch here.
OL Coach - George Yarno, 4th year
Yarno was Wash St's OL coach from '03-'07 before becoming TB's asst OL coach in 2008 and LSU's OL cch from '01-'02.

After serving as the asst DL coach for Detroit in 2009, Kocurek was promoted to DL coach in 2010.
Burke was with the Titans as an admin asst (2004-'05) then was promoted to defensive asst/QC coach from 2006-'08.
Secondary Coach - Tim Walton, 4th year
Walton was the DC at Memphis in 2008 before joining the Lions. He was Miami, FL's DC in 2007.
Special Teams Coach - Danny Crossman, 3rd year
Crossman was the STC for CAR from 2005-'09 and also worked with the strength and conditioning program.

OVERVIEW - Three seasons removed from an 0-16 record and having won a league-worst 39 gms from '01-'10, the Lions broke out LY. Ten wins, their 1st playoff berth s/'99, the best offensive ssn in franchise history - the list of accomplishments were long. However, among the things helping to keep the team grounded was an 0-6 record vs NFC playoff teams (GB twice, ATL, SF and NO twice) and the def collapse the L/7 gms of the season, incl allowing 45 pts in the L/2 gms. The bad news about the 2nd place finish in the NFC North was the fact that the Lions finished 5 gms back of GB and was one-and-done in the playoffs. The Lions won their 1st 5 gms before losing 5 of 7 at midseason. Three straight wins followed before losses to GB to end the reg season and then to NO in the Wildcard round. HC Jim Schwartz has this team on the rise, however, after going 8-24 in his 1st 2Y. Schwartz preaches a solid D, led by a strong front but it was the explosive off which put the Lions in the playoffs. The 474 pts scored was a franchise record. OC Scott Linehan finally had a healthy QB for all 16 gms but the offense has to find balance to keep Stafford upright and D's off balance. An effective ground attack would also keep the oft-burned D off the field. DC Gunther Cunningham is one of the originators of the Wide-9, but for all the ballyhoo regarding the front 4, the D was a pts-allowing machine. The DL did not control the line of scrimmage and Ndamukong Suh's 2 gm susp didn't help matters. The Lions all'd more than 24 ppg and 5.0 yds per carry (t-29th). The Lions were a top 10 D through the 1st 8, and even by the end of the yr they were among the leaders in takeaways, def td's and 3rd Dn def. In the 2H of the ssn, opposing offenses started to find ways to neutralize the DL, exploiting its aggressiveness. They also used maximum protection packages which exposed the weaknesses of the secondary. Stafford is 24, Calvin Johnson is 27, and the defense is anchored by 25 year old Suh, DE Cliff Avril and FS Louis Delmas (both 26). The days of annual roster upheaval are over for the Lions and they made good in the draft with all of those losing season's producing high NFL picks and they have made the most of them. If you look at pure talent and high NFL DC's the Lions are among the leagues best. They only lose 1 starter from last year. They do play in the same div with a pair of Top Ten tms (GB, CHI) but look even stronger than LY's team which made the playoffs and they now go for the 2nd step which is winning a playoff game.

MINNESOTA VIKINGS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - Had there been no lockout LY, Christian Ponder would have been the Vikings' QB for the opener. Instead, with no offseason program, HC Leslie Frazier wanted to go with declining veteran Donovan McNabb, raising false expectations for what was always going to be rebuilding yr. McNabb was far from his days as an All-Pro and showed it right from the start with 39 yds in wk 1. He was remarkably inconsistent while reluctant to throw downfield and was benched after 6 sts and waived with 5 gms remaining. Ponder took over despite the fact that he wasn't ready. He is fearless, has poise far beyond his experience, is effective throwing on the move, creates plays and is aggressive throwing downfield. Still, he was a rookie LY, and he struggled, completing only 54.3% for only 1,853 yds, with a 13-13 ratio. He ran 28 times for 219 yds but took 30 sacks. Ponder tended to hold the ball too long, focused on 1 receiver and tried to force passes into windows that close quickly in the NFL. He played with a hip pointer in Dec, got benched in gm 13 (4 TO's) and seemed to lose his confidence. Somehow he led the NFL in red-zone completion % (77.8%, 8 td, 1 int). Joe Webb and Sage Rosenfels are the backups. Webb is an electric scrambler with spd and a strong arm, and he actually outplayed Ponder down the stretch but he won't be the st'r. He is one of the most athletic QB's in the league and will always factor into the off in some fashion in the team's "Blazer" package as a Wildcat who can run and throw. Although Webb played 156 total snaps (incl 30 at WR), he finished with 376 yds (54%, 3-2) and ran for 154 yds (7.0) and 2 scores. Rosenfels was signed for the L/5 games after McNabb was let go. He's an 11 yr vet back for his 2nd stint in MIN, but he's never grasped the starting job other than briefly in both '07 and '08 in HOU (10 comb sts). It's Ponders' job to lose but if he struggles, the team won't hesitate to switch to Webb or Rosenfels.

QB CHRISTIAN PONDER #7 6-2 229 Age: 24 2nd Yr (10/11)
#1DC MIN '11 (Florida St) - 1853 pass yd (54.3%), 13-13 ratio, 6.4 ypa, 70.1 QBR, 219 rush yd (7.8), 30 sk as a rookie LY.

Sage Rosenfels #18 6-4 222 Age: 34 12th Yr (0/0)
#4DC WAS '01 (Iowa St) - No gm action with NYG, MIA or MIN L/3Y. 5 st, 6 gm, 1431 pass yd (66.7%), 6-10 ratio, 8.2 ypa, 79.5 QBR, 37 rush yd (3.4), 9 sk w/HOU in '08.

RUNNING BACKS - One of the NFL's best RB's and certainly the most bruising, Adrian Peterson was well on his way to another great season, with nearly 1,000 comb yds and 12 td in 9+ gms. Peterson injured his ankle vs OAK and sat out 3 gms before returning for 60 yd vs NO (wk 14) but then blew his knee out (ACL, MCL) on the 1st play of the 2H vs WAS. He missed 1,000 yds for the 1st time in his career, finishing with 970 rush yd (4.7 avg) and 139 rec (7.7). He broke 49 tkls, gaining 650 of his rush yds (67.0%) after contact and fumbled just once. Toby Gerhart is no Peterson but he did show much promise after being elevated into a starting role. He avg'd 4.9 yds on 109 carries (531 yds, 1 td) and proved to be a nice target out of the backfield (23-190-3). Little-used as a rookie (322 rush, 4.0), he showed he can wear on a D, racking up 324 yds (61.0%) after contact. LY's #6DC Jordan Todman could challenge for a 3rd Dn role and MIN signed Lex Hilliard (ex-MIA) to replace Lorenzo Booker. Jim Kleinsasser retired after 13 yrs as a FB/TE blk'r extraordinaire. MIN is looking for a solid blk'g FB and will give an opportunity to #4DC Rhett Ellison, former-DET/ARZ vet Jerome Felton and 2010 #7DC Ryan D'Imperio. Ellison fits the mold of Kleinsasser after playing both FB and TE at USC and is the favorite for the job. The Vikings hope Peterson will be ready for the ssn opener (may not be 100%). They need his physical style, since opponents regularly play 8 and 9 man fronts against them because of the team's weak passing attack.

RB ADRIAN PETERSON #28 6-1 217 Age: 27 6th Yr (12/12)

Toby Gerhart #32 6-0 231 Age: 25 3rd Yr (5/16)
#2DC MIN '10 (Stanford) - 531 rush yd (4.9), 1 td, 190 rec yd (8.3), 3 td, 24 rush FD, 10 tfl, 13.7% of off LY. 1 st, 15 gm, 322 rush yd (4.0), 1 td, 167 rec yd (8.0), 13 rush FD, 9.7% of off as a rookie in '10.

FB RHETT ELLISON #40 6-5 250 Age: 24 Rookie
4th round, 128th pick out of USC.

2011 RB Total Yards:	2,005 - #16
2011 RB YPC:	5.2 - #7
2012 Top 3 RB:	1,542 (4.6) - #11

NFL Player Draft Rating:	9.32 - #2

RECEIVERS - Percy Harvin held the offense together when Adrian Peterson was inj'd and was the only legitimate starting-caliber WR left on the roster by the end of ssn. He's a small but tough slot WR who's more suited as a #2 or #3. Harvin caught a career-high 87 passes for 967 yds and 6 td. He's an electrifying athlete who played in all 16 gms (14 sts) for the 1st time shedding his migraine issues. He became a focal point in the offense also lining up as a traditional HB (345 rush yd, 6.6). Harvin is as dynamic in space as anyone in the NFL and touched the ball once every 2.3 snaps he was on the field. No one else on the WR-depleted roster had more than 38 rec's. In the offssn, MIN signed FA Jerome Simpson after he was cut by CIN. LY Simpson had 725 yds (14.5) and 5 td. A #2DC of the Bengals in '08, he has developed slowly but could be the big-play threat MIN has been looking for. Look for him to potentially sit out a few games however after an arrest dating back to a season ago. Michael Jenkins is a big rec who started 7 LY after coming over from ATL, where he had worked with current OC Bill Musgrave. He struggled vs man coverage but flourishes in zone and while playing in only 11 gms (knee inj), he still finished 2nd on the tm with 38 rec (466 yds, 12.3). Devin Aromashodu had a good finish after Bernard Berrian was cut, with 468 yds (18.0). To add depth to the unit MIN drafted Jarius Wright (#4DC) and Greg Childs (#4DC). Wright and Childs remarkably attended the same HS, College and were drafted by the same team in the same year, a first in NFL History. At TE, the Vikings didn't re-sign Visanthe Shiancoe as they had hoped for a bounce-back performance in the TE-friendly offense, but he struggled while being slowed by a hamstring inj and was targeted only 65x's (409 yds, 11.4). Kyle Rudolph, the tm's #2DC in '11, takes over after a promising rookie season and is ready to become the primary TE on the roster. He has the size (6'6" 258), speed and great hands to present matchup problems for defenders. He'll more than likely double the 26 rec's he had LY. John Carlson was signed away from SEA, where he missed all of LY with a shoulder injury. A #2DC in '08, he caught 137 passes in his 1st 3 seasons and is a willing blocker. MIN lacks a bona fide #1 WR and has no outside presence at the position, which is a problem for a team relying on an unproven 2nd yr QB.

OFFENSIVE LINE - The Vikings ranked 4th in rushing (144.9 ypg, their most in 3 yrs) but allowed 49 sks (tied for 5th most). There will be at least 3 changes on the OL in '12, with possibly more. New st'rs will be at LT, LG and RG. All-Pro LG Steve Hutchinson left in FA and will be missed, but he will be 35 and had to be replaced eventually. The #4 pick overall in the draft Matt Kalil will immediately start at LT. Geoff Schwartz is the new RG, leaving only C John Sullivan and RT Phil Loadholt where they were a year ago. Kalil fills a position of gigantic need and importance to QB Ponder's development. He should provide Ponder with the time and comfort level needed to make plays in the pocket. Kalil has the prototypical LT build, a passion for the gm and the quickest feet MIN has seen in yrs but will have to improve in the weight room if he is to become elite at the position. With Kalil on board, LY's LT, Charlie Johnson, slides inside to LG, where he's far better suited to play. Johnson was a last-minute stopgap when Bryant McKinnie was released on day 2 of TC LY. He started all 16 and was best in the run game but was a liability in pass protection (9 sk, 42 qbh) as he was often overmatched vs speed rushers. Former CAR DC Geoff Schwartz replaces Anthony Herrera at RG. He is a physical run blk'r who started all 16 for CAR in '10 but missed LY (inj) and was deemed expendable. At C, Sullivan was plagued by injuries in '10 but is healthy and the Vikings will count on his leadership. He has shown improved technique as a run blocker and wasn't overpowered at the POA, even by bigger NT's. At RT, Loadholt is a physical specimen, but he's also the most inconsistent player up front. He gets at least 1 more year to live up to his 2nd RD status from '09. Joe Berger will be a bkp, but he confirmed his versatility LY, appearing in 13 and starting 7 at 3 different spots. There are some other decent reserves in T Patrick Brown and DeMarcus Love and Brandon Fusco, but they are all untested. LY MIN had a very good run blk'g OL that struggled with pass protection. This must improve in 2012.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - The Vikings have an excellent pass-rush tandem at DE in Jared Allen (22 sk) and Brian Robison (8 sk), as the tm comb for 50 sks LY, tying PHI for the NFL lead. Run D was 11th at 107 ypg, quite a fall from when MIN finished 1st or 2nd vs the run from '05 to '09. Allen came within 1/2 a sack of the NFL record set by Michael Strahan in '01. He has DD sks 5 straight yrs and despite being 30, has a few more All-Pro caliber seasons left in him. On the other side, Robison emerged in his first season as a st'r and proved he can be an every-down end. Inside, Kevin Williams is back for his 10th yr, and he'll have a new st'r alongside him. Williams' All-Pro days are behind him at 32. Despite battling foot and knee problems, he ended up with 5 sks and had some impressive gms. He started the L/14 after being susp the 1st two (38 tkls, 10 tfl) and saw extra attention in the run gm because of poor NT play next to him. Remi Ayodele never panned out after signing as an FA from NO to be the heir to Pat Williams. Ayodele was cut, so Letroy Guion, a #5DC a year ago, is the favorite to start in 2012. He played almost 1/2 the snaps in '11 (3 st, 21 tkls) but was mostly ineffective as a nickel rusher. Fred Evans is a 7 yr vet who is enticing but inconsistent as he struggles to anchor vs combo blk's. TY's #7DC, Trevor Guyton, is a promising pass rusher who will get a look inside while Everson Griffen is a versatile reserve who can play DE, UT, NT DT or as a nickel LB in pass situations. Playing only 1/4 of the snaps, he made 4 sks, showing a variety of pass-rush moves. Christian Ballard, a #4DC in '11, is big and strong enough to start at NT, and he can also play DT and LDE. LY's #3DC, D'Aundre Reed was inactive for all 16 games but has natural pass rushing skills. After a subpar '10, Allen rededicated himself and despite persistent chips and double tms, was a disruptive force in the run gm as well.

LINEBACKERS - Both of the Henderson brothers were FA's, but WLB Erin re-signed with the team, meaning there will be a new MLB replacing EJ Henderson who was beat up and did not fit the tm's youth movement. Greenway, the tm's leading tkl'r the L4Y had a career-high 154 tkls (13 tfl) but proved to be deficient in pass coverage, allowing 717 yd (67 %) and 5 td. MIN's Cover-2 D put him in bad situations but at 28, Greenway should have better days ahead. Erin Henderson became a full-time starter for the 1st time and showed signs he might have a solid future at WLB especially vs the run. He played more than 53% of the snaps finishing as the #4 tkl'r (9 tfl, 2 FF). Jasper Brinkley will start at MLB but he missed all of LY with a hip inj and has never started a game (32 gm 1st 2Y). He's well-sized with good speed, sees the field well and could be a good tkl'r in run support. If Brinkley struggles, Marvin Mitchell will take over. Mitchell played 61 gms for NO and MIA the L4Y and could be a late bloomer. Larry Dean is the only returning bkp and played only ST's. Ex-CFL star Solomon Elimimian will also get another look after being cut in training camp last season. Despite SLB Chad Greenway making his 1st Pro Bowl LY, overall the MIN LB corps are not an impressive unit.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - The secondary is by far the weakest unit on the tm. LY MIN finished the season with the 2nd worst defensive QBR (107.6) in NFL history. They ranked 26th in pass D (251.2 ypg) and 31st in scoring D (28.1 ppg), mainly because opponents had 34 passing td, the highest total in the NFL. More than a half-dozen DB's were let go in the offssn, incl oft-inj'd Cedric Griffin. CB will certainly be improved if Antoine Winfield remains healthy and Chris Cook doesn't get a felony conviction. Winfield played only 5 LY because of neck and collarbone inj's. Even though he enters his 14th season, he is a complete CB who provides a steady presence in the secondary. One of the NFL's best CB's vs the run, he's lost some spd, but does fine in zone coverage. Cook was a #2DC in 2010 who was playing his best FB before an Oct 22 arrest threw his future into doubt. Susp after his arrest, he had started 3 of his 6 gm. MIN signed 2 FA CB's in Chris Carr (BAL) and Zack Bowman (CHI) and that alone makes nickel and dime an upgrade. Carr started all 16 in '10 but was the Ravens' NB LY. He is small for a CB and doesn't have great spd, but he anticipates and reacts well and is a good tkl'r. Bowman had 16 sts for the Bears the L3Y and is an aggressive playmaker. Other depth will be provided by 2011 #5DC Brandon Burton, and TY's #3DC Josh Robinson, a speedy CB who can play man or zone and has the desire to come up in run support. The Vikings haven't had an instinctive playmaker at S since Darren Sharper left after '08. Heading into TC, they have 2 rookies penciled in as st'rs in FS Harrison Smith (1st RD) and SS Robert Blanton (5th). Smith is a former LB who has the size and strength to play the run and the speed and instincts to play deep in coverage. He has good anticipation and gets a jump on the ball as it's coming out. Blanton is the kind of hybrid-type MIN covets. If either of the rookies struggle, Jamarca Sanford or Mistral Raymond can play. Sanford, a #7DC in '09, was the only day 1 st'r who stayed healthy or didn't lose his job because of performance. Raymond started the L/5, though he lacks top physical abilities. Because of a myriad of inj's, too many bkps had to start and there was no consistency. The team went a whopping 9 gms without an int and the season total of 8 int tied a franchise low. Things have to be better this season, as MIN heads into the yr with 3 likely new st'rs and 2 of those might be rookies.

SPECIAL TEAMS -The Vikings surprised most observers in the 6th RD of the draft by selecting PK Blair Walsh from UGA because there was no indication that veteran Ryan Longwell was in trouble. A 15 yr vet, Longwell was coming off a season in which he missed 6 FG, going 22-28, his lowest conversion rate (78.6%) s/'05 but he'd been 43-46 the previous 2Y. He had only 19 TB on KO (29th), but he was 2-3 on 50+ FG, with his only miss snapping a streak of 10 consecutive from 50+ dating back to '07. Longwell was cut a few weeks after the draft, leaving the job to Walsh, who was 17-20 from 50+ during his college career, and set an SEC record with 412 career pts. P Chris Kluwe is consistent, but his net average (38.0) fell from 10th to 25th (38.9 in '10). He was 12th with 19 FC and 19th with 22 In20, and his In20/TB ratio was +19 (13th best). Marcus Sherels earned the PR job in his 1st full ssn, then took over on KR duty later in the yr. He avg'd only 8.4 on PR (23rd), making some poor decisions near his own EZ and losing his confidence. He actually was better in limited chances on KR (27.8), with bursts of 78 and 46 yds. Percy Harvin also had 16 KR (32.5) incl a 103 yd td on the season's opening KO at San Diego and a 104 yd'r at Atlanta (no td). The Vikings have not been in the Top 10 of our ST rankings in this century and they were 20th LY with lackluster all-around performances.

Head Coach - Leslie Frazier, 2nd year HC, 6th overall
Frazier was the Colts DB cch '05-'06 then took over as DC for MIN in '07. Frazier was the interim HC for the final 6 games of '10.
Offensive Coordinator - Bill Musgrave, 2nd year
Musgrave has been an NFL QB cch for 8Y and OC for 4. He was Matt Ryan's QB cch from '06-'10 before joining MIN LY.
QB Coach - Craig Johnson, 2nd year
Johnson was with the Titans from '00-'10 spending 8Y as QB cch before joining the Vikings last year.
RB Coach - James Saxon, 2nd year
Saxson was a #6DC of Kansas City in 1988 and played in the league for 8Y. He has had six 1,000 yd seasons by a RB in his 10 years as an NFL RB coach.
WR Coach - George Stewart, 6th year
Stewart has been an NFL coach for 24 years working in PIT, TB, SF and ATL. He joined the Vikings in 2007.
TE Coach - Jimmie Johnson, 7th year
Johnson spent 10 seasons playing the TE position in the NFL (WAS, DET, KC, PHI) prior to starting his coaching career.
OL Coach - Jeff Davidson, 2nd year
Davidson was the CLE OL cch in '05-'06 then served as OC in CAR ('07-'10) before joining MIN LY.
Defensive Coordinator - Alan Williams, 1st year
Williams has 11 years in NFL coaching and worked with Frazier in IND ('05-'06) as a DB cch winning a Super Bowl.
DL Coach - Bredan Daly 1st year, 4th overall
Daly was the DL coach here from 2006-'08. He took the same position at STL the L3Y and returns here for a second stint.
Co-LB Coach - Fred Pagac, 7th overall
Pagac has been the LB coach here from '06-'10 and DC '10-'11. He returns to solely coaching LB's for '12.
Asst HC/Co-LB Coach - Mike Singletary, 2nd year
Inducted into the Pro Football HOF in 1998, Singletary has cch'd in BAL ('03-'04) and was the 49ers Asst HC/LB coach from '05-'08 before acting as the interim HC for the final 9 gm of '08. He spent '09-'10 as the HC of the 49ers (fired with 1 game left in '10 season).

Secondary Coach - Joe Woods, 7th year
Woods was a defensive asst with TB from '04-'05. He has been the secondary coach with MIN since 2006.
Special Teams Coach - Mike Priefer, 2nd year
Priefer was an asst STC with JAX in 2002 (6th) before making stops at NYG ('03-'05), KC STC ('06-'08) then moved on to DEN for the '09-'10 seasons.

OVERVIEW - The Vikings had a nightmarish season under HC Leslie Frazier LY, suffering the most losses in franchise history and going winless in the div for the 1st time. MIN could have gotten off to a good start, but they blew HT leads of 10, 17 and 20 points in losing their 1st 3 games to SD, TB and DET. After an 0-4 start, the Vikings beat ARZ, lost to CHI and GB, then defeated CAR before losing 6 straight. They won a game at WAS before losing their finale, meaning they didn't beat a winning team all season and were 0-7 vs LY's playoff field. The offense was doomed by relying on Donovan McNabb at QB before giving the ball to #1DC Christian Ponder in the 7th gm. Ponder had the typical rookie struggles but showed promise. RB Adrian Peterson missed most of the 2H of the season with inj's and the offense didn't have enough playmakers to make up for his loss. OC Bill Musgrave had a run-oriented, ball-control philosophy built around Peterson, but may have to open it up TY to keep up with the other high-flying offenses in the NFL. New DC Fred Pagac preference to run a Man/Cover-1 system clashed with Frazier's Tampa-2 background and the tm's increasingly depleted personnel. A group of DB's pushed back after a series of mismatched busts in the Vikings' 0-4 start, and Frazier eventually took away play-calling duties from Pagac for a stretch in Nov but it was far too late to right the ship. After the season ended, Pagac was demoted to LB coach (which he will share with Mike Singletary) and Alan Williams was named the new DC. Williams spent the L10Y as an asst in IND, where he worked with Frazier for 2 seasons. Mike Priefer is an intense STC but his units struggled all ssn. Heading into TY, MIN needs to rally behind Ponder and hope Peterson comes all the way back from his torn ACL. The D should bounce back, but not to where it was only a few short yrs ago. There are some factors pointing upwards this year (see division forecast) and really coming off a 3-13 season there is only one way to go. Minny was on a 18-3 run at home until the roof collapsed and went just 1-7 back in the dome last year so their home edge has been dampened. MIN is still looking at another rebuilding season and a probable last-place finish because there are too many holes to fix in one yr and the draft didn't bring in any real playmakers. They also play in a division with 3 of the top 12 teams in the NFL. Despite their schedule getting a little softer (#2 to #16) they are currently a dog in 12 of their 16 games. Look for a decent start to 2012 but look at that 2H of the year schedule when wins will be tough to come by.

NFC SOUTH

ATLANTA
PROJECTED FINISH
(9-7)

Power Rating 96.61

Mike Smith inherited a 4-12 team and has guided them to 4 straight winning records including the playoffs on 3 occasions. ATL was only #16 on off and #16 on def in 2010 but benefitted from 5 net close wins, +14 in TO's and great off and def YPP's (pg 16). The NFC South champ has never repeated and the Falcons won the division crown after NO had won the year before. Their win over CAR in gm 16 wrapped up their first #1 seed in the playoffs s/'80 (30 yrs). They were then pummeled by GB in their first playoff game, 48-21 (outgained 442-194). Last year ATL was a preseason favorite for the SB with the addition of #1 DC WR Jones. I called for the South streak to continue and picked the Saints to win the South. I had Atlanta qualifying as a Wild Card and getting booted in the first round. In the key game of the year they were 5-3 when they hosted the Saints and lost by 3 in OT. They finished 10-6, three full games behind the Saints and in the first round of the playoffs were dominated by the Giants, 24-2. Despite facing just the #26 schedule in the NFL the Falcons were only #10 on offense and #12 on defense. They once again had good health with just 29 starts lost to injury and were +8 in TO's. This year the schedule gets much tougher moving up to #11. They only signed 3 free agents and due to the trade for Jones LY did not have a #1 DC and in fact only had 2 draft picks in the first 4 rounds. ATL did go from 13 wins down to 10 LY and in the rubber band NFL that means they should be headed back up this year. The NFC South champ has never repeated with two 2nd place finishes, five 3rd place finishes and two 4th place finishes. Also division champs in the NFL do not fare well as a general rule and LY 7 of the 8 division champs were different than the year before. I will call for the Falcons to take over the top spot for this year in the South and perhaps they can get that elusive playoff win which has avoided Smith and Ryan.

Power Rating 96.59

In 2009 NO was off a last place South finish and picked 3rd by most magazines. I mentioned they were a team much stronger than their 8-8 record of '08 as they were +71 ypg (best South). They had 3 net close losses and had 56 sts lost. I really liked the addition of DC Gregg Williams. I had the ONLY magazine to pick NO to win the South and not only did they win their division, they won their first Super Bowl in franchise history! They had the NFL's #1 offense but only the #25 defense. There was a lot of talk of an undefeated season but it ended at 13-0. They benefitted from +11 in TO's and were only +46 ypg and +5 wins from '08, all factors pointing down in '10. I said NO would not match their 13 wins and they fell to 11-5 and then a banged up team was upset in the first round by 7-9 SEA. In 2010 they had the #6 off and #4 def. Last year Brees did a good job of leading the team during the lockout and I had the Saints playing Green Bay in the NFC Title game. As expected the Saints had the best offense in the NFL. They did lose a pair of "C" effort games at Tampa Bay and at St Louis which would cost them the home field edge and perhaps a trip to the Super Bowl. As usual the NFL South champ (ATL) did not repeat and the Saints won the division by 3 games and whipped Detroit at home in the playoffs. They then went to SF and gave up 5 TO's and lost on the road or they would have hosted the NFC Title game. The Saints will have an interim head coach filling in for the interim HC for a stretch this year and will miss Payton's play calling and a couple of key players due to the suspensions. NO was +3 in net close wins, had only 20 starts lost to injury, had positive off and def YPP's and their schedule goes from #31 to #7, all factors pointing to a drop off.

In 2009 coming off a 9-7 season TB fired Jon Gruden and replaced him with 32 yr old Raheem Morris who had never even been a coordinator! They let 8 starters go in the offseason and only had 7 HG's (1 "HG" in London). TB also went from playing the #24 schedule to the #6. They fired their OC 10 days prior to the opener. I actually called for a last place finish and the Bucs opened 1-12 with 1 of their 3 wins vs a Saints tm resting their starters. In '10 I said Tampa was -6 in wins from '08 so they should bounce back up (see pg 13), especially vs the #25 schedule. They went 9-1 vs tms that finished with losing records and 1-5 vs tms with winning records and that one win came vs NO who was resting starters (finale). Despite the soft schedule TB was just #19 on off and #17 on def and benefitted from +9 in TO's with a def YPP of 16.7 and had improved their record by 7 wins. They were a stylish playoff pick LY but the previous factors had me calling for a losing season and they plummeted to 4-12 facing the #3 schedule. This rubber band team is poised for an upwards bounce as they have a lot of young talent, the schedule drops to #18, they were -16 in TO's LY, were -6 wins from the prior year, and had poor off (17.8) and def (12.8) YPP's. They were just #21 on offense and #30 on defense LY and have a first time NFL HC in Schiano who had mixed results at Rutgers. One of my 5 sets of power ratings calls for the Bucs to finish with DD wins and keep the NFC South streak alive of never having had a repeater. LY the Bucs actually had 2 wins vs teams that had DD wins in NO and ATL and neither was resting their starters (both 1H of year). With a weaker Saints team, TB could be a darkhorse to be the surprise division winner.

PHIL STEELE'S POWER POLL

Power Rating 93.44

In 2007 the Panthers were the stylish pick to win the NFC Title but missed the playoffs for the 4th time in 6 yrs (7-9). In '08 I pointed out the Panthers won 7 gms with 4 different QB's, had a much softer schedule and would be under the radar. The Panthers went 8-0 at home and won the NFC South at 12-4. Shockingly veteran Delhomme had the worst game of his career at home vs Arizona (5 int, 1 fmbl) and Carolina was booted from the playoffs early. A ton of factors pointed down in '09 including the NFC South champ "Curse". I called for the Panthers to miss the playoffs and they dropped to 8-8. In '10 I called for a drop to 4-12 and CAR fell even further to 2-14 as neither QB Moore nor Clausen was successful (comb 8-19 ratio). A lot of indicators pointed upwards LY as they also signed 6 starters in free agency and added in QB Cam Newton. They were #32 on off and #18 on def in '10 and had a new HC with new coordinators and were not able to implement their systems during the lockout. CAR took on the #22 schedule and Newton was dynamic. They opened 1-5 and were 2-8 after a loss at Detroit. CAR got to play IND, TB (twice) and a Houston team which had clinched the playoffs and won 4 of the next 5 before getting thumped by the Saints for a 6-10 finish. Pointing upward is a much improved LB corps and Newton now having pro experience. CAR had 4 net close losses LY, were +12.1 ypg despite their record (#7 off, #28 def), had a def ypp of 14.1 and 56 starts lost to injury. On the negative inside the Panthers play a much tougher schedule (#8) as they beat only one team with more than 5 wins LY and only face 3 such teams this year. A quick check of their schedule page shows that a Vegas sportsbook has them favored in 6 games this year and that tougher schedule has tempered my optimism.

ATLANTA FALCONS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - In his 4th year, Matt Ryan didn't quite take the step to becoming an elite QB that many people expected. Coming off a 13-3 season in '10, ATL was expected to have one of the most prolific offenses in the NFL with Ryan looking to do what Eli Manning did in his 4th yr, which was to win the Super Bowl. When you simply look at Ryan's numbers, he quietly had the best season of his career, with personal highs of 4,177 pass yds (franchise record) and 29 td's. ATL went more vertical with rookie Julio Jones adding a deep ball dimension. The balanced attack could be a quick-strike offense or one that would grind it out. However, Ryan didn't win a playoff gm once again and that's what really counts. He completed more than 60% of his passes for the 3rd time in 4 years, and he has increased his td ttl each yr. ATL stalled too often inside the red zone, ranking only 13th at 52.5%. The Falcons wanted to get more explosive, and they did with 71 pass plays of 20+ yds. However, in gms when ATL passed 40+ times, they were only 1-6. Chris Redman enters his 10th yr as a barely used bkp. He has thrown only 34 passes the L2Y, but the team has confidence that he'll be ready if they ever have to turn to him. Ryan was never better than in the L/4 gms of LY when he completed 81-125 passes (64.8%) for 1,023 yds, with a 10-0 ratio. Those are the kinds of numbers put up by the Peyton Manning's and Tom Brady's of the NFL. He's not far behind the top QB's in the league and all it takes is a couple of wins in the postseason.

QB MATT RYAN #2 6-4 217 Age: 27 5th Yr (16/16)
#1DC ATL '08 (Boston College) - 4177 pass yd (61.3%), 29-12 ratio, 7.4 ypa, 92.2 QBR, 84 rush yd, 26 sk LY. 16 st, 3705 pass yd (62.5%), 28-9 ratio, 6.5 ypa, 91.0 QBR, 122 rush yd (2.7), 23 sk '10.

Chris Redman #8 6-3 225 Age: 35 10th Yr (0/5
#4DC BAL '00 (Louisville) - 188 pass yd (64.3), 0-1 ratio, 6.7 ypa, 68.8 QBR, 0 sk LY. 2 gm, 20 pass yd (66.7%), 0-0 ratio, 3.3 ypa, 71.5 QBR, 0 sk '10.

RUNNING BACKS - The Falcons slipped to 114.6 ypg rush last year, their lowest in 4 yrs and the lowest of the 4 major offensive categories. Michael Turner rushed for 1,340 yds (4.5) and 11 td's, while adding 17 rec's for 168 yds, but he averaged only 3.1 ypc the last 5 gms when he seemed to wear down, and ATL lost 2 of those. Turner led the NFL in carries in '08 and '10 and was 2nd last year, but he might be showing some signs of age now that he's 30. However, he was used sparingly early in his career and may still have some miles left. Turner has incredible lower body power and strength to get positive yardage after the initial hit, and he's an effective short-yardage and red zone presence. ATL needs to develop a backup to Turner, and they think they've found their guy in Jacquizz Rodgers, LY 's #5DC. Rodgers didn't see a lot of action, but he impressed the staff in the preseason. He finished 2nd on the team with 205 yds (3.6) and showed a lot of promise as a 3rd down back, catching 21 passes for 188 yds. He can make tacklers miss, but he doesn't shy away from contact either. Jason Snelling is now the #3 back after gaining only 151 yds LY (3.4). He's been a valuable backup for 4Y, as well as an excellent receiver out of the backfield and a core ST's player. FB Ovie Mughelli is an excellent blocker and receiver who serves as Turner's lead blocker. He missed the 2H of LY with a torn ACL. That was a blow to the team, as ATL brought in 5 FB's for tryouts, finally signing Mike Cox. ATL struggled in short-yardage situations the rest of last year. Mughelli was let go so the Falcons drafted Bradie Ewing in the 5th round to provide competition. Turner remains the workhorse and has led the team in rushing each of the L/30 games, the longest streak of any NFL RB.

RB MICHAEL TURNER #33 5-10 247 Age: 30 9th Yr (15/16)
#5DC SD '04 (N Illinois) - 1340 rush yd (4.5), 11 td, 168 rec yd (9.9), 62 rush FD, 45 tfl, 25.0% of off LY. 15 st, 16 gm, 1371 rush yd (4.1), 12 td, 85 rec yd (7.1), 71 rush FD, 33 tfl, 26.7% of off '10.

Jacquizz Rodgers #22 5-6 196 Age: 22 2nd Yr (0/16)
#5DC ATL '11 (Oregon St) - 205 rush yd (3.6), 1 td, 188 rec yd (9.0), 15 rush FD, 6.5% of off, 10 tfl as rookie LY.

FB MIKE COX #42 6-0 252 Age: 27 5th Yr (5/9)
UFA KC '08 (Georgia Tech) - 5 st, 9 gm 0 rush att, 2 rec (4.0) LY. 2 st, 7 gm, 0 rush att, 4 rec (6.8), 100.0 catch %, 0.5% of off w/KC '10.

RECEIVERS - Roddy White and Julio Jones combined for 154 catches, 2,255 yds and 16 td's last season. Jones led all rookies with 8 scoring rec's. Six of those were from 20+ yds, incl 50 and 80 yard td's in gm 8 vs IND. An explosive and dangerous open field runner, Jones fills the role of being the tm's long sought after downfield spark. He also proved to be a very good downfield blk'r. While his route running needs some polish and he needs work on improving his overall strength, he will certainly benefit from some offssn work heading into his 2nd yr. White caught 100 passes for 1,296 yds and 8 scores. That marked his 2nd straight year in triple digits and his 5th consecutive yr with 80+ rec's and 1,100 yds. He has caught a pass in 84 consecutive gms. Harry Douglas had his moments but has never been a consistent threat as the team's #3 WR in 4 NFL seasons. He caught career highs of 39 passes for 498 yds (12.8) in the slot LY. Kerry Meier was a #5DC in '10 who missed his rookie yr with a knee inj and played only sparingly LY. In other words, the Falcons desperately need some depth at this position. At TE, there were times in '10 when it looked like 15-yr vet Tony Gonzalez had hit the end of the road. His ypc dipped to a career-low 9.4 and he rarely got open downfield or made anything happen after the catch. Gonzalez bounced back LY, catching 80 passes for 875 yds (10.9) and scored 7 td's. In fact, he was the most consistent player on the off. Retirement and a spot in the HOF can wait at least another season. Michael Palmer is ready to step up as the #2 TE. Palmer caught 10 passes for 72 yds and made strides as an edge blk'r. The Falcons have a dynamic WR tandem with Jones and White and that showed LY as ATL ranked 8th in the NFL avg 262 passing ypg. That's easily the most ever by an ATL tm and represented an increase of nearly 40 yds over the '10 mark.

WR JULIO JONES #11 6-3 220 Age: 23 2nd Yr (13/13)

OFFENSIVE LINE - Sometimes numbers can be deceiving. Although ATL allowed only 26 sks LY, this unit was heavily scrutinized over the offssn after it struggled in short-yardage situations all yr and couldn't protect the QB on 5 and 7 step drops. In addition to the 26 sks, Matt Ryan was hit 84 times, 7th most in the league. Four st'rs return on what is considered a run-blocking line that struggles with athletic fronts. LT has been a problem spot for ATL for most of the time that Ryan has been with the team. The Falcons drafted Sam Baker the same year they drafted Ryan, but Baker has never made it to the elite level. He was ineffective at the start of LY and eventually was sidelined with a back injury and replaced by Will Svitek, who did an adequate job. Svitek isn't the long-term answer at LT, so the Falcons are going back to Baker TY. When he ret'd from his back injury, he was demoted to blk'g TE and bkp LT. Svitek started the L/10 gms and gave up 0 sks in gms vs players like Kyle Vanden Bosch, Dwight Freeney, Jason Jones and Will Smith. In half the time that Svitek played, Baker allowed 2.5 sks to Svitek's 1.5 sks. At LG, Justin Blalock started 16 for yet another season and he hasn't allowed more than 3 sks since his rookie season of '07. C Todd McClure is the gutsy leader of the group as he heads into his 14th yr. He has been a mainstay on the line since making the team as a 7th RD DC in '99. When he was out for 3 gms LY, the OL allowed 10 sks. Joe Hawley stabilized the RG position after Garrett Reynolds opened the season as the st'r after beating out Mike Johnson, who'd taken over for Harvey Dahl. When Reynolds struggled, Hawley, a #4DC in '10 who didn't play much as a rookie, took over. Hawley also started 4 at C last yr. Tyson Clabo also starts 16 gms yr in and yr out. As a pass protector, he has all'd 5 sks each of the L2Y, as he occasionally has trouble with speedy pass rushers. In the offssn, the Falcons signed vet Vince Manuwai, who had a long career at G with JAX and will provide competition and depth. In the 2nd RD, ATL drafted Peter Konz, a C/G who will be cross-trained to take over for either McClure in time or Hawley right away. Considered the top C in the draft, he was very effective in Wisconsin's inside zone blk'g scheme. #3DC Lamar Holmes is another draft pick who could see immediate PT if he can show he deserves it at LT more than Baker. He's a big, strong and nasty blk'r. There are no road graders who are going to knock back the LOS among this group of technicians, but it is a veteran unit that doesn't present any huge problems.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - The Falcons make stopping the run the priority and finished 6th in run D (97.0 ypg) LY, but they failed in 3 key losses in Dec and the playoffs to HOU (162 yds), NO (164 yds) and the NYG (172 yds). ATL had 33 sks LY, finishing 25th. All 4 st'rs return on a veteran unit. DE John Abraham is an explosive pass rusher who led with 9.5 sks in a fine comeback ssn (only 13 comb sks '09-10). He was hurt for most of LY (groin) but he never missed a game (only 5 missed gms the L5Y). The league's leading active sack master with 112, he was on a play count for most of the ssn, playing about 2/3 of every gm. At 34, he can still get it done. None of the other 3 st'rs, DE Ray Edwards and DT's Justin Babineaux and Corey Peters, could consistently get after the passer. Edwards, a rush end who signed LY specifically to complement Abraham, had only 3.5 sks (offssn surg) after getting 16.5 the prior 2 seasons. When the Falcons drafted Peters in the 3rd RD in '10, they didn't envision him being much more than a role player early in his career. Peters wound up starting as a rookie and showed he could play the run, and LY he showed he could also rush the passer. He recorded 3 sks and along with Babineaux was able to create consistent pressure in the middle of the DL. The DL is very deep, as DT Peria Jerry was the tm's #1DC in '09 but had a major knee inj in the 2nd gm of his rookie year. He was brought along slowly LY with the team thinking a healthy Jerry would emerge as a force. It didn't happen. Jerry played in a rotation with Peters but produced only 10 tkls and 0 sks. Kroy Biermann, the st'r before Edwards arrived, was solid while playing in the rotation at DE, making 2.5 sks. With ATL planning to play some 3-man DL TY, he could be a stand-up LB because of his athleticism. DE Lawrence Sidbury and NT Vance Walker round out the depth. Sidbury was active in a limited role and registered 4 sks. ATL drafted 2 more DL's. DE Jonathan Massaquoi (#5DC) hails from the same school that produced DeMarcus Ware and Osi Umenyiora (Troy). DT Travian Robertson (#7DC) adds some girth as a run-stuffing tackle. ATL likes to bring pressure with a 4-man line (no LB's), though they will play more 3-man fronts under new DC Mike Nolan.

DE RAY EDWARDS #93 6-5 268 Age: 27 7th Yr (16/16) #4DC MIN '06 (Purdue) - 33 tkl, 3.5 sk, 3 tfl, 3 pbu LY. 13 st, 14 gm, 37 tkl, 8 sk (#2 tm), 3 tfl, 2 pbu w/MIN '10.

LINEBACKERS - SLB Sean Weatherspoon is the only returnee and will be joined by MLB Akeem Dent and WLB Stephen Nicholas. Weatherspoon turned in a mega-season in '11, with 115 tkls and 4 sks in 16 sts. As a rookie #1DC in '10, he was having a big year until being slowed by ankle and knee inj's that held him to 11 gms (5 sts). Nicholas started 8 gms after Mike Peterson was inj'd LY, but then he missed the L/2 gms with a knee sprain (the 1st of his 4Y career). Dent was a #3DC who showed some promise on ST's but saw limited action on D. He may not be ready to be a st'r, but he looks to be a big thumper and somehow will have to make up for Curtis Lofton's 147 tackles LY. That may be asking a bit too much. Lofton's loss was a real blow to the D because he gobbled up ballcarriers. ATL signed former Seahawk Lofa Tatupu and the 6 yr veteran could start over Dent at MLB. Tatupu sat out LY (leg) but has 84 career sts. Bkp SLB Spencer Adkins held his own while getting some action down the stretch in his 3rd year (started finale). He has a lot of potential but has to start producing at a higher level. The unit was clearly the strength of the defense in '11, but the Falcons will have 2 new starters this year after losing Lofton in FA and not re-signing veteran Peterson.

LB Sean Weatherspoon

DEFENSIVE BACKS - Despite revamping the secondary and trying to bolster the pass rush, ATL struggled to improve their pass D. Since '08, they've ranked 21st (220.4), 28th (241.9), 22nd (226.6) and 20th (236.6). The unit played better in coverage and batted down a lot of balls in '11, but it didn't make the big plays required to stop some of the NFL's top passing attacks. Other than the addition of ex-PHI CB Asante Samuel, who was acquired in a trade, this unit has not changed from LY. In 2 yrs after coming over from HOU to shore up the Falcons' weak CB play, Dunta Robinson hasn't produced like expected. He has provided a physical presence but is often inconsistent in coverage. In 2Y as the ATL st'r, he has 104 tkls and 3 int in 31 sts. LCB Brent Grimes is the team's best man-on-man cover CB. A Pro Bowl alternate in '10, he missed 4 gms late with a knee inj. Grimes made 11 int and 153 tkls in '09-10, but those numbers fell to 1 int and 49 stops LY. Grimes is still an ascending player. Samuel will play nickel or find his way into the starting lineup. Traded to ATL by PHI because of his high salary, he is regarded as a chance-taking, all-or-nothing CB who doesn't play pass coverage well because he likes to go after the ball. Samuel has started 108 gms in 9Y and has 45 career int, more than the other 4 starting DB's comb. FS Thomas DeCoud and SS William Moore did a better job staying at home when they had over-the-top responsibilities in '11. DeCoud is a very underrated player in an increasingly pass-oriented division, and his 4 int in '11 led the team. Moore, a #2DC in '09 and 2 yr st'r, has more big-play potential than he's shown. He is a big hitter but will still get lost in coverage. Dominique Franks played well as the NB in the slot late LY and outside at LCB for Grimes. He is a dependable bkp. Christopher Owens showed strong ability as the dime DB and has missed only 2 gms in 3 years. At 5'9" 180 he'll never be a full-time st'r. Bkp S Shann Schillinger is primarily a ST's player, so ATL has to hope #6DC Charles Mitchell can provide some depth. This would be a problem area if a st'r went down.

CB ASANTE SAMUEL #22 5-10 185 Age: 31 10th Yr (14/14) #4DC NE '03 (UCF) - 34 tkl, 10 pbu, 3 int w/PHI LY. 10 st, 11 gm, 26 tkl, 14 pbu, 7 int w/PHI '10.

SPECIAL TEAMS

K	Matt Bryant (U)	KR	Harry Douglas (3)
P	Matt Bosher (6)	PR	Dominique Franks (5)

SPECIAL TEAMS - KR Eric Weems scored td's via both PR and KR in '10, when he led the NFC with a 27.5 KR avg. LY his numbers slipped to 23.5 on KR and 9.8 on PR, but he was also one of the tm's top ST tkl'rs. Competing to replace Weems will be Dominique Franks, who looked impressive as a KR in the '11 preseason and Harry Douglas who handled PR/KR duties as a rookie in '08, returning a punt for a 61 yard td. The kicking game, on the other hand, is in excellent shape. PK Matt Bryant made 27-29 FG (93.1%, led league). His 2 misses were in the 40-49 range. That was his 2nd straight year over 90% (28-31 in '10). P Matt Bosher settled down after struggling early LY and had a strong season for a rookie #6DC. He finished with a 42.7 gross and 38.9 net (19th). He placed 27 punts In20 (38.6%, 7th) and his In20/TB ratio of +23 was 8th. Bosher also handled the KO duties because of his strong leg. 13 yr vet Joe Zelenka remains one of the NFL's best LS. The Falcons have a huge hole on ST's TY since Weems was lost in FA and hasn't been capably replaced.

K MATT BRYANT #3 5-9 203 Age: 37 11th Yr (16 gms) UFA NYG '02 (Baylor) - 27-29 FG, L/51, 45-45 PAT, 126 ttl pts LY. 16 gm, 28-31 FG, L/51, 44-44 PAT, 128 ttl pts '10.
P MATT BOSHER #5 6-0 208 Age: 25 2nd Yr (16 gms) #6DC ATL '11 (Miami, FL) - 70 punts (42.7), L/59, 27 In20 (38.6%), net 38.9 as rookie LY.
KR HARRY DOUGLAS #83 6-0 183 Age 28 4th Yr (16 gms) #3DC ATL '08 (Louisville) - No KR L2Y. 4 KR (11.5) as a rookie.
PR DOMINIQUE FRANKS #24 6-0 197 Age: 25 3rd Yr (14 gms) #5DC ATL '10 (Oklahoma) - 1 PR (0.0) LY. 0 PR '10. 11 PR (17.0) as a Jr at Oklahoma.

Head Coach - Mike Smith, 5th year
Smith entered the NFL as a defensive assistant in BAL from 1999-2001 before being promoted to LB coach. From 2003-'07 he worked as the JAX DC.
Offensive Coordinator - Dirk Koetter, 1st year
Koetter was a college OC at UTEP, Missouri, BC and Oregon and the HC at Boise St ('98-'00) and Arizona St ('01-'06). He's been the JAX OC the last 5 years.
Quarterbacks - Glen Thomas, 1st year, 5th overall
Thomas spent his 1st four seasons with the Falcons as a Offensive Quality Control specialist. He was the OC at a DII school from '05-'07.
Running Backs - Gerald Brown, 5th year
Brown was the RB coach/Special Tms coach at Indiana from 2002-'07. He spent '01 as a RB coach in the XFL.
Wide Receivers - Terry Robiskie, 5th year
Robiskie was MIA's WR coach in 2007 after working on 2 different coaching staffs for CLE from 2001-'06.
Tight Ends - Chris Scelfo, 5th year
Prior to his arrival with the Falcons in 2008, Scelfo spent the 1998-2006 seasons as the HC of Tulane University.
Offensive Line - Pat Hill, 1st year
Hill was an NFL coach with CLE and BAL from 1992-'96 but, of course, spent the L15Y as the HC at Fresno St.
Defensive Coordinator - Mike Nolan, 1st year
Nolan is a veteran NFL coach who has been a DC for 6 different teams including most recently at MIA (the last 2 years) and DEN ('09). He was also the SF HC from 2005-'08.
Defensive Line - Ray Hamilton, 5th year
Hamilton was JAX's DL cch from 2003-'07 before joining ATL in '08. The Falcons are his 7th NFL tm he has coached with.
Linebackers - Glenn Pires, 5th year
Pires was a defensive asst with ARZ and DET from '96-'02 and from 2003-'07 was the LB coach for MIA.
Defensive Backs - Joe Danna, 1st year
Danna returns after spending the last 2 yrs as the asst DB cch at MIA ('10-'11). He was an asst def cch here in '08-'09.
Secondary - Tim Lewis, 3rd year
Lewis was a DC at PIT ('00-'03) and NYG ('04-'06). Most recently he was the DB coach at CAR ('07-'08) and SEA ('09).

Special Teams Coordinator - Keith Armstrong, 5th year
Armstrong started as a DB cch and then the ST cch at CHI from 1997-'00. Prior to ATL he was the MIA ST cch ('01-'07).

OVERVIEW - The Falcons have been one of the NFL's better teams for the last several seasons, but until they win a playoff game, that's all they'll be. The same goes for QB Matt Ryan, who has to carry this team over the threshold. While it's never all on the QB, Ryan is the face of the franchise. The team's humiliating 24-2 playoff loss to the eventual SB champion NYG really stung and it should have. But it has been used as a measuring stick throughout the offssn. Still, ATL didn't make any major changes and the lineup remains basically the same. HC Mike Smith is 43-21 in 4Y. He is the most successful HC in franchise history, and he's taken the team to the playoffs 3 times in 4Y. Sometimes Smith can be too aggressive, such as in a game against NO LY when he went for it on 4&1 from his own 29 and failed. Smith has new coordinators on both sides of the ball as former OC Mike Mularkey is now the HC in JAX and former DC Brian Van Gorder moved on to to Auburn. Dirk Koetter is the new OC, coming over from JAX where his offenses weren't exactly the best the L5Y. However, he has much more talent in ATL, not to mention a top-flight QB, which he lacked with the Jaguars. Koetter was an innovative offensive coach in the college ranks. The new DC Mike Nolan, comes from MIA where his D ranked 6th LY. Unlike VanGorder who came from college, Nolan has been a seasoned pro coordinator for 14 seasons. He also was SF's HC from 2005-08. While Nolan is noted as a 3-4 coach, the Falcons will remain primarily a 4-3 tm. QB coach Bob Bratkowski left to be the OC in JAX, and OL coach Paul Boudreau was fired and replaced by Pat Hill, which is an improvement. LY, the Falcons went 10-6 but never quite got it going. They lost the season opener to CHI then traded wins and losses for the next month before putting together a 3 gm winning streak over CAR, DET and IND. They then lost to NO in OT before beating TEN and MIN. After a loss to HOU, the Falcons defeated CAR again and JAX. They then lost again to NO before beating TB in the season finale. Victories vs the Saints would have given ATL a 12-4 record and the NFC South Title. Instead they were 1-4 vs playoff teams. The Falcons cannot hide behind a shiny home record and believe they're on the cusp of taking the next step. They are a good team, not a great team. They have to win a playoff game, or two, and make the next step.

NEW ORLEANS SAINTS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - While other QB's have more star power, Drew Brees has been the most consistent passer over the past six seasons. He is the 2nd player to have six straight seasons of 4,000 yds passing (P. Manning 1999-04) and broke Dan Marino's single season passing mark. His importance to the team is summed up with the Saints 39-8 record when Brees earns a 100+ QBR. His 43 games with at least 1 td pass is 2nd only to Johnny Unitas and he enters 2012 with a chance to tie Brett Favre with 5 seasons of 30 or more td passes. Clearly at the apex of his career, 2011 had him set NFL records for completions, completion %, 300 yd passing games while helping the Saints set the record for total net yards in a season. Still, they only played 2 games vs top 10 defenses (HOU/JAX) and it's also quite clear that the offense is built for turf and that slow grass fields affect the timing of the system. When Brees finds his rhythm he is virtually unstoppable but if his launch point can be disrupted, defenses can have success against him. While his contract status is not expected to keep him away from the start of training camp, there are a few issues facing him for 2012. The biggest is the loss of Sean Payton for the season as they had a seamless rapport. Losing Robert Meachem will force OC Pete Carmichael to adjust how NO attacks downfield and the level of pass protection takes a bit of a dip with Carl Nicks now in TB. NO's preparation for avoiding a 2011 Colts' type disaster is uncertain and while Chase Daniel has looked ok the L2Y in preseason action, he lacks real game experience. As long as Brees' holdout doesn't last into training camp, they should still be an elite force but not at the level of 2011.

RUNNING BACKS - The Saints were down to their sixth string RB in the 2010 playoff loss to SEA and had rushed for 587 fewer yards than 2009 (4th biggest dropoff). The injury situation meant Brees had to take more chances and he threw for a career high 22 int in 2010. A versatile weapon in the passing game, former #1DC Reggie Bush wasn't a dominating force in the run game (just a single 100 yd rush game with Saints) and injuries were a growing concern. By moving up in the draft LY for Mark Ingram they made it clear that they wanted an all-purpose RB that they had lacked since Deuce McAllister had departed. NO allowed Bush to depart for MIA due to cap issues and brought in Darren Sproles to replace him. The Saints also returned Chris Ivory, a power back who had a pair of 100 yd rushing games as a rookie in 2010 before a foot injury late in the season. Pierre Thomas was the balanced RB that is good in all situations but doesn't excel in any particular area. The coaching staff wanted the RB's to be modular like the WR's and to use the best player for that week's matchup or even the situation in the game. Ingram was limited to under 500 yds rushing due to a turf toe injury but is expected to be ready to roll for camp. Thomas got the bulk of the early down snaps to let Brees get a feel for the defenses and open up the game. Darren Sproles was only expected to be a 3rd Dn back that would improve their return units but he proved to be much more. He logged 10 games with 80 or more yards from the LOS and set an NFL record with almost 2,700 all-purpose yards. He fit seamlessly into the Saints' offense and improved their already formidable versatility in regards to formations. At the end of the season NO had rushed for 2,000 yds as a team for only the 5th time since 1988 as they improved by 608 yds rushing behind only DEN's 1,088 yds. Everyone is back and healthy including FB Jed Collins and really only SF matches them in total quality of depth at the position.

RECEIVERS - Continuity breeds success in the NFL and for the Saints it culminated in their record setting season thanks to Brees having the same set of WR's from 2006-11. NO is known for diffusing defenses by spreading the ball around with top notch execution. As a result NO has had one of the best 3rd Dn rates in the NFL since 2006 converting at least 44% of the time (33% is standard). For the first time since 2001 with Joe Horn and Willie Jackson, the Saints had two players with over 1,000 yds receiving. NO's top 4 WR's in Marques Colston, Robert Meachem, Devery Henderson and Lance Moore combined for 2,893 yds (14.2) with 24 td's. Those four players had more yardage than DEN, JAX and STL's entire pass offenses in 2011. Colston remains Brees' preferred target and with his 6-4 frame makes the most out of lining up vs smaller CB's in the slot. Lance Moore remains a steady 3rd Dn option who can work the intermediate routes and go over the middle. Meachem departed for SD in FA and his deep speed (totalled 30 rec's 20+ yds L3Y) will be missed. Henderson will get more looks as the deep target going forward but will also get more safeties rolling his way. The big adjustment in 2011 was how the Saints got more out of the TE spot thanks to the meteoric rise of Jimmy Graham as a flex TE. Graham is a sneaky deep threat (13 rec's 20+ yds) coming off the line who shreds any LB's that try to cover him. NE's Rob Gronkowski is the only receiving TE that is his equal going forward in 2012. David Thomas is a serviceable receiving TE while David Gilmore is purely a blocking TE. NO's depth allowed them to only have to use one of their few DC's on Nick Toon, who OC Carmichael noted reminds him of Colston. New Orleans has enough talent to let Toon gradually adjust in 2012 before needing him to challenge for a starting spot next season. This is a good unit that is made better by the elite QB at the helm but it should improve as a whole as Graham hones his game.

OFFENSIVE LINE - The Saints have had the best pass protecting OL over the past six seasons giving up just 122 sacks or just 1 every 30.6 pass attempts. In 2010 NO had all 5 starters field a full set of 80 starts for the season and brought 4 of them forward into 2011. They lost C Jonathan Goodwin to SF but signed Olin Kreutz after CHI released him. NO finished 2nd with just 24 sacks allowed in 2011 despite Kreutz abruptly retiring early in the season. NO was able to elevate Brian De La Puente to #1 C off the practice squad as they had the best OG duo in the NFL in Carl Nicks and Jahri Evans (both 1st team All-Pro for 2011). Brees is not an overly mobile QB and the tandem of Nicks and Evans were very well respected for setting up a strong mid-line pocket for him. Nicks' contract demands however, were too much for NO to match after the season and they were forced to watch him go to the Bucs. NO doesn't take a big step down with his replacement in Ben Grubbs though. Grubbs may not be a top 3 LG but he is in the top 10, so the position is still in good hands. While LT Jermon Bushrod did earn a spot in the Pro Bowl, he was inconsistent with his pass blocking at times. NO is set to have a competition at RT between Zach Strief and former #1DC Charles Brown. Strief was sidelined with a knee injury after 3 games and Brown played well in his place until landing on IR with a hip injury. When Strief returned, the Saints then fielded the same starting lineup for the final 8 weeks of the season. They only had 11 drives of 3 & out on 84 possessions with 35 of those ending in td's. The Saints did add developmental prospects Andrew Tiller and Marcel Jones in the draft to bolster the depth and man the practice squads. By losing Nicks, NO was able to retain Colston and upgrade the LB's while ensuring they had enough to deal with Brees. This remains one of the top OL's heading into 2012.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - Even though the Saints finished 4th in total defense in 2010 there were concerns about the lack of pass rush. The DL only had 19.5 (59%) of the team's 33 sacks (18th) which wasn't inspiring for an aggressive 4-3 defense. The defense at the time was built on pressure generating TO's, but the Saints ended the season with just 9 int, the fewest in the league. Their 112 ypg rushing allowed (4.3) was 16th as offenses used NO's aggressive nature against them. NO looked to address the pass rush by drafting Cameron Jordan with their top 1st RD DC, but he only had 1 sack as a rookie as he adjusted from being a college 3-4 DE. Greg Romeus was picked up in the 7th RD and the coaching staff opted to "red-shirt" him over college knee/back injuries. The Saints then added Shaun Rogers and former SF NT Aubrayo Franklin to solidify the middle in the offseason for 2011. They rotated at DT next to NT Sedrick Ellis but added virtually nothing (0 sk, 2 tfl comb) to the interior pass rush. NO only improved their rush defense by 4 ypg (12th) and allowed 5.0 ypc in 2011. NO let both Franklin and Rogers leave after the season and made a nice move by bringing in Brodrick Bunkley from the Broncos. Bunkley was very effective vs the run in 2011 on a thin DL playing much better than his stats indicate. Remi Ayodele returns after 13 sts at MIN LY and while he is tagged as the #3 DT, Spagnuolo's DL's use a heavy rotation system so he'll get his share of snaps. The Saints made an interesting move in using their top pick (#3DC) TY on Akiem Hicks a former LSU prospect. Hicks spent 2 seasons at a top tier Canadian football college and impressed at the Combine with 5.23 spd and 23 reps. Big but raw, the Saints have made it clear they want to use 2012 to develop his skills. #1 DE Will Smith is facing a 4 game suspension over the bounty scandal but the Saints are hoping that the tandem of Turk McBride as a run stuffer and Greg Romeus as a situational pass rusher can fill the void. NO has better than average depth here and should be better vs the run but their sack totals may not increase by much.

LINEBACKERS - Jonathan Vilma was a desperately needed upgrade in terms of athleticism and leadership for the Saints when he joined the team in 2008. Quickly becoming the heart and soul of the defense, his body started to break down in 2011 after three straight years of 105+ tackles. Vilma missed 5 games with a knee injury and is slated to miss all of 2012 with a suspension due to the bounty hunting issue. Lost in all the offseason turmoil is that GM Mickey Loomis actually upgraded the unit as a whole. They brought in Curtis Lofton from ATL, who is a stout run defender with average coverage ability, and also 4 years younger. The WLB position was solidified with Chris Chamberlain, who was one of the few Rams' defenders to have a decent year in 2011. The SLB position was upgraded with David Hawthorne, who led the Seahawks in tackles for 3 straight seasons. Hawthorne has started at all 3 LB positions and is a very underrated defender. Scott Shanle can also play all 3 positions but he was never known for being a high impact player and is starting to slow down. NO did let #2 tackler Jo-Lonn Dunbar depart in FA as they needed to upgrade their coverage abilities. Martez Wilson started to get into the groove at the end of his rookie season but he's facing his 2nd scheme in as many years. Will Herring is a spot starter, who is much better situated to special teams. Jonathan Casillas earned some starting snaps in 2011 but may not fit the new system and will have to impress on special teams. Losing Vilma is a huge blow in terms of leadership but this has the makings of a better unit athletically when it takes the field.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - Heading into '11 the Saints secondary was viewed as a strength as while the team only logged 9 int in 2010 they also only gave up 13 pass td's. The 194 ypg passing allowed was 4th best with a very respectable 6.8 ypa (11th). NO returned all four starters LY as well as their nickel CB and the only bump they had prior to the season was the loss of FA pickup Fabian Washington with a hamstring injury to IR. On the surface the Saints looked to have imploded in pass defense falling to 30th (1054 more yds vs 2009) and finishing with a -15 td/Int mark (28th) in 2011. However, they faced a much tougher string of QB's in 2011, foes were passing constantly to keep up with the Saints' offense and once again they didn't get much help in terms of a pass rush from the front 7. SS Roman Harper wound up leading the team with 7.5 sacks as they had to engineer pressure all season long. However, they were 1 of 9 teams to allow less than 58% competitions and their 7.0 ypa was rather average and they finished #11 in QBR. For 2012 the Saints are dealing with depth issues as starting CB Tracy Porter left for DEN in FA and Patrick Robinson replaces him, leaving the team without a proven nickel CB. The Saints are hoping '11's #3DC Johnny Patrick, who only had a handful of snaps on defense as a rookie will be able to step in. The other starting CB is Jabari Greer who had a pretty good year with 18 pbu. NO has a very formidable safety duo with SS Harper and FS Malcolm Jenkins who were 1st and 3rd in tackles LY. The depth behind them is very poor, as while Jonathon Amaya is one of the better special teams players in the NFL, it is very uncertain if he could step up in case of injury. Isa Abdul-Quddus is also a dedicated special teamer, who needs to learn the system to contribute. Look for Spagnuolo's system to increase the number of int made by this unit in 2012 but it is the nature of the Saints' play style to give up yards in the air.

SPECIAL TEAMS - The Saints' special teams in 2011 began and ended with Darren Sproles. Sproles tallied 1,383 yards via KR/PR as he returned 69 of the 71 returns LY. NO's 10.1 PR avg was 17th while their KR avg was 3rd, improving in both areas vs 2010. Thomas Morstead was 2nd in the NFL with a 43.1 net avg and while he only had 13 punts inside the 20 (29th) that was due to the offense being in good field position. NO put K Garrett Hartley on IR LY after he injured himself late in preseason but he will compete with John Kasay for the #1 K in 2012. While Kasay scored 147 pts in '11, he was only my #21 rated kicker as he was just 7 of 13 from 40+. The PR coverage unit improved by almost 6 ypp (28th to 5th). However, the Saints still had major issues on KR's as after allowing 24.1 ypc (24th) in '10 they dipped to 28th with 25.8 incl giving up a 108 yd td. Sproles' return ability will keep NO near my top 10 (#8 LY) but it will be up to the coverage units, to get any better than that.

Head Coach - Sean Payton, 7th year - SUSP UNTIL 4/16/13
Payton has been the HC since 2006 and NO has finished 6th or better in total offense (12th or better in ppg) each season. Since 2000, every QB with Payton has passed for 3,000 yds.

Co-Interim HC's:

Offensive Coordinator - Pete Carmichael, 4th yr, 7th overall
Carmichael will be NO's interim HC until Vitt finishes serving his suspension. Carmichael joined NO as the QB coach from 2006-'08 and was promoted to OC in 2009. NO has finished 4th or better in pass offense the last 6 years. He will share HC duties for the first 6 games this season.

LB Coach/Assistant HC - Joe Vitt, 7th year - SUSP 1st 6
Vitt will take over as interim HC after serving a 6 game suspension. He has been in the NFL since 1982 serving mainly as a LB coach. He was an interim HC with STL for 11 games in 2005 going 4-7. He will be NO's interim HC after serving a 6 game NFL suspension to start the season.

QB Coach - Joe Lombardi, 6th year
An offensive asst in 2007-'08, Lombardi was named the QB coach in 2009. He was a defensive asst in ATL during 2006. NO has avg'd 38 passing td's the L3Y in his tenure.

RB Coach - Bret Ingalls, 4th year
Ingalls served as the OL cch at N'western from '06-'08 before arriving here. NO has finished 6th in rushing twice in the L3Y.

WR Coach - Henry Ellard, 1st year
Ellard, a 16Y NFL vet and 3x Pro Bowler, served as the WR cch at STL from '03-'08 and was the NYJ WR cch the L3Y.

TE Coach - Terry Malone, 7th year
Prior to NO, Malone was the Michigan OC/TE coach from 1997-2005. He came here in '06 and has been part of developing Graham into one of the NFL's elite TE's.

OL Coach - Aaron Kromer, 5th year
Kromer was the Bucs' OL coach from 2006-'07 before taking over as NO's RB coach in 2008. He took over the Saints' OL duties in 2009 with the unit allowing 70 total sacks the L3Y.

Defensive Coordinator - Steve Spagnuolo, 1st year
Spagnuolo has 13 years in the NFL with 3 as a HC with STL. He was with the Eagles from 1999-'00 as a defensive asst, DB coach (2001-'03) and LB coach (2004-'06). The Giants finished 7th and 5th in total defense when he was their DC in 2007-'08.

DL Coach - Bill Johnson, 4th year
After five years as the Falcons DL coach, Johnson served with the Broncos in the same capacity for 2007-'08. NO has allowed eleven 100 yd rushers over the L3Y.

Secondary Coach - Ken Flajole, 1st year
Flajole has 14 years in the NFL as a coach, having spent '09-'11 as the Rams' DC. He was the Panthers' LB coach from '03-'08 after spending 4 years with SEA working with LB's and DB's.

Special Teams Coach - Greg McMahon, 7th year
McMahon took over the ST's in 2008 after being a ST asst for 2006-'07. NO's #8 ranking for 2011 was their best in our rankings since 2004 (#5).

OVERVIEW - NO followed up their SB victory with an 11-5 record in 2010 and limped into the playoffs only to be sent home by SEA. NO had massive cap restrictions and at one point only had 47 players on an 80 man offseason roster. GM Mickey Loomis made a bold move to trade back into the 1st RD for Mark Ingram in the draft and managed to retain all but one projected starter for 2011. NO's best move was signing Darren Sproles at an affordable price and he was arguably the best FA pickup of the year. NO's offensive focus on getting the run game back into the mix helped the Saints shatter several records in 2011. Drew Brees broke Dan Marino's single season passing record, Jimmy Graham broke Kellen Winslow Sr's record for receiving yards by a TE (only to be bested by Rob Gronkowski by 17 yds) and the Saints set the NFL record for total net yardage and first downs while winning all 8 home games for the 1st time in franchise history. Unlike 2010, NO took a very aggressive approach in preparing for the playoffs despite being locked into the #3 seed. After dispatching DET at home they had 5 TO's at SF but Brees gave the defense a 3 pt lead with 97 seconds left but they couldn't hold on. Gregg Williams departed for STL after his contract expired but NO found itself in the spotlight due to bounty hunting allegations. The Commissioner's office was very heavy handed with the punishment as Sean Payton will miss all of 2012, GM Mickey Loomis is suspended 8 games, asst HC Joe Vitt 6 games and the team was stripped of a 2nd RD DC this year and a conditional high pick for 2013. Payton is arguably the best offensive play caller in the league and NO has already latched onto an "us vs world" mentality. Complicating matters has been the Drew Brees contract situation but his holdout is a bit overblown as the offense will have more time than LY to get up to speed. OC Pete Carmichael will gameplan the offense and call plays, but Brees knows the playbook just as well as Payton and once he arrives there shouldn't be an issue. Steve Spagnuolo is an excellent hire and brings a more controlled and sound aspect to an already talented defense. NO is still tight against cap due to Brees' situation but the LB unit is actually upgraded compared to LY while the secondary has some depth questions. In 2002 the NFL moved to four 4 team divisions and the Saints landed in the South. There have been 9 defending South champs in 9 years meaning not even once has a team won B2B South titles. Last year there were SEVEN different division winners out of the 10 divisions. The Saints are team turmoil with the bounty gate will lack stability at the coaching spot which will have an interim HC to an interim HC. We were very high on the Saints last year as we pegged them #2 in the NFC and if not for the turnovers in the Semi final round they would have been hosting the title game! We also saw how they struggled in a game and a half with Peyton not calling the plays and can't imagine with all the suspensions that the offense will run on that same elite level. If there were no distractions or suspensions and Peyton was still the play caller we might have them a favorite to get to the Super Bowl but all that and the South history may have them not winning the division.

TAMPA BAY BUCCANEERS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - Josh Freeman was viewed as one of the young rising stars after a strong 2010 season that had him finish with a 25-6 ratio. Even more impressive was the way he closed out the season passing for 216 ypg (64%) with a 15-1 ratio and a 7.6 ypa. One of the bigger QB's in the league, Freeman had been able to extend plays by either staying in the pocket and absorbing the hits or using his impressive mobility to escape the rush. The lockout was a major setback to his development as he was unable to improve in the film room and the practice field. Opposing DC's also locked onto his best plays and took them away from him. He wasn't helped by the overall lack of speed at RB or WR which were compounded by the injuries both units sustained. Freeman was held to under 200 yds passing in six gms (178 ypg, 56%, 3-10 ratio) with only 2 gms of 300 yds passing. The Bucs were quite predictable based on their personnel packages and D's adjusted accordingly. Freeman also had to cope with a bruised throwing shoulder and an injured thumb which hurt his mechanics. At the end of the year, he had taken a big step backwards and only Ryan Fitzpatrick had thrown for more int. After completing 48 passes of 20+ yds in '10, he only tallied 33 LY as his 6.5 ypa was 25th. The Bucs opted to let bkp Josh Johnson depart in FA, bringing in Dan Orlovsky who has more gm experience and is a more conventional QB for this offense. Freeman does have reasons to take a step forward this year as his new OC Mike Sullivan has a good reputation as an X's and O's type coach. Sullivan's NYG style off is quite different from the Gruden style West Coast and will make better use of Freeman's arm strength. The WR and RB units have also been improved as well giving the offense a much needed jolt of versatility. Just how much the Buccaneers improve this year will be determined by how fast Freeman absorbs the new offense.

RUNNING BACKS - The diminishing skills of Cadillac Williams in '10 opened the door for UFA LeGarrette Blount to take over as the #1 RB. Signed off the Titans practice squad six days before the start of the season, he ended the year as the 2nd rookie UFA to rush for 1,000 yds in the NFL. He also tied for 6th with 10 rushes for 20+ yds. A big power back, Blount led the NFL in broken tkls and gave the offense some needed toughness. However, he was a major liability in the receiving game struggling with protection assignments and only caught 5 passes. As a pure rusher, Blount is a formidable player with seven 100 yd efforts in the 25 gms he's taken the field. His 781 yds LY was partially due to the Bucs having to abandon the run early in gms. With the offense in passing situations or in a 2:00 drill, Blount was taken off the field and D's had a better grasp of what was coming. Kregg Lumpkin was expected to be the 3rd down back and while he was decent in pass protection he struggled in the other aspects and departed for SEA this offssn. TB moved back into the end of the 1st RD of TY's draft to net Doug Martin to takeover as the #1 RB. While not a burner, Martin is faster and more well rounded, hauling in 56 rec's in a pass oriented offense in his L2Y at Boise. TB added even more speed in the draft with Michael Smith (4.33) who should easily win the #3 spot here and has the ability to contribute on ST's. Mossis Madu came off the practice squad in the 2H of LY to help out due to inj's and will be hard pressed to make the team. FB/HB Earnest Graham sustained a torn Achilles mid-2011 and isn't expected to return. That leaves Erik Lorig, a converted DE, at the FB spot who rarely touches the ball. Blount still has a role on the team especially in short-ydg situations but the top back is clearly Martin and this will be an RB by committee approach in '12.

RECEIVERS - The Bucs decided to go young at the WR spot in '10 drafting Arrelious Benn in the 2nd round and Mike Williams in the 4th to grow into the offense with Josh Freeman. Despite the additions the Bucs didn't have much in the way of spd as both players are basically possession types who aren't known for stretching the field. Williams had a surprising rookie year, leading all rookies in rec's (65) and yds (964) while setting a team record with 11 rec td's. Benn struggled to make the adjustment to the next level and then sustained a huge setback when he tore his ACL at the end of the season. With the lockout in place he wasn't able to rehab with the team and didn't recover fully from the inj for '11. Kellen Winslow had led the team in rec's for 3 straight yrs but defenses stayed keyed on him and he wasn't quite as dynamic LY. Most of Freeman's interceptions were on passes targeted to Winslow. Williams ypc dropped from 14.8 to 11.9 LY and former HC Raheem Morris noted his lack of work ethic after the ssn. After being conservative in FA for '11, the Bucs went big in '12 going after the top FA WR in Vincent Jackson. Jackson immediately adds a proven deep threat to the roster while upgrading the #2 spot as Williams will get more single coverages. Jackson had 13 rec of 20+ yds LY compared to 15 for all of TB's WR's (Winslow had 3). TB made a surprising move by trading Winslow to SEA for a late '13 DC and picking up the fading Dallas Clark. While Clark does add a needed veteran presence to the position, he doesn't have much left in the tank and is only a passing downs option at this point. The Bucs will have a good battle for the #4 WR spot as Dezmon Briscoe is another possession type with good route running skills while Preston Parker finished 3rd LY with 554 yds. Luke Stocker failed to make an impression as a rookie largely due to the lockout as well as a lingering knee injury. A flex TE, Stocker should get more chances in '12 with a full offssn to develop. Vincent Jackson is a huge addition to this unit but the overall success will depend on Williams maturing and don't be surprised if Benn overtakes him for the #2 spot.

OFFENSIVE LINE - TB's dedication to being a power rushing team in '10 meshed well with the talents of the OL as together with Blount they set a franchise record averaging 4.6 ypc. Despite the wk 1 starting lineup missing 27 gms due to inj's/performance they allowed a very respectable 30 sks (10th) or 1 every 16.5 pass att (13th). A large part of this was due to Freeman's size and mobility though they did play 11 gms vs a D ranked 18 or lower in sks. TB returned all 5 st'rs from '10 as well as their best depth players in Jeremy Zuttah and James Lee. TB dropped to 30th in rushing gaining 34 ypg less than 2010 largely due to big 1H deficits forcing them to abandon the run. They earned a respectable 4.2 ypc and the 32 sks all'd were 9th with 1 every 18.4 att (11th). Lee started 9 at RT in place of Jeremy Trueblood who had a down '10 but rebounded in camp to re-claim his spot. Trueblood didn't have an especially good '11 but the Bucs believe that he'll improve with the adjustments in coaching. The interior of the OL faded badly as while C Jeff Faine played his highest number of gms s/'08, his body started to wear out. TB let him go TY and are shifting Jeremy Zuttah, who played for Greg Schiano at Rutgers, to C to accelerate the installation of the new system. TB will remain a power rushing team and upgraded the line with one of the top OG's in the NFL in NO's Carl Nicks at LG. Nicks' mauling style and agility will give the line some much needed attitude and athleticism. Davin Joseph is an above average RG while Donald Penn is a very talented but somewhat inconsistent LT. The depth is average as Ted Larsen can play all 3 interior spots but they are hoping Jamon Meredith can take over as the swing OT. TB is in great shape on the left side of the OL with Nicks and Penn which should raise the overall effectiveness of the line in '12.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - The Bucs have made having a potent DL the focal point of the team by investing heavily here with DC's but have gotten little in return. Inj's have wreaked havoc on this young unit which has crippled its development. 2012 has been no different as DE Da'Quan Bowers, who overcame a serious knee injury in college to start the L/6 at LDE, is out indefinitely (Achilles). This puts Michael Bennett back into the starters role opposite Adrian Clayborn. Bennett had an excellent season despite just 4 sks as he just missed on a slew of others. Clayborn's 7.5 sks tied for 4th best amongst rookies LY which is impressive in any season but even more so for one coming off a lockout. The anchor of the DL is Gerald McCoy who has a huge impact on the D as shown by the fact the Bucs are 3-10 without him in the lineup. TB allowed 61 ypg more rush (+.76 ypc) with McCoy out of the lineup after wk 6 LY. Inj's in both of his seasons are the only thing that have held him back and he has been on the same level as DET's Ndamakong Suh when healthy. Brian Price has had a rough start to his career due to inj and was slow to get into the flow at the beginning of '11. He is 100% healthy and won't have to shoulder the brunt of the workload as the depth at DT is improved. TB brought in Gary Gibson who is another former Rutgers player along with Amobi Okoye to bolster the depth. Okoye is a solid run stuffing DT that is ok in bringing an interior pass rush. Gibson also has starting experience and has system familiarity so expect a heavy rotation on the inside. Holdovers Roy Miller and Frank Okam are decent run stuffers but they may be used as trade bait later. Daniel Te'o-Nesheim didn't pan out with PHI but will get to be the situational pass rusher with Bowers' inj. The depth at DT is a strength here so expect TB to be better vs the run but the lack of depth along the edge means that the Bucs string of not having a DL with double digit sacks goes to 7Y.

LINEBACKERS - TB made a major mistake by letting Barrett Ruud, who held down the MLB spot for 4 straight seasons, go in FA LY. They tried to replace a player who led the tm in tkls for 4Y and made all the defensive calls, with a rookie that had no exposure to the system due to the lockout. The athletic Mason Foster also wasn't helped by injuries on the DL and was blasted in the run game. He's in a better situation with a full offssn for '12 but the Bucs are now installing another rookie, Lavonte David at WLB. David is expected to be a full 3 down st'r and an upgrade in coverage over the departed Geno Hayes. SLB Quincy Black returns and the Bucs are positive that he'll hold up better vs the run this season. TB has decent depth for the SLB/MLB spots as Dekoda Watson and Adam Hayward can both man those spots but they are thin at the WLB position which is crucial here. TB only forced 31 drives of 3&out LY (30th) and while they should be a bit better TY don't expect a huge leap due to youth and a change of scheme.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - The Bucs #21 ranking in pass D for '11 was their lowest since coming in 26th back in '95. After giving up just 4 more passing td's vs int's in '10 (9th) they gave up 16 more passing td's LY (30th) with their 30-14 ratio. While some of this was due to the DL collapsing late in the yr, the secondary simply failed to play with the discipline they had in years prior. Depth and bad safety play were the major culprits in the Bucs not finishing in the top 10 for pass D for the 2nd time in 11Y. Aqib Talib has top-tier CB talent but gets unfocused at times during gms and has a huge off-field issue hanging over him going into '12. CB Ronde Barber has clearly lost a step and wasn't as good a tkl'r as his stats suggest LY. He did fare pretty well as a nickel CB which is where he'll see most of his time TY and Greg Schiano had him practicing at S in the May OTA's. TB is shifting to a more man coverage D TY and brought in Eric Wright who had a pair of mediocre yrs with DET and CLE as a #1 CB to start opposite Talib. Wright is better suited as a #2 and is an upgrade at the position. EJ Biggers had a good '10 with a decent start to '11 but gave up 7 pass td's in the 2H of the yr. The safety play was just awful LY as SS Sean Jones whiffed on tkls and TB had 3 different st'rs at FS. LY TB brought back Tanard Jackson who had been very solid prior to his susp but his tackling was so poor when he ret'd that Schiano quickly released him in the offssn. The Bucs made Mark Barron just the 3rd DB ever taken in the 1st round by the franchise. Barron is a direct counter to the star TE's in the NFC South and an attempt to bolster the Bucs #32 run D as only IND gave up more rush FD's. The Bucs are hoping that Cody Grimm has recovered from LY's knee inj to retake the FS spot. The depth isn't very good here as bkp SS's Larry Asante and Ahmad Black are ST's quality players and there is no proven depth at FS. Look for TB to watch the waiver wire for help in camp and to finish with a better but below average finish in pass D in '12.

SPECIAL TEAMS - TB has finished 14th or better in our special teams rankings in 3 of the L4Y. LY the Bucs had great coverage units finishing 8th in PR avg (7.4) and 9th in KR avg (22.8) but got next to nothing out of the return units which finished 25th in PR's (8.0) and 26th in KR's (22.3). TB will give rookie Michael Smith and his 4.33 spd every chance to win the #1 return specialist role to improve that aspect in camp. P Michael Koenen had an excellent year avg over 40 yds net punting (8th) with a very good 24-3 In20/TB ratio. Connor Barth has connected for over 80% of his FG's in 3 of the L4Y and hit 13 of 14 from 40+ yds LY finishing as our 4th best kicker. TB has interesting talent but STC Bob Ligashesky doesn't have a strong track record in our rankings so after TB finished 6th LY expect a middle of the pack finish in this transitional year.

Head Coach - Greg Schiano, 1st year
Schiano was a defensive asst for CHI from 1996-'98 before taking over as the DC for the Miami Hurricanes for 1999-'00. He led Rutgers as the HC from 2000-'11 with a 68-67 record leading them to 6 of their 7 all-time bowls.

Offensive Coordinator - Mike Sullivan, 1st year
Sullivan was the Giants WR coach from 2004-'09 after working as an assistant coach with JAX in 2002-'03. He was the NYG QB coach the last 2 years.

QB Coach - Ron Turner, 1st year
Turner was the OC for CHI from 1993-'96 and 2005-'09. In between he was the HC for Illinois with a 35-57 record. He was IND's WR coach in '10 and QB coach there LY.

RB Coach - Earnest Byner, 1st year
Byner has been a RB coach s/'04 serving with WAS, TEN and JAX. He has produced seven 1,200 yd rushers in his tenure.

WR Coach - PJ Fleck, 1st year
Starting in 2007, Fleck operated as N Illinois WR coach for 3Y. In 2010 he joined Rutgers as their WR coach under Schiano. He turned down the NIU OC post to come to TB in 2012.

TE Coach - Brian Angelichio, 1st year
Angelichio is another carry over from LY's Rutgers staff where he cch'd TE's. Prior to that, he was the TE cch at Pitt ('07-'10).

OL Coach - Bob Bostad, 1st year
Bostad was the run game coordinator at Wisconsin from 2006-'11. He served as their TE coach in 2006-'07 and the OL coach from 2008-'11.

Defensive Coordinator - Bill Sheridan, 1st year
Sheridan was the LB coach for the NYG from 2005-08 being promoted to DC in 2009. Starting in '10, he served as the LB coach for the Dolphins for 2 seasons.

DL Coach - Randy Melvin, 1st year
Melvin was the DL coach for NE from 2000-'01 and CLE from 2005-'08. He served as Rutgers DL coach from 2002-'04 and in '10. Melvin was with the BC Lions in 2011, helping take them to the Grey Cup Championship.

LB Coach - Bob Fraser, 1st year
Fraser comes over after 5 seasons at Rutgers where he worked as the DC/DL coach (2011) and LB coach (2007-'10). Prior to that he was an asst to the HC there from 1998-'05.

DB Coach - Ron Cooper, 1st year
Cooper has 29 seasons as a collegiate coach. He was LSU's secondary coach from 2009-'11 and has 2 tours as a DC and three as a HC (E Mich, Louisville, Alabama A&M).

Special Teams Coordinator - Bob Ligashesky, 1st year
Ligashesky has been a STC for JAX, STL, PIT and OAK though not serving longer than 2 seasons with any team. In 2010 he was the Broncos TE coach before going to OAK.

OVERVIEW - The Bucs went 10-6 in '10 and were billed as one of the more promising teams for '11. However, their record came via a very easy schedule and several 4Q comebacks were needed. One of the youngest teams entering LY, the lockout was a serious blow to their development. TB also opted not to spend any money in FA to bring in veterans to help lead the team which would prove to be a major mistake. They were 3-1 after a MNF win over an exhausted Manning-less Colts team travelling after giving their best vs PIT the previous week. TB was then blown out 48-3 at SF and collapsed after their bye week. They lost their L/9 gms by a 36-17 avg score while giving up an avg of 181 ypg rushing (5.3). The Bucs lack of experience was front and center in the 1H of gms where they were outgained by 87 ypg and outscored by 10.9 ppg. Opposing teams then had a much easier time with halftime adjustments. The Glazer's cleaned house after the season and were turned down by 4 former NFL HC's for the job. A recommendation by Bill Belichick saw Greg Schiano named the HC in a surprising move. Schiano's staff was the last completed for TY but he did an admirable job. Only 4 coaches lack NFL experience and his coordinators have lots of experience in key roles. Unlike the previous regime there are no carry overs. The recent struggles by the team has led to only 2 home sellouts making their home field advantage virtually non-existent. Imitation is the most sincere form of flattery and the Bucs are installing their versions of the Giants offense and D here. OC Mike Sullivan will rely on the run game this season but the addition of Vincent Jackson gives the team a legit #1 WR. DC Bill Sheridan has a big challenge ahead of him as while the DL is young and talented, it has under performed the last 2 seasons. The LB's are unsettled and the secondary is shifting from zone to man coverage with the possibility that their best CB will be suspended. Bob Ligashesky is an interesting hire as STC as his units have finished 21st or worse in our rankings 5 of his 7 seasons though he did lead OAK to 8th LY. Tampa was a poster boy for the article on page 14 and that article has them bouncing back up this year and I agree. The NFC South has had a different team win the title each year of its existence and they could be a surprise team this year.

CAROLINA PANTHERS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - The Panthers attempted to bridge the gap between the Jake Delhomme era and the future with Matt Moore until Jimmy Clausen was ready to take over in 2010. Clausen was woefully unprepared for the task finishing with a 1-9 record as a starter having arguably the worst statistical season for a rookie QB since Alex Smith set the bar in 2005. At the end of the year CAR, as a team, had totalled 2,635 yds passing which was less than 24 QB's had earned that year. Even more embarrassing was the 9-21 ratio which helped lead them land the #1 pick in the 2011 Draft. The Panthers looked past all the off the field issues and went with Cam Newton who instantly re-energized the franchise. Newton gave himself the edge in the lockout by learning the Chargers-style offense by working with former Panther QB Chris Weinke. OC Rod Chudzinski also shrewdly incorporated a good chunk of plays from Auburn's playbook which Newton ran so well. Newton stunned the NFL by passing for over 400 yds in his 1st two games and quite simply had the best statistical season by a rookie QB ever. He became the 1st rookie QB to pass for over 4,000 yds in a season and one of five with 20 td passes earning Off Rookie of the Year honors. Newton's size and mobility allowed him to extend plays and then throw a deep strike for a big gain. Defenses did catch up to him at the end of the year by treating him like Roethlisberger and keeping him in the pocket which forced him to go thru his progressions. Derek Anderson returns as the #2 giving the team a veteran backup that the coaching staff is comfortable with. Anderson's presence kept Jimmy Clausen on the scout team and there is a chance the former #2DC will not be on the roster come wk 1 due to his cap number. The Panthers have their all important franchise QB who has the intangibles to lead the team forward. The only question will be how he reacts in his sophomore year as the receiving talent is about the same as 2011 and DC's will be better prepared to deal with the ultra-athletic QB.

RUNNING BACKS - The Panthers have been a run oriented team since John Fox took over and have been ahead of the curve with their stout RB tandem of DeAngelo Williams and Jonathan Stewart. CAR powered its way to 3rd in the league in rushing in 2008 (152.3 ypg, 4.8) and 2009 (156.1, 4.1) and their drop to 13th in 2010 (115.4, 4.3) was largely due to a lack of talent at QB/WR combined with a foot injury to Williams. The Panthers ground attack surged in 2011 thanks to the added dimension of Newton who tallied 29% of the teams rushing yards. While CAR lacked a 1,000 yard rusher for the 2nd straight season, Williams and Stewart actually had quality seasons fulfilling their roles. Williams saw most of his action on 1st and 2nd downs wearing down defenses and setting the tone. Stewart was the primary 3rd Dn back and converted 8 FD's on 14 rush attempts and held up fairly well in pass protection. While the duo combined for just a single 100 yard rush effort between the two of them in 2011, they were also good downfield blockers on QB draws. The Panthers traded Mike Goodson to the Raiders after he failed to earn the trust of the new offensive staff due to ball security issues. Mike Tolbert who did quite well with the Chargers as their #2 RB in 2010-2011 comes in as a hybrid RB/FB to give the offense a bit more diversity. Tolbert is more than capable of starting for a decent stretch but with the depth ahead of him he won't get as many touches. Richie Brockel is a blocking FB/TE who aside from a trick play or two isn't a threat with the ball. Josh Vaughan is a practice squad/special teams back who still has developmental work ahead of him. With the offense going thru Newton in more ways than one it will be tough for Williams and Stewart to log top-tier stats but this is still a top 10 unit in terms of talent and execution.

RECEIVERS - It's quite telling that in four of the past five seasons Steve Smith has tallied more receiving yards than the second and third placed finishers combined. Since 2007, Smith has logged 20 games of 100 yds receiving with all of the other Panthers combining to tally just 3. In 2011 Smith had his best season since 2008 and his 17.6 ypc was 6th best for receivers with over 50 catches with 29 rec's of 20+ yds. On one hand it proves his dominance on the field but on the other, it also shows just how little help he's received. That said, the Panthers may finally have their best possession WR as Brandon LaFell took a big step up in 2011. LaFell showed steady growth as a possession WR surpassing Legedu Naanee who was allowed to leave after the season. David Gettis followed up his decent rookie season with a torn ACL in camp LY and he'll battle former Charger Seyi Ajirotutu for the #3 WR spot in camp. CAR traded away a 2013 3rd RD DC for Joe Adams who will be brought along slowly and will see time on special teams. Prior to the ssn CAR jumped at the chance to acquire flex TE Greg Olsen to complement Jeremy Shockey as Rob Chudzinski made the 2 TE offense his base package. Not only did this help Newton's development immensely, the addition of a quality receiving TE added some much needed wrinkles which were missing in the previous regime's playbook. Half of Olsen's rec's were for 1st Dns though in four games vs 3-4 defenses he totalled just 8 rec's (16.4). CAR did let Shockey depart as his contract expired but the Panthers are open to bringing him back at a lower number early in training camp. Gary Barnidge is another receiving TE that the Panthers hope will take a step up in his development for 2012. Ben Hartsock is a good but not great blocking TE who will have to battle Richie Brockel for a spot in camp. Overall, this is an average unit which is steadily improving its depth on a run oriented team.

OFFENSIVE LINE - The one constant for the Panthers in recent years despite the issues surrounding the team has been the steady play of the OL. For five straight seasons the OL has paved the way for 1,800 yards rushing with 35 or fewer sacks in seven of the last eight seasons. In 2010, CAR expected to return 4 starters but RT Jeff Otah would eventually be lost for the season due to a knee injury in training camp. While the unit gave up 50 sacks (1 every 9.7 att's 31st) in 2010 that was largely due to ineffective QB play and a lack of receiving weapons. For the 3rd straight year the unit had a ypc of 4.3 or better as the unit remained a formidable force up front. Despite the new coaching staff, the Panthers brought all 5 starters (including Otah) forward and had the same unit for 4 of the 1st 5 games. CAR led the NFL with a 5.4 ypc and improved to 1 sack every 14.8 att's (15th). While Otah would once again land on IR, the team only had 3 different starting lineups fielding the same unit for 11 games. Rookie UFA Byron Bell started 12 games at RT but after 11 penalties he looks to be a swing OT at this point. Geoff Hangartner returns to RG with a 3 year deal and the team replaced Travelle Wharton with a better pass protector in IND's Mike Pollak. Jordan Gross remains one of the top LT's in the league while Ryan Kalil is one of the top 5 C in the NFL. 2nd RD DC Amini Silatolu is a DII prospect who will use 2012 to adjust to the NFL and compete for the LG spot next season. CAR also acquired the athletic Bruce Campbell who has worked out at RG/RT with OAK but hasn't seen much on-field action. Also adding depth is Garry Williams who may compete for time at RT if Otah injures himself in his contract season. Despite the change at LG the Panthers have the makings of another formidable unit especially if Otah can finally stay healthy.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - For as surprisingly good as the Panthers offense was in 2011, the defense was remarkably bad. The 131 ypg rushing (4.6) allowed (#25 NFL) was the 3rd worst mark in franchise history. Things started badly when Ron Edwards who was being counted on to solidify the DL went down with a triceps injury in TC. That forced rookies Terrell McClain and Sione Fua into action and they were mauled at the POA as CAR finished 29th with 5.0 ypc allowed up the middle. Both McClain and Fua landed on IR with 4 games left in the season as CAR allowed 9 games of 120+ yds rushing on the year. The Panthers raised a lot of eyebrows when they gave Charles Johnson a huge extension after he posted his 1st double digit sack season in 2010. Despite the lack of help around him, Johnson made 19.5 plays behind the LOS in 2011 and still brought a good deal of pressure. He had more than the next two Panthers combined in sacks which shows that the rest of the line needs to step it up. Greg Hardy did fairly well until mid-season when he wore out and the Panthers failed to bring in veteran depth in the offseason. Rookie Frank Alexander looks to be a situational pass rusher for a team that tied for 25th in sacks (1 sack every 15.8 att's) though Rivera noted that the unit would be better simply by being healthy. This unit has a lot of work ahead of it for 2012 and look for the team to watch the waiver wire to improve the depth.

LINEBACKERS - The LB's were expected to be the strength of the Panthers defense but they were mauled by injuries. The Panthers fielded 8 different starting lineups until they started the same unit for the final 6 games. Jon Beason tore his left Achilles in the season opener costing the team a much needed veteran leader. CAR put Dan Connor in the middle for 3 games before sliding him out to WLB to replace Thomas Davis who landed on IR with his 3rd ACL tear. James Anderson started all 16 games and set the franchise record for tackles largely due to the defense's inability to get off the field (28th). CAR pressed career special teamer Jordan Senn into action at WLB for the final 6 games and he was exposed badly in coverage. The Panthers stuck with their board and took Luke Kuechly in the draft to give them the Dan Morgan type of impact player they've sorely needed. Kuechly can start in all 3 spots at LB and will enter camp at WLB. Rivera noted that he may not end up there depending on how well Beason is recovered from his injury. Connor departed for DAL in FA and the depth here is uncertain as Antwan Applewhite failed to earn significant snaps in 2011 and Jason Williams was just a situational WLB. The uncertain health status of Beason and the addition of a rookie into the starting lineup makes this a below average unit entering the season and anything they get from Davis is a bonus.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - The Panthers allowed more yards passing in 2011 than in any other year in franchise history. In addition to giving up 247 ypg passing their 64.9% completion rate allowed was 3rd worst while their 8.4 ypa was the most in the league. Part of this was due by a lack of consistent pressure but the secondary also lacked the depth to compete. Chris Gamble bounced back from a tough 2010 to have a good season logging 3 int's. Aside from Gamble though the CB play wasn't very impressive as Captain Munnerlyn was supposed to take the next step after being a reliable nickel CB in his 1st 2 seasons. Munnerlyn (5-8 186) was outmatched by the bigger WR's as opposing QB's went after him. CAR picked up former Patriot Darius Butler after NE waived him just prior to the season and he did a decent job as the nickel CB. It would not be a surprise if Butler wins the #2 CB job in camp as the Panthers are shifting out of the Cover-2 and into a more man system this season. CAR lacks experienced depth beyond that as Brandon Hogan and RJ Stanford have played a combined 15 games together. It is also worth noting that outside of Gamble only rookie 5th RD DC Josh Norman is taller than 5-10. Charles Godfrey has grown into a solid SS who can hold his own in pass coverage. FS Sherrod Martin was exposed in coverage in mid-season against mid-level QB's and failed to make an impact. CAR brought in former Raven Haruki Nakamura who will challenge for the #1 FS spot in camp. CAR fell from #12 to #30 in defensive QBR and it's tough to see much improvement here as even though they have a full offseason to get used to the defense this unit lacks proven talent outside of Chris Gamble.

SPECIAL TEAMS - It's not that surprising that the Panthers special teams have been among the NFL's worst recently as injuries, poor drafting and heavy roster changes have crippled the unit. This is where the lockout arguably had its biggest toll LY as the team struggled to deal with new schemes, rookies trying to assimilate and a new kicker all in a condensed time frame. It wasn't much of a surprise that the team finished dead last in our special teams rankings for the 2nd time in 3 years. CAR's coverage units were hammered coming in 30th in PR's (13.3) and KR's (27.0). While CAR was avg on KR's (23.7 16th) the PR units were woeful (5.5, 30th) as Armanti Edwards was ineffective. Rookie Joe Adams won the inaugural Johnny "The Jet" Rodgers Award last year for the nation's best return specialist. Adams should easily come away with the PR duties and will likely team with Kealoha Pilares for KR work. After a 34.1 net avg and just 19 punts inside the 20, Jason Baker was released and Brad Nortman was taken in the draft meaning there will be growing pains. Olindo Mare had a down year hitting 79% of his FG's but he still has a solid leg for KO's (53 TB's). Look for another bottom level finish for the Panthers as they work to improve their depth.

Head Coach - Ron Rivera, 2nd year
Rivera was a 2nd RD DC of CHI with a 9 year career as a Bear LB. He was the Bears DC from 2004-'06 then operated as SD's LB coach in 2007. He took over as their DC mid-2008 thru 2010 and had 3 top 6 finishes for his defenses.

Offensive Coordinator - Rob Chudzinski, 2nd year
Chudzinski is a career TE coach who was CLE's OC in 2007-'08 finishing 8th and 31st in total offense. He was SD's TE coach for 2009-'10 and has fielded a TE with 1000 yds 3 times.

Quarterbacks - Mike Shula, 2nd year
After being the Alabama HC from 2003-'06, Shula was the JAX QB coach from 2007-'10 finishing 17th, 15th, 19th and 27th in passing offense. CAR was 13th in 2011 under Shula.

Running Backs - John Settle, 2nd year
Settle was the RB coach for Fresno St from 1998-'05 with six 1,000 yd rushers. He followed that serving as the RB coach for Wisconsin from 2006-'10 before coming to CAR.

Wide Receivers - Fred Graves, 2nd year
After 26 years of college experience, Graves worked as the BUF (2001-'03), CLE (2004), DET (2005) and TEN WR coach (2007-'10) before coming to CAR.

Tight Ends - Pete Hoener, 2nd year
Hoener previously was the 49ers TE cch from '05-'10. He also was CHI's OL cch in '04 and ARZ's OL cch in '03.

Offensive Line - John Matsko, 2nd year
An NFL OL coach since 1992, Matsko was the Rams OL coach from 1999-'05, KC's from 2006-'07 before being the Ravens OL coach in 2008-'10. CAR improved from 50 sacks allowed (30th) to 35 (15th) in 2011.

Defensive Coordinator - Sean McDermott, 2nd year
McDermott has 12 years with PHI on his resume having coached LB/DB's from 1999-'08 before being their DC in 2009-'10. He worked with Rivera at PHI from 1999-'03.

Defensive Line - Eric Washington, 2nd year
Washington was a Bears defensive asst/asst DL coach in 2008-'09 before taking over as the DL coach in 2010. In his 1st year as DL coach with CAR the DL had 27 of the team's 31 sks (87%).

Linebackers - Warren Belin, 2nd year
Belin had 20 years experience as a college LB/STC including Vanderbilt's LB coach from 2002-'09 and Georgia in 2010.

Secondary Coach - Steve Wilks, 1st year
Prior to working as the Chargers secondary coach from 2009-'11, Wilks was the Bears secondary coach in 2006-'08. He also has 11 years in the college ranks.

Special Teams Coordinator - Brian Murphy, 2nd year
After 3 years as an asst special teams coach with MIN, Murphy took over full-time in 2009. He finished 14th and 26th in our rankings there before CAR's #32 finish in 2011.

OVERVIEW - Owner Jerry Richardson set in motion the Panthers rebuilding process in 2010 by clearing out a lot of the higher priced veterans prior to the season. As a result CAR earned the #1 pick in the draft and the team had a surge of energy it hadn't seen since they went to the Super Bowl in the 2003 season. Richardson also brought in Chargers DC Ron Rivera to be the HC with Rob Chudzinski to be the OC. Unlike in SD, Rivera knew he lacked roster depth initially and is taking the long-term approach. His coaching style is much more aggressive than the previous regime and the collapse of the defense in 2011 (32nd with just 26 three & out drives forced) was spurred largely by a slew of injuries to the front 7. CAR gave up 28 or more points an NFL high 9 times in 2011 as they only beat one team with a winning record which was HOU with rookie TJ Yates at the helm. DC Sean McDermott is banking on getting his injured players back to improve his defense but still has an overall lack of depth to contend with. Chudzinski did an excellent job of tailoring the offense to suit Newton's strengths as they improved from 61 drives of 3 & out (32nd) to 38 in 2011 (13th). Chudzinski's foundation of being a TE coach served him very well as he injected a much needed aspect of versatility into the offense while giving Newton a quality safety release. Unlike the defense though, last year's #7 offense was quite healthy as they had just 14 games lost by starters with 12 by RT Jeff Otah. Newton's development was amazing as the 1 year full time starter from Auburn logged almost all of the team's snaps for 2011. The early portion of the 2012 schedule is tough as they face 3 playoff caliber teams in the first 4 weeks and come off their bye to face DAL and CHI. The good news is that they only have 1 long-distance game and it's vs an AFC foe in Rivera's old team SD. Carolina's 6 wins last year came vs teams that finished with 2, 4, 4, 5 & 5 wins and a Houston team that had clinched a playoff berth and was starting a rookie. They were +12.1 ypg with the #7 offense and #28 defense. They figure to be vastly upgraded at LB with the return of injured LB's and the addition of Kuechly. No doubt this years team is stronger especially if Newton stays healthy all year again. Unfortunately, the schedule is a LOT tougher (#22 to #6). They have HG's vs NO, NYG, DAL, DEN, and ATL and last year had 6 games vs teams that won 5 or less games and this year only three. There are some nice factors pointing upwards (see division forecast) and Newton will have them full of confidence but the playoffs may be too large a step.

In '08 SF sustained their 6th straight losing season. They were -17 in TO's in '08 and I mentioned in '09 that if the Turnovers = Turnaround formula worked, they would break their streak of losing seasons, which they did at 8-8. They did have the #15 defense in the NFL as HC Singletary streamlined the defense to a conservative 3-4. However, SF had its 7th OC in 7 yrs. In '10 they were everyone's preseason favorite to win the weak West. They opened 0-5 for the first time since 1979 however, got back to 5-8 and were one gm out in the West but lost at SD and at STL and Singletary was fired. SF was #24 on off and #13 on def. LY I liked the hire of Harbaugh as HC but the lockout put him behind in installing schemes. If Harbaugh had a normal offseason I probably would have picked them alone in first place as opposed to tied for first. Harbaugh became the first ever coach to inherit a losing team and take them to DD wins in his first year. The team started to buy into Harbaugh with a big comeback vs PHI. Their 3 close road wins over CIN, PHI and DET helped them open 7-1 and they then beat NYG at home to open 9-1. They finished 13-3 with the #2 seed in the NFC thanks to playing the #29 schedule. In the playoffs they were outgained by the Saints 472-407 but won 36-32 and then lost a heartbreaker at home to the Giants in OT due to two special tms TO's. SF was just #26 on off but #4 on D but just +2.7 ypg (more like an 8-8 team). They had 4 net close wins, were +28 in TO's, had a gain of 7 wins over the previous year, had a def YPP of 21.5 and an off YPP of 13.1 and only had 16 starts lost to injury. All of those factors point towards a weaker record in 2012 but SF will battle for that #1 seed in the NFL playing in the weak NFC West.

The Cards had only had one winning season from 1984 to '07. In '08 I gave them a good shot at winning the weak NFC West and at 8-5 they clinched the div title and a rare playoff spot. They were caught celebrating their success vs MIN and were unprepared for NE in the snow (lost by a combined 82-21), so they only finished 9-7. ARZ was an underdog to 11-5 Atlanta, on the road to 12-4 Carolina and at home vs 9-6-1 PHI, but won all 3 to get to their first ever Super Bowl. They outgained Pittsburgh 407-292 but came up short in the big game. Arizona did have just 18 sts lost to injury. In '09 I forecasted 10 wins and they finished 10-6, their most wins in a regular season this decade. ARZ did manage to avoid the Super Bowl jinx as SEVEN of the previous 8 Super Bowl losers did not even make the playoffs the next year. They got past GB at home 51-45 in OT but were thrashed by NO, 45-14. ARZ was actually outgained on the year (#14 off, #20 def) and lost QB Warner to retirement after the season. In 2010 the Cardinals were the worst team in the NFL statistically (#31 off, #29 def) as they benefitted from 12 return td's, one short of the NFL record but were just 5-11. They traded for QB Kolb in 2011 and 12 of their 16 foes had losing records from '10! They opened the year at just 1-6 as Kolb was injured. Skelton led them to 6 wins and ARZ went 7-2 down the stretch incl B2B wins over DAL and SF to finish 8-8. They were #19 on off and #18 on def with SIX 4Q comeback wins. I like the young talent they have on D and the skill players surrounding their QB. ARZ was -13 in TO's LY. Pointing down is a tougher schedule (#25 to #12), a gain of 3 net wins LY (5 to 8), were actually -30.6 ypg despite their 8-8 record and had 3 net close wins and a def YPP of 16.3. ARZ surpassed my expectations LY and if they can get solid QB play will do so again this year.

CenturyLink Field has one of the best home edges in the NFL and Mike Holmgren won 4 straight West Titles from '03 to '07 including a SB appearance. With a tougher schedule the Seahawks fell to 4-12 in his final year in 2008. Jim Mora Jr opened 2009 5-7 when they lost their last 4 with 9 of their 11 losses coming by DD's. In '10 they had a new HC for a 2nd straight yr with Pete Carroll coming in and had a solid offseason "A" rating in my post-draft grades. They opened 6-6 but would drop the next 3. That left them 6-9, but amazingly a win over STL in a playoff type of atmosphere made them the 1st team in NFL history to win their division with a losing record. They then stunned the defending SB champs at home in the Wild Card round but were whipped by the Bears. LY QB Hasselbeck departed but Carroll had made the playoffs in 3 of his 5 yrs as an NFL HC. They were just #28 on off and #27 on def in '10 being out gained by 71 ypg despite advancing to the 2nd round of the playoffs! SEA had a massive change of personnel for the 2nd straight year (see team write-up) but their defense played far beyond my expectations and was #9 in the NFL. Most teams with losing records struggle vs teams with a winning records. You cannot say that about Seattle as they knocked of the SB Champ NYG, BAL and solid teams like PHI and CHI. Seattle looks stronger in Carroll's 3rd season but they are still in the bottom 3rd of the NFL talent-wise. I am not sold on Flynn as a Franchise QB based on one start LY, like some others are. Also Seattle has FOUR long flights to the EST and have home games vs NE, GB, DAL, SF and NYJ and figure to be a dog in as many as 10 games. Carroll will have them achieving more than the sum of their parts again.

The Rams were a combined 3-29 in '08 & '09 (#29 O, #29 D). In '10 there were a lot of factors pointing towards improvement as they were -13 in TO's, had 3 net close losses and their final 4 gms of '09 were started by former Div II rookie QB Keith Null, who was the scout tm QB for the first 12. In '10 STL had a rookie #1 overall DC QB in Bradford playing behind a still shaky O-line. They were 1 of 2 teams without a 1st RD DC WR or 1,000 yard rec on the roster but they took on the #31 schedule. STL improved to 7-8 and had the West title game in CenturyLink Field but had just 68 yds in the 2H and lost by 10. They were #26 on off and #19 on def. Last year the one number that proved to be the biggest concern was the strength of schedule as it went from #31 to #1!! They opened 0-6 playing PHI, NYG, BAL, GB and DAL. They somehow upset NO but that would be the high point of a 2-14 season where they were just #31 on offense and #22 on defense. STL has not had a lot of success with injuries. They have remained relatively unscathed just once in recent years and naturally that was the only year in which they won more than 3 games (7 in '10). This year they are the most improved team in the key indicator category with many factors in their favor. The Rams had 4 net close losses, were -74.8 ypg (more indicative of a 6.5 win tm), were -5 net wins from '10 (7 to 2), had a def YPP of 14.1 and an off YPP of 23.5. They had an amazing 91 starts lost to injury and the schedule also goes from #1 to #17 (softer). I think Fisher will get the most out of this team like he always does. LY I rated CIN as my #1 Most Improved Team in the indicators and the Bengals made it to the playoffs and STL has that title this year. Home games vs GB, NE, NYJ and SF means they will have to snag some road wins to finish higher in the West.

SAN FRANCISCO 49ers

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - After six tough seasons of injuries and criticism, Alex Smith in year 7 helped lead the 49ers to their first playoff season since 2002. While his football intellect has never been in doubt, he didn't have the greatest of relationships with the two previous defensive oriented coaching staffs. Smith struggled to adjust to the constant changes with the playbook and his development was set back by the fact he had only played a full 16 gms once, back in 2006. Despite the lockout and not being under contract, Smith received a new playbook in the offseason getting a much needed confidence boost from new HC Jim Harbaugh. The rookie HC who was a former NFL QB, also didn't have the smoothest career. Harbaugh responded by stripping the offense down to put their troubled QB in the best position to succeed. They also hedged their bets by drafting the athletic Colin Kaepernick in the 2nd Rd. Kaepernick however lacked experience in an NFL oriented offense. After running a Wing-T in high school and the Pistol offense at Nevada, he was a developmental player as a rookie. Relying on their strong run game and elite defense, Smith had a career year in virtually every category, highlighted by his first 3,000+ yd season and a 17-5 ratio. He also piloted an offense which tied the all time NFL record for fewest TO's (10). Including the playoffs, in his last 22 starts he's avg'd 203 ypg (60.4%) with a 27-6 ratio with a 10-2 record at home. He also logged five 4Q comeback wins with four coming on the road in 2011. In the playoff win over the Saints, Smith became the first QB to lead 2 lead-changing td drives in the final 3:00. Despite the career year however, he failed to tally a 300 yd passing game (2 of 290+). After SF did their due diligence in the chase for Peyton Manning, Smith returned on a 2 year contract which allows the team to move on at little cost after 2013. SF added Josh Johnson who Harbaugh coached at the University of San Diego when Johnson had an incredible 43-1 ratio as a Sr! Johnson brings a good mix of athleticism and experience having been with TB for three seasons with 5 career starts. Smith is not going to put up elite passing numbers but he's more than capable of playing to the strengths of the team.

RUNNING BACKS - From 2006-09, Frank Gore touched the ball 1,250 times and there was growing concern that the game was taking its' toll physically. While he had 4 straight 1,000+ yd seasons in that span it was clear that he needed some help. 2010 was looking to be another strong season for Gore with four 100 yd gms but a hip injury put him on IR for the final 5 gms. Once the offense gelled after the first 3 gms of 2011, Gore erupted averaging 127 ypg (6.3) in his next 5 gms. However, knee and ankle injuries limited him to just 54 ypg (3.5) over the second half of the season. Gore did become the 49ers all-time leading rusher in 2011 despite those injuries. His injuries though had a ripple effect on the offense as the lack of power in the ground game crippled the team on 3rd downs as they converted just 29.4% (31st) and tied for 23rd with 49 three-and-out drives. Kendall Hunter is an elusive 3rd down back with quite a bit of upside. However, he's not suited to be a between-the-tackles type of RB who can handle 20+ touches. The 49ers addressed that problem in the offseason by signing FA Brandon Jacobs from the NYG to be the short-yardage and goal-line back. Jacobs also has the ability to handle a 2-3 game stretch as the feature back but he doesn't offer much as an outlet receiver (46 ttl rec, 8.8 in L/4 years). Bruce Miller is a converted LB who won the #1 FB role in camp last year and displayed some ability in the pass game. Rock Cartwright is a solid special teams player. The 49ers drafted Oregon's speedy LaMichael James, who Harbaugh was very familiar with from his days at Stanford coaching against him. James has a gear the other backs lack and at 5'8" 194 is often compared to Darren Sproles. This is a stacked position that will remain the focus of the 49ers offense while taking advantage of an expanded passing game in 2012.

RECEIVERS - Attrition took its toll on San Francisco in the playoffs as vs the Saints they only had four active WR's with two really being dedicated special teams players. Despite leading the team with career highs in receptions (72) and receiving yards (874) in 2011, Michael Crabtree failed to become the Niners' first 1,000 yd receiver since 2003 (Terrell Owens). Crabtree re-injured his foot in players-only workouts and missed his 3rd straight training camp. This set him further behind in the new system and he continued to struggle to develop chemistry with Alex Smith. Unable to fully practice all year, Crabtree has yet to become the top flight go-to receiver he was expected to be as the 10th overall pick in 2009. He has had just three 100 yd gms in his career despite working alongside star TE Vernon Davis who, after back-to-back 900+ yd seasons, dipped to under 800 yds receiving. After scoring 20 td's over the previous two seasons defenses simply rolled coverage to the flex-TE to limit his impact. Davis' 26 receiving td's over the past 3 seasons is 2nd only to Rob Gronkowski and he has seven 100 yd receiving gms in his career. Davis admitted after the season that it took him longer than expected to adjust to Harbaugh's offense but in his final 5 gms including playoffs, he totalled 28 rec (19.1) with 100 yd gms vs STL and in the playoffs vs NO and NYG. From there though the SF receiving game dropped off dramatically. The 49ers brought in Braylon Edwards but he sustained a knee injury early in the year and was released late in the season after failing to hit 50 yds in any of the 9 gms he played. Josh Morgan was slated for a big role but landed on IR with a broken leg after 5 gms and has departed for WAS. Kyle Williams saw limited duty as a slot WR but became infamous for his two muffed punts in the NFC Championship game. With Crabtree and Davis drawing the majority of the attention, #2 TE Delanie Walker did a nice job of working the short game. SF made headlines this offseason when it signed Randy Moss to a one-year incentive laden contract. Harbaugh himself worked out Moss, who sat out 2011 after a turbulent 2010 season in which he had a falling out with the Patriots, was traded to the Vikings, released and finished the season with the Titans. If he still has his speed, then Moss is obviously a boon to the deep game but Smith has never been known to go big on a consistent basis. The 49ers also added NYG WR Mario Manningham. Despite a very impressive catch in the Super Bowl, Manningham is considered a possession receiver who had avg'd 763 yds receiving over the past 3 years. In the draft the Niners added the versatile AJ Jenkins who can line up at any of the 3 WR spots and has deep threat speed. Davis is clearly the star of this unit and will remain so, while Harbaugh says that Crabtree has the best hands of any WR he has seen. The big question for this unit is whether the additions of Moss and Manningham will help Crabtree finally break the 1,000 yd barrier or if they will stunt his growth.

OFFENSIVE LINE - Prior to 2011 the last time the 49ers rushed for 2,000 yards as a team was in 2006 when they finished 6th overall in the NFL (136 ypg, 5.0). The 49ers struggled to find the right pieces over the next 4 years finishing no better than 19th in 2010. SF finished 26th or worse in sacks allowed from 2006-10 and had big hopes that 2010 1st RD DC's Mike Iupati and Anthony Davis would fully mature into impact starters in 2011. The team had to scramble prior to training camp as David Baas bolted for the Giants when FA finally opened up. The 49ers were able to sign former Saints C Jonathan Goodwin just before camp opened up. Goodwin made all the calls and adjustments for the OL in 2011 and gave the unit a steadying hand. LT Joe Staley had a rough time with the injury bug in 2009-10 but started all 16 gm in 2011 and earned his first Pro Bowl bid. Staley is known as a strong run blocker and gave up 6 sacks LY. Chilo Rachal lost his RG spot after 3 gms and has since signed with CHI. Adam Snyder took over the rest of the way but departed for ARZ in FA. Alex Boone, who handled himself well in limited duty in 2011 will be tried at the spot along with 2011 draftees

Daniel Kilgore and Mike Person. Another contender will be 4th RD DC Joe Looney, a 4 year starter at Wake Forest who faced Harbaugh's Cardinal team twice. Looney suffered a foot injury in Senior Bowl practices which caused him to sit out the initial rookie minicamp. SF also added Jason Slowey who is a small school OT who played C at the initial rookie minicamp. While SF rebounded to 8th in rush offense last year they have struggled to protect the passer allowing an avg of 47.6 sacks the L5Y (1 for every 10.5 pass att). Smith quite often opted for the sack in 2011, but the hope this season is that he will be able to get it to one of his weapons instead.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - The 49ers were primed for a big year defensively in 2010 as they returned all of the starters in the front 7 and were in the 4th year of a solid defensive system. They finished 6th in rush defense holding teams to just 97 ypg (3.5) while allowing just 9 rushing td's. There was some concern after the lockout about new DC Vic Fangio tinkering with success and the departure of NT Aubrayo Franklin in FA. Fangio simply put the best players on the field as Isaac Sopoaga was shifted from DE to NT to anchor the defense. To keep him fresh he was rotated with Ricky Jean-Francois, who is being groomed for the position full-time in the future. Ray McDonald won the starting DE spot in camp and had a very good year as he took advantage of the attention afforded to Justin Smith. Smith is one of the best 3-4 DE's in the NFL and is more than capable vs the run and getting into the backfield logging at least 6 sacks in each of his 4 seasons with the 49ers. He leads all NFL DL having started 177 straight gms and was voted 1st team All-Pro as a DT and 2nd Tm All-Pro as a DE for 2011. Smith was often the lead DL paving the way for OLB/DE Aldon Smith to get into the backfield on pass downs (#1 NFL rookie with 14 sk). The 49ers went 36 straight gms without allowing a 100 yd rusher and were the first team in NFL history to hold their foes without a rushing td in each of their first 14 gms LY (#1, 77 ypg). That said the depth here is a bit thin as none of the backups listed outside of Jean-Francois have taken any significant snaps. This should remain one of the NFL's elite DL.

LINEBACKERS - In last year's magazine we noted that the 49ers had the best LB unit in the NFC West in 2009 and 2010. In 2011, they fielded the best LB unit in the entire NFL despite letting 2 starters leave in FA and getting a slew of snaps out of a rookie. The proof is in the awards as both Patrick Willis and NaVorro Bowman won 1st Tm All-Pro selections for their play and Aldon Smith was a serious contender for Defensive ROY. In a 3-4 the target goal is for the pass rushing OLB's to tally 20 sacks and the combo of Smith and Ahmad Brooks had 21. ILB's Bowman and Willis were #1 and #2 on the team in tackles despite Willis sitting out the final 3 gms with a hamstring injury. Bowman was raw in 2010 but was taught the ropes by Takeo Spikes who departed after the season. Bowman has excellent range and athleticism although he is still learning the game. Ten times either Bowman or Willis logged double digit tackles during the regular season. After pulling a mild surprise by drafting Aldon Smith with the 7th overall pick, the 49ers worked him in as a situational pass rusher. Deftly avoiding putting the rookie into pass coverage situations, Smith responded by breaking the 49ers rookie sack record with 14. He spent quite a bit of his time lined up close to Justin Smith who cleared the way for him so it'll be interesting to see how opposing offenses respond in 2012. Ahmad Brooks had his first season as a full-time starter for the 49ers and did well taking advantage of the attention being focused elsewhere. The backups include special teams ace Tavares Gooden and Larry Grant, who did a quality job of filling in for Willis at the end of the season. The 49ers attempted to bolster the depth through the draft by taking Darius Fleming who played OLB in a 3-4 at Notre Dame and pass rush specialist Cam Johnson, but Fleming tore his ACL during rookie minicamp. SF forced 52 three-and-outs (5th) in 2011 largely due to the LB corps and they are the NFL's best unit in 2012.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - While the 49ers wrapped up 2009 21st in pass defense they showed some promise with a 14-18 ratio hinting they were better than their ranking. They were expected to be one of the league's most improved units in 2010 but were derailed by chemistry issues. In the end, the #1 SS (Michael Lewis) forced his way off the team, a highly drafted SS (Taylor Mays) turned out to be a poor fit for the scheme and their star CB (Nate Clements) got a bit too old for man-to-man coverage. The result was a #24 finish for the pass defense with a 25-15 ratio and the -10 mark was 21st in the league. SF traded away Mays and allowed Clements to depart via FA and put more of an emphasis on coverage ability vs run support. Essentially the entire secondary was revamped by competition via new DC Vic Fangio. Carlos Rogers was signed via FA during the post-lockout scramble and had a career year as his 6 int were equal to what he tallied his previous 5 years with WAS. Tarell Brown beat out 2 year starter Shawntae Spencer in camp after being limited to sub-packages in the previous defense. Instead of a traditional "in the box" safety approach, the 49ers went with a more interchangeable Fs/SS system that made the most of Donte Whitner's skills. Whitner took over as the leader of the secondary and allowed Dashon Goldson to be very aggressive in coverage. His 6 int's were 2nd only to Eric Weddle for safeties LY and he was a relentless hitter as well. He was given the franchise player tag for 2012. The Niners addressed their lack of depth in the secondary by taking Trenton Robinson. Although Robinson played S at Michigan St, the team believes he can also play CB and will be productive on ST. SF didn't allow a 300 yd passing game on the year holding 10 teams to under 200 yd en route to the #16 pass defense. However, their +3 ratio was 3rd and they tied for 12th with 48 passes of 20+ yd allowed and overall were #5 in def QBR.

SPECIAL TEAMS

K David Akers (U)	KR Ted Ginn Jr (1)

SPECIAL TEAMS - It's a shame that the lasting image of the NFL's best special teams unit in 2011 is a pair of muffed punts by a backup in the NFC Championship game. Among the many upgrades for the 49ers last year was the addition of STC Brad Seely as well as former Eagles K David Akers. Seely reinforced his stellar reputation as one of the elite special teams coaches in the NFL last season. SF trimmed their opposing start drive on KO's by 8.5 yd (2nd). Akers set NFL records for FG's made (44) and attempted (52) thanks in part to SF's #30 red-zone offense. He has finished 7th or better in our kicker ratings in each of the L4Y. Andy Lee also had a record setting year as his 44.0 net avg set the NFL single season mark. 36% of his punts landed inside the 20. Led by Ted Ginn Jr, the 49ers return units were stellar as their KR unit was 1st (27.2) and their PR 5th (12.4) in the league. Ginn can be counted on to win 1 game a year via special teams such as he did in 2011's season opener with a KR and PR for td. His absence in the NFC Championship game due to a knee injury perhaps cost the 49ers their first Super Bowl trip since 1994. The coverage units were above average coming in 13th on KR's (23.1) and 11th on PR (8.1). With the return of all the key components and the coaching staff committed to keeping dedicated special teamers on the roster look for SF to have another top 5 unit in 2012.

Head Coach - Jim Harbaugh, 2nd year
Harbaugh played QB for CHI, IND, BAL, SD and CAR in his 15 yr NFL career. After leading the Univ of San Diego to a combined 29-6 record from 2004-'06 he became Stanford's HC in 2007. In 2010 SU's 12-1 season was a school record and his final year there. Harbaugh won the 2011 NFL Coach of the Year award with a 13-3 record, SF's best since 1997.

Offensive Coordinator - Greg Roman, 2nd year
Roman has 15 years of experience as an NFL coach. He was tabbed as Stanford's run game coordinator in 2009 also working with the TE/OL. In his first year with SF, the team improved from 19.1 ppg scoring (24th) to 23.8 ppg (11th) on offense.

QB Coach - Geep Chryst, 2nd year
Chryst has served 19 yrs as an NFL coach with CHI, ARZ (2x) and CAR. SF's 2,936 yds passing LY was their lowest s/'07.

RB Coach - Tom Rathman, 4th year, 10th overall
Rathman played FB for 9 yrs with the 49ers. He acted as the 49ers RB coach from 1997-'02 then went onto the same role with the Lions ('03-'05) and Raiders ('06-'08). SF has finished 25th, 19th and 8th in rush offense since Rathman rejoined the team in 2009 with fifteen 100 yd rush efforts (5th).

WR Coach - John Morton, 2nd year
Morton was the WR's coach for USC from 2007-'10 also holding the passing game coordinator title for 3 of his 4 years. He has also been an offensive asst with OAK and NO.

TE Coach - Reggie Davis, 2nd year
Davis' previously coached under Harbaugh at Univ of San Diego and spent the '08-'10 seasons Oregon St's RB coach.

OL Coach - Mike Solari, 3rd year
Solari was a TE/asst OL coach for SF from 1992-'96. He was then the KC OL coach from 1997-2005 before being promoted to OC for 2006-'07 (16th & 31st). Solari was SEA's OL coach for the 2008-'09 seasons before rejoining SF with the OL allowing 44 sacks (26th) in 2010 and 41 in 2011 (25th).

Defensive Coordinator - Vic Fangio, 2nd year
Fangio has 12 years of experience as an NFL DC incl 8 under Dom Capers. He was the Ravens LB coach from 2006-'09 on defenses that finished 6th or better all 4 years. In 2010 he was Stanford's DC as they went from 90th to 21st in total def.

DL Coach - Jim Tomsula, 6th year
Tomsula has coached at every level in football for over 28 yrs. Since becoming SF's DL coach in '07 they have improved from 22nd to 8th to 1st LY in rush def. Tomsula was SF's interim HC for the final gm of '10 which he won 38-7.

Outside LB Coach - Jim Leavitt, 2nd year
Leavitt has over 30 years of experience in CFB most recently as the HC for South Florida from 1995-2009 exiting with a 95-57 record. Last season was his first in the NFL where he tutored OLB Aldon Smith to the 49ers rookie sack record.

Secondary Coach - Ed Donatell, 2nd year
Donatell was the GB DC from 2000-'03 followed by ATL's DC from 2004-'06. Donatell was DEN's secondary coach from 2009-'10 finishing 3rd (18-17 td/int) and 25th (26-10) in pass defense. His first SF unit finished #16 (20-23).

Special Teams/Asst HC - Brad Seely, 2nd year
Seely has 23 years of experience as an NFL STC and is one of the top 5 coaches in the NFL at his unit. He was NE's STC from 1999-2008 and CLE's in 2009-'10. Since 2000 he has logged 8 marks of 11th or better in our ST's rankings and was the 2009 and 2011 ST Coach of the Year.

OVERVIEW - Jim Harbaugh had arguably one of the best seasons for a rookie HC in NFL history. Harbaugh became just the 4th rookie head coach to win 13 gms and the first to do so with a team coming off a losing season. Leaving a successful college program with an elite QB prospect, he took over a team that hadn't made the playoffs s/'02. At the March 2011 meetings Harbaugh was flat out told by another coach (who was relieved after the season) that he had an impossible task ahead of him and to start planning for the 2012 Draft. While Harbaugh stripped the offense down to a collegiate level, he installed more variety due to more formations to keep DC's guessing. The offense was kept low risk to build confidence all-around while the defense led by DC Vic Fangio was set free to be as aggressive as it wanted. After the bye week the 49ers allowed just 13.2 ppg though the best/healthiest QB they faced was Eli Manning. While SF retains its top-notch defensive talent edge over the NFC West, the schedule gets much tougher as they potentially face 6 elite QB's. On offense, OC Greg Roman gets a bit of a pass as he was working with a depleted WR unit and Gore was dinged up in the middle of the season. The onus will be on stretching the field this year as after a full offseason the OL should be able to better hold up in pass protection. SF looks to be the strong favorite for the NFC West again but they do open the year with 3 road gms in the first 4 weeks with back-to-back gms vs GB and DET. The truly interesting part of the schedule is 4 road gms in 5 weeks starting Thanksgiving week which includes a road trip to NE followed by one to SEA which could have seeding implications. The offense is stronger and the defense (#4 LY) returns intact so this team is one of the preseason favorites to make it to the Super Bowl which was almost Harbaugh vs Harbaugh LY.

ARIZONA CARDINALS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - The Cardinals devoted the entire 2010 offseason to getting former #1 pick Matt Leinart ready to replace Kurt Warner. Leinart, however, didn't display the necessary level of leadership needed in TC and the Cards cut him opting to go with Derek Anderson instead. Anderson went a woeful 2-7 as a starter avg 192 ypg (51%) with a 6-8 ratio and 6.1 ypa. UFA rookie Max Hall started 3 but only avg'd 92 ypg (49%) with a 1-4 ratio. With both Hall and Anderson out with concussion issues, HC Ken Whisenhunt was forced to go with rookie 5th round DC John Skelton. Despite only having 8 snaps taken with the #1's, Skelton started the final 4 avg 154 ypg (48%) with a 2-2 ratio and a miniscule 5.1 ypa. Richard Bartel was brought in from the UFL as a practice QB. Anderson and Hall didn't return in 2011. As soon as the CBA was settled the Cardinals sent Dominique Rodgers-Cromartie and a 2nd round pick to PHI for Kevin Kolb. While Kolb was groomed for 4 years under Andy Reid, he only had a season's worth of pass attempts (319) into 2011 and there were also serious questions about whether he had the arm strength required to run the Whiz's offense. After 2 decent gms to open the season (280 ypg, 61%, 4-1 ratio), Kolb struggled with turf toe which affected the footwork required to operate the off. He avg'd 229 ypg (55.3%) with an 4-7 ratio in the next 5 as the Cards got off to a 1-6 start. After suffering a foot sprain vs BAL, he sat out 4 games with fan favorite Skelton going 3-1 vs a weaker schedule avg 188 ypg (50.4%) with a 4-7 ratio in his absence. Kolb ret'd to start the win over the Cowboys but went out early vs the 49ers (conc). Skelton played most of the way vs the 49ers avg 291 ypg (58.2%) with a 7-7 ratio and 3-1 record in the L/4. After a failed attempt to get into the Peyton Manning sweepstakes, ARZ picked up Kolb's $7 million 2012 option. The team also added San Diego St's Ryan Lindley in the 6th round as a developmental prospect. In LY's magazine we wrote that Kolb would likely need 2 yrs to adjust to ARZ's scheme after spending his career in a WCO system. Kolb has now had a full offseason with the organization, more weapons surrounding him and will start the ssn as the #1 QB. His arm strength and ability to hit the deep targets will determine how long he will remain the Cardinals' starter.

RUNNING BACKS - In Whisenhunt's 5Y as Arizona's HC the Cardinals had just twelve 100 yard rushing performances and finished 29th, 32nd, 28th, 32nd and 24th. In fact, LY was the first time since 2004 that the Cardinals avg'd over 100 rush ypg. After ARZ took Ryan Williams in the 2nd round of the draft, 2010's leading rusher Tim Hightower (736, 4.8) was dealt to WAS following the lockout. In the preseason however, Williams ruptured his patella tendon and was ruled out for the year leaving the primary backups to be special teams standout and 3rd down back LaRod Stephens-Howling along with Alfonso Smith. Prior to the opener ARZ picked up Chester Taylor after he was released by the Bears. The #1 RB unquestionably would be Beanie Wells whose first 2 seasons were marred by injuries and practice inconsistency as his numbers dipped from 793 yards (4.5) as a rookie in '09 to 397 yards (3.4) in '10. Wells began the season strongly rushing for more than 90 yds in each of the first 2 before sitting out SEA with a hamstring inj. Two games after a career-best 138 yd effort vs the Giants, Wells suffered a knee injury vs Pittsburgh which affected his play the rest of the year. The injury hampered his breakaway ability, but because Whisenhunt wasn't comfortable with any of the other backs, Wells received 72% of the RB carries on the year. From '08-'10 no ARZ back had more than 48% of the workload. Wells became the 3rd ever Card to rush for more than 200 yds in a gm when he put up an ARZ record 228 vs STL. He became the Cards' first 1,000 yd rusher since 2007 vs Cincinnati but Whisenhunt sat him out for the finale and Wells had surgery in January. This year the carries are expected to be divided more evenly between Wells and Williams, who should make a fine combo as long as they stay healthy.

RECEIVERS - From 2005-'09 the Cardinals had a pair of 1,000 yd receivers four times with the combination of Larry Fitzgerald and Anquan Boldin. Unwilling to give Boldin a big contract, ARZ traded him to BAL in 2010 leaving Fitzgerald as the primary target. Despite the loss of Boldin, a new QB and a preseason knee injury which forced him to miss most of camp, Fitzgerald would still finish 5th in the NFL in rec's (90) and 8th in rec yds (1137). LY Fitzgerald again had to deal with a new QB and losing his sidekick as 2010's #2 receiver Steve Breaston left for KC via FA. Fitzgerald solidified his status as one of the league's premiere weapons finishing #4 in rec yds (1411) even though his 80 rec's were his fewest since 2006. Early Doucet, whose 2009 and 2010 seasons were marred by injuries, was expected to step up along with Andre Roberts. Doucet, who is one of the league's most physical slot receivers, finished with comparable numbers to Breaston as the #2 target and was re-signed to a two year deal in the offseason. Roberts began the season slowly but the Cards stuck with him due to his blocking ability. Although he averaged 50 ypg the L/9, he will have to fight for his job after the addition of #1DC Michael Floyd. Floyd, with his 6'3" 225 frame and 4.47 speed, has the ability to beat press coverage and the speed to get down the field. He gives the Cardinals their first pair of big-play receivers since Boldin was shipped east. ARZ hadn't utilized the TE's in the passing game much under Whisenhunt but the acquisitions of Todd Heap and 3rd RD DC Rob Housler were supposed to change that in 2011. Heap's homecoming (went to Arizona St) was interrupted by injury as he missed 6 games and split snaps with Housler and blocking TE Jeff King who was acquired in FA from Carolina. Heap is 32 yrs old so there's a question of how much he has left in the tank. Housler missed 4 games with a groin injury but showed flashes at times. King stayed healthy and led the TE's with 3 td's. Health and QB and OL play will determine how strong this unit's numbers will be.

OFFENSIVE LINE - In 2009 the Cardinals' 4.1 ypc was their best since 2002 with just 26 sacks (1 in every 22.8 pass att, #6) allowed in Warner's final season. They opted to retool their entire O-line in 2010 anticipating that left-handed QB Leinart would be the starter. ARZ opened the season with only C Lyle Sendlein in the same spot he played in 2009. The results weren't pretty as the Cardinals finished 30th in sacks allowed (50) with 1 given up every 11.2 pass att's. ARZ did finish 11th in rush ypc (4.3), again their best since 2002. After the season the Cardinals only had perennial underachiever LT Levi Brown under contract. ARZ made a nice upgrade at the LG position with the acquisition of Daryn Colledge from the Packers. Deuce Lutui, a 2010 starter at RG, re-signed only after failing a physical (overweight) with the Bengals. With Lutui's conditioning issues being a major concern, Rex Hadnot earned the starting job. At RT Brandon Keith beat out Jeremy Bridges for the starting spot during camp, but the two essentially shared the job. Both are considered primarily run blockers which is perhaps part of the reason the Cards had a 4.2 ypc (t-#15) but allowed 54 sacks (#31) or 1 for every 9.8 att! The team parted ways with Keith, Hadnot and Lutui. They also released Brown before re-signing him at a lower cost. In FA they brought in Adam Snyder from San Fran to handle the RG spot although he's versatile enough that he could move over to either C or RT. After raising a few eyebrows around the league by taking WR Floyd with their 1st pick instead of an OT, they took 3 prospects in the later rounds. ARZ expects Bobby Massie to compete right away at the RT spot, a position he exclusively played at Ole Miss. Although Senio Kelemete played OT at Washington, he's expected to be a backup OG in the pros. Boise St All-American Nate Potter is considered a developmental player while he adds strength. This unit is still in a state of transition.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - ARZ took NT Dan Williams with its 1st pick in the 2010 draft and felt they had the makings of an excellent unit up front teaming him with Darnell Dockett and Calais Campbell. Surprisingly, ARZ finished a poor 30th vs the run (145 ypg, 4.4) as while Dockett excels when the Cardinals slide him out to rush DE when they are in a 4-3 package, he is a bit light for a 5 technique in their standard 3-4 and gets pushed around vs the run. Campbell dealt with an ankle sprain and teams adjusted protection to focus on him. Williams has the frame to be an effective run plugger but tailed off due to a lack of conditioning. ARZ also failed to develop any quality depth on the line. The Cards addressed the depth issue after the CBA by adding vets Nick Eason and Vonnie Holliday who along with rookie 6th RD DC David Carter gave the staff a full DL rotation. While Williams' weight was still an issue, his play vs the run was greatly improved in his 2nd year and Carter shared some of his snaps to keep him fresher. Williams broke his arm vs the 49ers and missed the last 6. Eason slid over to NT to end the year. Dockett played in his 3rd Pro Bowl while Campbell deserved consideration as well as he led the team in sacks. This year everyone returns with Holliday expected to re-sign during camp. Williams vowed to keep his weight down during the offseason and after the franchise tag was slapped on Campbell he signed a 5 year, $55 million contract. This is a talented defensive front.

LINEBACKERS - In the 3-4 defense the OLB's are counted on heavily to rush the passer but with age and injury issues affecting the unit in 2010, the group struggled to get consistent pressure on the QB as they totaled just 21 sacks (33 overall on defense, 18th in the NFL). Veterans Joey Porter and Clark Haggans were brought in for 2010 but they combined for just 10 sacks. While the OLB's had their share of struggles, the ILB spot looked solid with Paris Lenon (led team in tkls and tfl '10) and 2nd year stud Daryl Washington. The front office supplied the group with an infusion of young players heading into 2011. They drafted OLB Sam Acho and ILB Quan Sturdivant to add depth and 2nd year OLB O'Brien Schofield began to show promise. Porter opted to return after taking a pay cut while ILB Stewart Bradley came over from PHI to spell the 33 year old Lenon. While Porter began the season as the starter, Acho soon took over and showed some pass rush promise with 4 sacks in his first 5 starts. Schofield was impressive enough in splitting the job with Haggans that the Cards released the vet along with Porter after the season. In his 2nd season Washington was the star, leading the team in tkls while Lenon was the #2 tkl'r with Bradley backing them both up. After finishing 30th vs run and 23rd vs pass in 2010, they improved to 21st and 17th in '11. They also improved from 27.1 ppg allowed (#30) in 2010 to 21.8 (#16) LY. While the depth is a bit lacking, especially at OLB where Haggans could re-sign, this is a promising group.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - In 2010 this unit was #23 in pass defense allowing 228 ypg (61%) with a 22-17 ratio. The most consistent player was #2 tkl'r FS Kerry Rhodes who signed as a FA from the Jets. Mainstay SS Adrian Wilson dealt with a nagging injury for most of the season. Top CB Dominique Rodgers-Cromartie's unwillingness to get physical prevented the Cards from playing more bump-and-run coverage and ultimately made him trade bait for Kolb. The other CB, Greg Toler, struggled throughout. ARZ turned down a trade with DET for their 1st, 2nd and 4th round picks to draft Patrick Peterson, who was the top overall player on some boards with his S size and 4.3 speed, and he slid down to ARZ at #5. After Toler tore his ACL in the preseason, the starting job was Peterson's. While he dazzled immediately on ST's he was picked on early accumulating 12 pen's before Thanksgiving.

CB/PR Patrick Peterson

Peterson did show promise in coverage by season's end. The other CB spot was 2nd yr player AJ Jefferson's to start the season before he was benched for ex-Panther Richard Marshall. Rhodes missed 9 gms with a foot inj forcing NB Rashad Johnson to start. Despite a torn biceps which he played through the entire ssn, Wilson tallied 8.5 tfl. Despite the inj issues ARZ finished #17 vs the pass (231 ypg, 58.8%, 17-10). The Cards let Marshall, who they didn't consider a st'r, go in FA and signed veteran PIT CB William Gay and ATL S James Sanders for depth. They also added CB's Jamell Fleming (#3DC) and Justin Bethel (#6) in the draft. Fleming is expected to compete right away while YouTube star Bethel's amazing hops could get him ticketed for special teams duty. This unit is deeper, should maintain better health and Peterson could blossom into a potential star in his 2nd season in the league.

P	Dave Zastudil (4)	PR Patrick Peterson (1)

SPECIAL TEAMS - Despite their first ever Super Bowl appearance in 2008 this unit was the Cardinals' biggest weakness as they finished #31 in our special teams rankings. In 2009 P Ben Graham had an amazing 42 punts downed inside the 20 (#1 NFL) and the Cardinals moved all the way up to #3. ARZ earned our #4 ranking in '10 despite a changing of the guard at the kicker position with Jay Feely taking over for 7 year vet Neil Rackers. Feely hit 24-27 FG including all 14 of less than 40 yds. Graham had 29 punts inside the 20 (t-#8) but his 36.6 net was just #21. Stephens-Howling finished #4 in the NFL in KR (27.2) with 2 td's. PR Roberts (7.5 in '10) unsurprisingly lost his job to Peterson in 2011. Peterson (15.9) was the unit's star, tying an NFL record with 4 PR td's and setting a new rookie standard with 699 PR yds (#2 NFL history). The Cards also led the NFL with 5 blocked FG's with 3 from the 6'8" Campbell and 2 from Peterson. Stephens-Howling avg'd 23.8 on KR. Feely hit 19-24 FG including 6-9 from 40+. Graham was released by the Cards who signed ex-CLE P Dave Zastudil. While Zastudil finished #18 in avg (45.2), his 37.5 net was #29 and even though he was re-signed expect there to be some camp competition. Everyone is expected to return to a unit which finished #4 for the 2nd straight season and the Cards are a contender for the league's top spot in 2012.

Head Coach - Ken Whisenhunt, 6th year
Whisenhunt worked as a TE/STC for BAL, CLE, NYJ and PIT from '97-'03. In '04 he was promoted to OC for PIT and in his 3 years they ranked 16th, tied for 15th and 7th in offense. He received a 3 year extension at ARZ prior to '10 and has had a losing record in only 1 of his 5 seasons in Arizona.

Offensive Coordinator - Mike Miller, 2nd year, 6th overall
Whisenhunt consolidated the run/pass game duties to OC in '11. Miller was the passing game coordinator for '09-'10 after being the WR's coach from '07-'08 when the team had twenty 100 yard receiving efforts combined.

Asst HC/Offensive Line - Russ Grimm, 6th year
Grimm, a HOF OG for WAS ('81-'91), served as the WAS TE cch from '92-'96 before becoming an OL coach ('97-'00). He coached PIT OL from '00-'06 before joining ARZ in '07.

Quarterbacks - John McNulty, 1st year, 4th overall
McNulty spent his first 5 years ('98-'02) as an NFL coach with JAX before becoming the Cowboys' WR coach in '03. He worked as the WR coach at Rutgers in '04 then took over the OC/QB coach role for '05-'07. McNulty was the ARZ WR coach from '09-'11 before moving to QB coach this year.

Running Backs - Tommie Robinson, 3rd year
Robinson was the Miami, FL RB's coach from '07-'09. The 2010 season marked his 1st in the NFL as a position coach.

Wide Receivers - Frank Reich, 1st year
Reich QB'd BUF to the greatest comeback in NFL history in the '92 Playoffs the HOU Oilers. He spent the last 6 yrs with IND incl as a QB coach from '09-'10 and WR coach in '11.

Tight Ends - Freddie Kitchens, 6th year
After 6 yrs as a RB/TE coach in college, Kitchens was the Cowboys' TE cch in '06. In '07 he joined ARZ in the same role.

Defensive Coordinator - Ray Horton, 2nd year
After joining PIT as an asst DB coach in '04, Horton was promoted to full-time DB coach in '07. PIT had the #3, #1, #16 and #12 pass defenses in his tenure with a combined 71-64 ratio. In '11 he was named ARZ's DC improving the ppg allowed from 27.1 in '10 to 21.8 in his first season.

Defensive Line - Ron Aiken, 6th year
Aiken was the Iowa DL coach from '99-'06 before joining the Cardinals in '07. In his 5 yrs here, ARZ has all'd an avg of 118 ypg rush.

Linebackers - Matt Raich, 6th year
Raich was an offensive asst for Whisenhunt from '04-'06 with PIT. In '07 he joined ARZ and worked as a defensive asst specifically with the LB's. In '09, Raich was promoted to LB coach.

Outside Linebackers - Ryan Slowick, 4th year
Slowick, whose father Bob is a 19Y NFL coaching vet, spent 4Y with DEN as a def asst, ST's asst and DB's asst before arriving in ARZ in '09.

Defensive Backs - Louie Cioffi, 2nd year
Cioffi's speciality is working with safeties and he's had NFL stops with CIN and the NYJ where he was hired in '93 at just 20 yrs old.

Special Teams Coach - Kevin Spencer, 6th year
Spencer was the Colts' STC from '98-'01. From '02-'06 he ran PIT's ST's (top ranking #6 in '03). Spencer took over ARZ's ST's in '07 and the Cardinals finished #3 in '09 and #4 in each of the last 2 years.

OVERVIEW - After a rough '10 season adjusting to life without Warner and the first losing season in his tenure (5-11), Whisenhunt rolled the dice by trading his most established CB for QB Kolb. Kolb had less than a year of experience and serious questions remain about whether he has the arm strength necessary to run Whisenhunt's offense which relies on throwing the long ball accurately. Kolb's first season in the desert was marred by injuries as he missed 7 games behind an OL which allowed an alarming 54 sacks (#31). After Kolb led the Cardinals to a 1-6 start, Skelton came off the bench to win 5 of 4 before Kolb returned from inj. Kolb lasted 5 more quarters before Skelton was summoned for the rest of the season. Although Kolb finished with a better passer rating than Skelton (81.0 to 68.9), Skelton was 6-2 in the games he finished while Kolb was 2-6. Not helping matters was the team's -13 TO margin (#28) although Wells became the Cardinals' first 1,000 yard rusher since 2007. Defensively, Horton served his 1st season as the 3rd DC of the Whisenhunt era and D improved in nearly every area. Management has done a good job retooling the defense with burgeoning stars in DE Campbell, LB Washington and CB Peterson. The ST's remain among the league's best. Although the Cardinals have road games vs NE, GB, ATL, NYJ & SF, they play back-to-back road games just once all season. The Cards won their opener LY but then lost by 1, 3 and 4 to drop to 1-3. They got blown out by Minn and lost but played well vs PIT and BAL to drop to 1-6. They would win 6 of their next 7 including a road win at Philly and a home win vs SF and were back to 7-7. They were eliminated from the playoffs in a loss to Cincy but beat Seattle at home in the final to finish 2nd in the West at 8-8. Arizona did have SIX 4Q comebacks in their 8 wins and were just #31 on Off and #18 on Defense. Whisenhunt has had just one losing season in his tenure. With Michael Floyd added to Larry Fitzgerald, the key could be QB play. They made a play for Manning and he would have been a great fit here but they came up short. If Kolb can emerge into the QB the staff thinks he can be, this team is a playoff contender with a lot of young talent.

SEATTLE SEAHAWKS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - For the third season in a row the Seahawks stand a very good chance of having a different QB start on opening day. In 2010, Seattle opted not to trade Matt Hasselbeck and despite a 12-17 ratio and 5 fumbles, made the playoffs in a feeble NFC West. The team floated the prospect of bringing him back in 2011 but Hasselbeck signed with TEN after the lockout ended. Charlie Whitehurst was acquired from SD for a 3rd RD DC but did little to inspire the coaching staff. He didn't help his own cause by not even attempting to get the team together for OTA's. With former Vikings OC Darrell Bevell now running the offense here they opted to bring in Tarvaris Jackson. Jackson garnered favorable reviews from his teammates for leadership but in a transitioning offense he managed just 192 ypg (60%) with a 7-11 ratio and 6.91 ypa in his first 9 games. He played through a torn pectoral muscle sustained midseason which caused him to miss parts of 3 games. Over the final 6 games, the team shifted to a more run-oriented approach and Jackson only averaged 117 ypg (60%) but had a 7-2 ratio with 6.80 ypa. He did lead the team to upsets of NYG, BAL and PHI. Whitehurst filled in admirably vs NYG but struggled in starts vs CLE and CIN forcing the staff to go back to Jackson. Whitehurst rejoined SD in FA. After failing to become a serious contender in the Peyton Manning bidding, the Seahawks turned their attention to GB backup Matt Flynn. LY vs DET's #22 pass defense without its best defender in the secondary and preparing for its first playoff game since 1999, Flynn tallied 480 yards (70%) with a 6-1 ratio (10.9 ypa). Flynn signed a 3 year contract with a SEA team that runs an offense very similar offense to GB, but with a better run game along with a decent-when-healthy set of receivers. For an insurance policy the Seahawks added Russell Wilson in the draft. Wilson, who set the NCAA pass efficiency record in 2011 at Wisconsin, impressed HC Pete Carroll so much in the rookie mini-camp that he declared the QB battle wide open including 2nd year pro Josh Portis in the mix. Should Wilson win the job before the season begins he would be just the second 3rd RD DC in NFL history to start his 1st game (BUF's Joe Ferguson '73). Whoever wins the QB derby is likely to be healthier than Jackson was LY and unlike 2011, SEA appears to have a capable backup.

RUNNING BACKS - For most teams it would be tough to call finishing 21st in rushing a success but considering the state of the OL in 2011, the Seahawks did better than expected. From 2005-10, Seattle had tallied just thirteen 100 yard RB rushing performances due to ineffective play and an aging OL. Coming off an impressive 2010 playoff effort vs NO where he had 131 yards (6.9), Marshawn Lynch was tabbed as the #1 RB entering 2011. A power back with better than advertised speed, he started the season averaging just 48 ypg (4.1) in his first 5 games missing the sixth due to a back injury. After the bye and with mounting problems on the line he did well to double his rushing average to 97 ypg (4.3) with six 100 yard efforts. He broke SF's 36-game streak of not allowing a 100 yard rusher with 107 yd (5.1). Lynch has however only logged 1 year with more than 28 rec's which limits his versatility. Backups Justin Forsett and Leon Washington are smaller, quicker 3rd-down backs who aren't built for 20+ carries a game. Forsett lost snaps in that role to Washington as the season went on and wasn't re-signed. Washington is a decent pass blocker and remains a good special teams player. SEA brought in Kregg Lumpkin from TB in FA to challenge for the 3rd-down back role. Lumpkin is bigger and offers a bit more in the receiving game (41 rec LY). The Seahawks also drafted bruising Robert Turbin who is expected to be used as a short-yardage specialist and to spell Lynch. Lynch was rewarded as a core player by SEA in the offseason and another 1,200 yard season is within the realm of possibility.

RECEIVERS - The Seahawks went into 2011's camp with six WR's and lured TE Zach Miller from OAK to give them what appeared to be a potent pair of flex TE's. However, John Carlson landed on IR after injuring his shoulder in training camp and this year signed with MIN in the offseason. SEA needed a true #1 WR who has the speed to stretch the field and acquired Sidney Rice who had a good relationship with Bevell from their days in MIN. Rice essentially sat out 2010 due to a hip injury that wasn't helped by a contract dispute after tallying 1,300+ yards in 2009. Equipped with tons of talent and athleticism, Rice hasn't been able to stay on the field as he missed the first two and final 5 games of 2011 with injuries. He had offseason surgery on both of his shoulders which caused him to miss the offseason minicamps and also sustained his third concussion in 12 months making him a major injury risk. Rice still finished as the team's #2 rec with two 100 yard games and the Seahawks expect him to be fully healthy by July. Mike Williams had an impressive comeback season in 2010 after being out of the league for two years but fell back to earth in 2011. Sidelined by a concussion early on, Williams struggled to get into the flow and his production dropped from 65 to 18 receptions. When healthy he's a possession-type WR with a good size edge. SEA invested a 2nd RD DC on Golden Tate in 2010 with the intent that he'd be the team's slot WR. However, Tate was beaten out by UFA Doug Baldwin for the #3 WR role. Baldwin made the most out of the injury situation around him and became the 1st UFA rookie to lead a team in receptions and yards since 1960. Tate started to pick up the offense in December with 19 of his 35 receptions. Ben Obomanu took a good deal of Rice's snaps but was rattled by injuries. His role will be determined in camp. Miller's stat line plummeted in his first year here (60 rec in '10, 25 in '11) but the staff praised his ability as a blocking TE. He will likely be kept in to help the OL once again to start 2012 and the team pulled off a surprise trade for Kellen Winslow who re-opens the 2-TE threat. He is likely to see fewer snaps which will help extend the service life of his battered knees. Of the backup TE's Cameron Morrah is more of a receiver while Anthony McCoy is the better blocker. While SEA does have a lot talent in the receiving corps, they also have a lot of questions.

OFFENSIVE LINE - The OL's transition to Carroll's zone blocking scheme has been set back by a brutal stretch of injuries. They have started 32 different OL combinations in the last 4 years (seven in 2011) finishing 20th, 23rd, 16th and 29th in sacks allowed (50 LY). They began addressing their issues by spending back-to-back 1st RD DC's on the unit in '10 and '11. SEA also picked up former Raiders HC Tom Cable to take over as OL coach and when the team started 2011 they had a different player at 4 of the 5 positions. The very raw starting front five featured just 27 career starts in the opener with FA pickup Robert Gallery out with a sprained knee. That was the league's fewest since CAR's 27 starts in the 2nd game of their inaugural season ('95). SEA gave up 28 sacks in the first 7 games before the coaching staff shifted to a more run-oriented offense. The team averaged 135 ypg rush (4.1) over the final 9 games of the season despite losing 3 starters starting in mid-November. SEA led the NFL rushing to the left thanks to the power of 2010's #1DC LT Russell Okung, who kept improving as the season went on until he tore a pectoral muscle vs PHI and missed the L/4. 2011's #1DC RT James Carpenter was overwhelmed in his rookie season especially as a pass protector. There wasn't a lot the team could do to help him with fellow rookie John Moffitt next to him at RG also adjusting to NFL game speed at the same time. Both were sidelined the final 7 games with knee injuries and Carpenter may open the 2012 season on PUP list for the first six games. Breno Giacomini did a better-than-expected job of holding up at RT for 8 games and he's expected to open the season as the starter. Former #2 overall draft pick Gallery started 12 games at LG (missed 4 due to injury) but he was released by the Seahawks and picked up by NE in the offseason. The LG starter is expected to be Paul McQuistan who started 10 games combined between both OG spots and LT in 2011 due to injuries. Max Unger was a 1st year starter at C last season and should only improve with a full offseason. FA pickup Deuce Lutui is worth a low risk look as a backup OG who has starting experience. SEA was 16th with 45 drives of 3-and-out in 2011. They will likely be at the same level this season as in reality they only had their starting OL for half of last season and will be dealing with growing pains once again.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - After finishing 27th in total defense in 2010 the Seahawks received some criticism for not addressing this unit in the offseason. What most failed to realize is that SEA started 2010 allowing 78 ypg rushing (3.3) in the first 6 games and that DC Gus Bradley's scheme was entering its 3rd season. SEA was also getting the right side of its DL back from injury in Brandon Mebane and Red Bryant. At the end of the season the Seahawks earned their first top 10 defensive ranking (9th) since 1997. After allowing 25.4 ppg in 2010, SEA trimmed that to 19.7 ppg LY. They also did it with the second youngest defensive roster in the NFL. Bryant is a run-stuffing DE who is a leader on and off the field. When Mebane missed 4 games in 2010 SEA gave up an avg of 153 ypg (5.1). In 2011 Mebane anchored the #15 rush defense and was 5th in the NFL for tackles by an interior lineman. Ex-Cardinals DT Alan Branch excelled with his new team vs the run. Branch didn't add much as an interior pass rusher which is why the team added former Titan Jason Jones this offseason. After a quality year as a DT in 2010, Jones struggled when TEN moved him outside in '11. SEA is moving him back inside as Bradley places a premium on disrupting passing lanes. Chris Clemons is the team's best pass rusher with back-to-back 11 sack seasons. The 30 year old Clemons had 33% of the team's sack total and is a high risk to wear down soon as he was down at times to 240 lbs. The Seahawks addressed this issue by taking a player they felt was the best pure pass rusher in the draft in Bruce Irvin. Irvin may be a liability vs the run early in his career at 245 lbs but he was the fastest DL at the combine, running a 4.41 in the 40 and had 22.5 sk in his 2 seasons at West Virginia. The Seahawks then took athletic Florida DT Jaye Howard in the 4th round and Greg Scruggs in the 7th round to give Carroll more competition at this unit. This quality DL should be deeper in 2012.

LINEBACKERS - It wasn't that long ago the Seahawks had one of the best LB units in the NFL. SEA had a mutual parting with MLB Lofa Tatupu before the start of 2011's camp and shifted SLB David Hawthorne over. Bigger than Tatupu but not as fast, Hawthorne was a tackling machine and wrapped up the year as just the 5th player in team history with over 100 tackles for three straight years. However, the team opted not to re-sign him and Hawthorne departed for NO leaving a huge leadership void. Former 1st RD DC Aaron Curry never evolved past being a 2 down LB and was traded away mid-2011 to OAK. After starting the season opener at MLB, SEA shifted KJ Wright out to SLB to take advantage of his size and minimize his vulnerability in coverage. Wright did very well overall and the team is very high on his upside. Leroy Hill is a capable WLB but only signed a one year contract. SEA signed Barrett Ruud who is an ideal MLB for the team as he played well in nearly the same system with TB. He struggled in 2011 with TEN sitting out 7 games due to groin/knee injuries. Carroll admitted that Ruud will be eased into the defense in camp as he still isn't 100% healthy. Matt McCoy is the top backup LB but his niche is really on special teams. The Seahawks drafted Utah St's Bobby Wagner in the 2nd round as their MLB of the future. He may contribute right away on special teams along with 5th round selection Korey Toomer. If Ruud is healthy this unit may actually be upgraded despite losing the productive Hawthorne.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - After finishing 32nd, 30th and 27th in pass defense the 3 years prior to 2011 with a combined ratio of 83-34 over that time, the Seahawks decided to reboot their secondary axing 3 aging veterans. The lone holdover was FS Earl Thomas, a day-one rookie starter in 2010 who had an excellent season only allowing 3 td in coverage vs 5 int. SEA brought in three-time CFL All-Star Brandon Browner. Browner only allowed 1 td in the final 13 games and is locked into a starting spot for 2012. Former #1 CB Marcus Trufant lasted the first 4 games before being sidelined due to a back injury. Trufant was released in the offseason but signed a one year contract after his replacement Walter Thurmond had to go on IR after having a setback while recovering from a broken leg. Richard Sherman took over when Thurmond went down and the very aggressive rookie 5th RD DC had an impressive season. SEA fielded the same starting secondary over the final 10 games and allowed just 202 pass ypg (56%) with a 12-16 ratio. The Seahawks also look to have the most promising set of safeties in the NFC West in Kam Chancellor and Thomas. Both are excellent at run support though Chancellor is used closer to the line of scrimmage and matches up vs the TE's. Thomas has incredible range and is a big reason why SEA improved from 60 passes of 20+ yd (31st) in '10 to just 43 (tied 2nd) LY and was #6 in Def QBR. Roy Lewis will be the nickel CB until Thurmond is ready to take the field again. The Seahawks have the biggest starting secondary in the NFL which matches up well in the NFC West. Look for Thomas to become a consistent regular on the All-Pro teams soon.

SPECIAL TEAMS - There is a growing trend for rookie coaches to use their first season to bolster their special teams as its generally easier to find quality players and cheaper bargains. The ripple effect of putting their offense/defense in better spots during games is the primary goal. SEA did this in 2010 bringing in Leon Washington and upgrading their speed all around. They received our top special teams ranking for the year, which helped them snare a playoff spot. In 2011, the lockout set this unit back as many of the rookies and 2nd year players didn't get much practice time. It was glaring in the season opener vs SF as they allowed PR and KR td which cost them the game. They rapidly improved as the season went along and finished with a respectable #12 in our rankings for 2011. Washington remains an elite return specialist tying for 1st with 33 KR's of 20+ yd and tied for 5th with 7 PR's of 20+. SEA was 10th in KR (24.8) and PR (11.0) but their coverage units regressed coming in 22nd on PR's (11.5) and 29th on KR's (26.0). P Jon Ryan's net of 39.3 was 13th and he landed 36% of his punts in the 20 (13th). Steve Hauschka hit 83% of his FG's and finished as our #14 K for the season. SEA's dedication to youth and speed should return this unit to our top 10 again in 2012.

Head Coach - Pete Carroll, 3rd year
Carroll is the 8th HC in Seahawks history and this is his 3rd NFL HC job (NYJ '94, NE '97-'99). He is best known for his 97-19 record at USC from '01-'09 where he won 7 consecutive Pac-10 Titles and 2 National Championships ('03 & '04).

Offensive Coordinator - Darrell Bevell, 2nd year
Bevell entered the NFL as an offensive asst for GB from '00-'02 before being promoted to QB coach for the '03-'05 seasons. He spent '06-'10 as the Vikings' OC finishing 13th or lower on offense in 4 of his 5 years (5th in '09).

QB Coach - Carl Smith, 2nd year
Smith has been an NFL QB coach for NO, NE and 2 stops in CLE. He has spent 13 of his 22 years in the NFL as an OC including from '05-'07 with the Jaguars with rankings of 15th, 10th and 7th. He returned to CLE as a QB coach in '09-'10.

RB Coach - Sherman Smith, 3rd year
Smith was the Oilers'/Titans' RB coach from '95-'07 with six top 10 rush offenses in his tenure. He then served as WAS's OC from '08-'09 with finishes of 19th and 22nd. Smith rejoined SEA in '10.

WR Coach - Kippy Brown, 2nd year
Brown has been a CFB/NFL coach since '78. He was MIA's OC from '96-'99 finishing 14th, 11th, 16th and 20th respectively. Brown joined SEA in Jan '10.

TE Coach - Pat McPherson, 3rd year
After spending 11 yrs with DEN where he served as the TE cch ('07-'08) and QB cch ('03-'06), he joined SEA in 2010.

OL Coach/Asst Head Coach - Tom Cable, 2nd year
Cable was ATL's OL coach in '06 when they won the rushing title. He was the Raiders' OL coach in '07-'08 finishing #6 and #10 in rushing. Cable took over as OAK's HC after 4 gms in '08. He led OAK to their 1st non-losing season in 8 yrs in '10.

Defensive Coordinator - Gus Bradley, 4th year
Bradley was TB's LB cch for '07-'08. In '09 he took over as SEA's DC with his D's finishing #24, #27 and #9 in ypg.

DL Coach - Todd Wash, 2nd year
Wash was TB's DL coach from 2008-'10. Last year under Wash SEA's DL had 21 of the team's 33 sk in 2011 (64%).

LB Coach - Ken Norton Jr, 3rd year
From '04-09 Norton was USC's LB coach under Carroll. In 2010 SEA LB's had 5.5 of the team's 37 sacks (15%) with 3 of 12 int (25%). In '11 that climbed to 9 of 33 sacks (27%) but with just 3 of 22 int (14%).

Secondary Coach - Kris Richard, 3rd year
Richard was a grad asst at USC in '08-'09 working with DB's. He joined SEA as their CB coach in '10 with his pass defenses finishing #27 in '10 and #11 in '11.

Special Teams Coach - Brian Schneider, 3rd year
Schneider operated as the Raiders' STC for '07-'08 finishing #12 and #2 in our rankings. He then served as USC's STC in '09, joining SEA in '10 and snaring our top spot in our rankings. SEA dipped to 12th in '11.

OVERVIEW - In '10 SEA made a staggering 284 roster transactions and weren't far behind that in '11 with 231. Only 12 of the 53 players on the 2011 final game active roster had been with the team in '09. Of the 37 players taken by SEA in the '05-'09 drafts only seven were still on the roster. SEA had 8 first year st'rs see significant starts in '11 ranging from 1st RD DC's to UFA's to former CFL stars. Carroll's drive for roster competition paid off as they overachieved with a 7-9 record in '11 despite 5 new cch's, a new starting QB, lockout issues and a slew of injuries. The good news is that the Seahawks didn't make any big coaching changes for '12 and should enter training camp with a more stable atmosphere. The bad news is that they are still quite inexperienced. OC Bevell did a nice job of protecting Jackson and his inj in the 2nd half of the season LY. This could be the 3rd yr in a row that SEA will have a different opening day QB with the addition of Matt Flynn, who is fairly unproven at this point. It also remains to be seen if Rice will be healthy enough to make a contribution after being a premier FA pickup in '11. DC Bradley's defense showed some quality growth in the second half of 2011, dropping their ppg allowed by almost a td and ypg allowed by 41. They also forced 20 TO's compared to just 11 in the first 8 games. The lack of an offseason really showed up in STC Brian Schneider's unit as they melted down in the season opener vs SF costing them the game. They still had a quality season but the results did play part in seeding later in the season for the NFC. The schedule looks a bit tougher in '12 with 4 rd gms in 5 wks from wks 4-8 with their only home gm during that period vs NE. They also have 4 EST games and face CHI for the 3rd yr in a row. Unlike most teams with losing records Seattle had some impressive wins LY beating SB Champ NYG, Balt, Philly, and CHI with loses to SF and ATL by 2 pts each. They were even 7-7 before 2 close losses to end the yr. Carroll in his 2nd yr will field a stronger tm and LY they proved they could beat anybody on a Sunday. Tough tm to forecast as we are not sold on Flynn as a Franchise QB and when you add up the sum of the positions they are still in the bottom third of the NFL. With HG's vs NE, SF, GB, DAL and the NYJ they may be favored in only 4 games this year but once again Caroll will have them better than the sum of their parts.

ST LOUIS RAMS

OFFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

QUARTERBACKS - In 2010 STL made Sam Bradford just the 17th QB to be taken 1st overall in the draft since 1967. Even though the Heisman winner missed most of his 2009 season at Oklahoma due to a severe shoulder sprain which required surgery, Bradford would take 100% of the snaps and became just the 3rd rookie QB to have over 3,000 yd passing. He also broke Peyton Manning's rookie records for attempts (590, #5 NFL) and completions (by 28) while finishing #2 in passing yd. STL took a very conservative approach with Bradford by utilizing the short passing game to minimize mistakes (NFL record 169 pass att's without an int) and while he had a high completion rate (60.0%), he only had a 6.0 ypa (#30). LY under then new OC Josh McDaniels, the Rams switched to a more aggressive vertical passing attack that was intended to take advantage of Bradford's arm strength. AJ Feeley was brought in to provide Bradford with an experienced backup. Dealing with a tougher schedule, a new scheme, the NFL's weakest pass blocking OL and a decimated receiving corps, Bradford rarely resembled 2010's Rookie of the Year. In the worst case scenario the 0-5 Rams failed to score more than 1 offensive td in each of the first 5 gm and Bradford was knocked out with a high ankle sprain vs GB. Feeley took over the QB duties the next 2 wks guiding the Rams to their first win of the season over the Saints. Bradford then returned at less than 100% to start 4 of the next 5 gm. With STL out of contention Bradford's season was shut down and Feeley was KO'd with a thumb injury. Instead of going with #3 QB Tom Brandstater, the Rams picked up Kellen Clemens one day after he was waived by the Texans. He made the final 3 starts finishing the season with the best QBR of the 3 starters (73.8). The point of the offense was to get the ball downfield more but the team's ypa actually went down slightly to 5.9 (#30) and the completion % shrunk from 60% (#20) to 53.2% (#30). This year new HC Jeff Fisher says he's deleted Bradford's 2011 performance and new OC Brian Schottenheimer (Bradford's 3rd in 3Y) will move the Rams back to the West Coast style comparable to 2010's offense but a bit more reliant on the run. The organization gave Bradford a vote of confidence by essentially trading away the rights to RGIII and restocking the skill positions. STL didn't re-sign Feeley but brought back Clemens, who worked with Schottenheimer previously with the Jets. Bradford should reestablish himself as one of the game's better young QB's.

RUNNING BACKS - Steven Jackson is the franchise's leading career rusher and the only Rams player with 7 straight 1,000 yd seasons which is the league's longest current streak. His 31 100 yd rushing efforts is 2nd only to Marshall Faulk (38). Jackson has also accounted for at least 30% of the Rams' offense for 4 straight years and he's had the most total yd by a NFL RB since 2006. After concerns that he was wearing down after his career low 3.8 ypc in '10, Jackson had another steady season (1145, 4.4, 42 rec) after missing the 2nd gm due to injury. LY STL brought in the injury prone Jerious Norwood and Cadillac Williams to compete for the 3rd down back role and to give the unit some depth behind Jackson. Both players spent a lot of time with the trainers but Williams chipped in as the #2 rusher with 361 (4.1) while Norwood was #3 (61, 2.5). Neither player was re-signed and STL drafted a new set of 3rd down backs/backups in Cincinnati's versatile Isaiah Pead in the 2nd round and Abilene Christian's speedy Daryl Richardson in the 7th. Jackson was happy with Fisher's strong track record at RB and he should extend his 1,000 yd streak.

RECEIVERS - The Rams' receiving unit has fallen on hard times recently as they haven't had an 800 yd receiver s/'07. STL has only had four 100 yd receiving performances over the past 64 gm, with 2 coming LY by midseason pickups Brandon Lloyd and Danario Alexander. Part of the issue has been injuries. LY 4 WR's missed at least 4 gm (3 on IR), 8 started a game and only 3 had over 400 yd. Danny Amendola led the Rams with 85 rec (9th NFL) in '10 but with just an 8.1 ypc. He tore his triceps in the opener and was put on IR. Although the new offense will phase out his slot position, Amendola resigned for '12. Mark Clayton seemed to have instant chemistry with Bradford with 23 rec (13.3) before tearing a patellar tendon in the 5th game of '10. Clayton struggled with injuries again in '11 playing in just 2 gm before going on IR. He wasn't re-signed in the offseason. Danario Alexander has the prototype size/speed mix but injuries and drops have marred his career causing him to miss 14 gm in the L/2 years. He still finished tied as the #2 receiver LY even though he missed 6 gm and had 7 drops. Alexander may have to fight for a roster spot this year. Brandon Gibson, the #3 rec last year, is also facing an uphill battle to return as drops and sloppy route running may cause STL to cut the cord. Greg Salas showed promise in his rookie year with 27 rec (9.8) in 6 gm before going on IR (broken leg). The other rookie Austin Pettis was considered a disappointment despite also having 27 rec (9.5). He was suspended the season's final 2 gm for violating the league's PED policy and will have to sit out the opening 2 of '12 as well. Despite missing the first 5 gm Lloyd led the team in rec (51), yd (683) and was the only receiver to have more than 2 td rec. Despite some interest from the Rams, at 31 yrs old Lloyd wanted to play for a winner, so he signed with the Patriots in the offseason. Lance Kendricks is a hybrid TE/WR, who finished his rookie year as the #4 rec (28 rec, 12.6) despite 9 drops. Blocking TE Billy Bajema rotated with receiving TE Michael Hoomanawanui until Hoomanawanui tore his ACL in the 8th game. Bajema wasn't re-signed and STL added Matthew Mulligan, a strong blocker who is familiar with the offense from his days with the Jets. In the draft the Rams added Appalachian St's Brian Quick in the 2nd round and Wake Forest's Chris Givens in the 4th. WR coach Ray Sherman compared the 6'5" 220 Quick to Terrell Owens and the team expects him to compete for significant playing time right away after a dazzling performance at their rookie minicamp. Givens has the deep speed (4.39 40) that this unit has lacked and will also compete right away. They signed Steve Smith from PHI, who after having 1,220 yd in '09, is off two injury shortened seasons. This could be the league's youngest receiving corps.

OFFENSIVE LINE - In 2008 the STL OL was so beaten up that they started 13 different OL. GM Billy Devaney made improving the OL a priority in the 2009 offseason by signing C Jason Brown away from BAL and drafting OT Jason Smith #2 overall. On the year the Rams averaged 112 ypg rushing (4.3), finishing #20 in the NFL and allowed 44 sacks (T-#25). In '10 STL bolstered this group by adding Rodger Saffold in the 2nd RD. Saffold played his entire rookie ssn at LT allowing just 3.5 sks, while protecting Bradford's blind side. After missing most of his rookie year with post-concussion issues, Smith started 15 and allowed 4 sks. Brown started 16 gm for the 2nd straight year, but the unit failed to get a solid push from OG's Jacob Bell and Adam Goldberg and STL avg'd just 98.6 rush ypg (3.7) which ranked 25th in the league while allowing 34 sk (#14), their first time s/'99 that they allowed less than 40. The group however, did achieve a much needed level of consistency starting 79 of 80 gm. LY STL brought in 3 yr ATL starter Harvey Dahl via FA to take over the RG position. McDaniels' system has been known to put a good amount of stress on the OL and it cracked under the pressure. The Rams finished #23 in rushing avg 104 ypg (4.1) but allowed a league worst 55 sacks or 1 for just under every 10 pass att. Smith went on the IR after just 6 games due to more concussion related issues which began the injury avalanche. Saffold struggled with penalties and pass protection and missed the last 7 after a torn pectoral. Bell (MCL) went on the IR with 4 game left forcing the Rams to start Bryan Mattison, a player released from BAL's practice squad. Brown played 3 different positions with Goldberg and Dahl in 2 different spots. Fisher wants to rebuild the unit in his tough run blocking image and as of presstime STL has only re-signed players who accounted for 35 of their 80 OL starts LY. Among those shown the door are Brown, Bell and Goldberg. Smith took a pay cut to stay for what may be his last season here. Fisher pulled a FA coup by signing one of the league's top 10 C's in the Packers' Scott Wells. He also inked OG Robert Turner from the Jets and Quinn Ojinnaka from the Colts. The Rams surprisingly only drafted one OL in giant OG Rokevious Watkins (6'4" 340) who may need a developmental year. This is a thin unit which once again may need to be rebuilt.

DEFENSIVE OUTLOOK FOR 2012

DEFENSIVE LINE - Despite having invested a pair of 1st RD DC's on the DL (Adam Carriker and Chris Long) in '07 and '08 STL saw their sack totals dwindle from 41 in '05 down to 25 by '09. Injuries and lack of depth also contributed to the Rams allowing over 2,100 yards rushing in 5 of 6 ssns from '04-'09 with an average of 138 ypg (4.4) in '09 (#27). Carriker was traded away to WAS prior to '10 while Long slid over to LDE. Long and the rest of the DL took their games to a new level allowing 113 ypg (4.5) which ranked #17 in the league with 43 sk (#7), their most since winning the Super Bowl in '01. After the DL having a combined 9 sacks in '08-'09, Long had 8.5. James Hall posted 54 tkl and a team-high 10.5 sks. FA signee Fred Robbins added 6 sks while clogging up the run lanes. Everyone returned in '11 and the Rams also signed Justin Bannan and Daniel Muir to compete with '10 starter Gary Gibson for the open DT job. DE Robert Quinn was also added in the 1st round of the draft to back up Hall. With virtually the same now graying personnel, the unit regressed to allowing 152 rush ypg (4.8) which ranked 31st in the league with 39 sks (#23). Robbins (34), Bannan (32), Hall (34) and Gibson (30) were part of an offseason roster purge of the over 30 set with Long being the only starter returning. STL signed FA's Kendall Langford from MIA and DT Trevor Laws from PHI as well as TEN backup DE William Hayes. Langford will move inside in the 4-3 and will compete with Laws for a starting job. After seeing part time action LY, Quinn is expected to move into a starting role and the Rams feel he has double digit sack potential. The team traded down twice but got the guy they claimed they wanted all along in LSU DT Michael Brockers. Brockers is 6'6" 306 run stuffer and is the Rams' 4th #1DC to be spent on this unit since '07. This is another unit in transition.

LINEBACKERS - In 2010 the Rams fielded 5 different starting lineups due to injuries but still managed to improve their ppg allowed from 27.2 in '09 (#31) to 20.5 (#12). MLB James Laurinaitis has proven to be a true 3 down LB for STL as his instincts and ability to read offenses offset his speed issues. In the offseason the team added veterans Brady Poppinga, Zac Diles and Ben Leber via FA to boost this unit. Diles was outplayed by Leber in TC and was released prior to the year. Leber began the year as the starting WLB with Poppinga at SLB. The experiment lasted 4 gm before Leber was benched for Chris Chamberlain. With a weakened front 4 and more plays on the field due to a sputtering offense the ppg worsened to 25.4 (#26). Laurinaitis led the team for the 3rd straight year in tkl (142). Leber was released in Dec while Poppinga and Chamberlain were not re-signed. This year STL signed FA Jo-Lonn Dunbar from NO to take the SLB spot while the WLB job is wide open as of presstime. The Rams did take Hawaii LB Aaron Brown, a high caliber rugby player, in the 7th RD but he's projected as a special teamer. Expect more additions to this skeleton crew over the summer.

DEFENSIVE BACKS - Going into 2011 the Rams had finished 19th or lower in pass defense in 5 of the previous 6 seasons. In Spagnuolo's injury plagued first season in '09 STL gave up 235 ypg passing (64%) with an 8.0 ypa and a 22-8 ratio (1 int every 61 pass att). A healthier unit with a better pass rush in front of them trimmed their ypg (224), completion % (58%) and ypa (6.8) while the ratio was a more palatable 21-14. After the season the Rams lost OJ Atogwe to WAS in the short FA period prior to the lockout and replaced him with PHI's Quintin Mikell once the CBA was reached. Known as one of the NFL's top coverage S's Mikell moved to FS while 2nd year man Darian Stewart won the SS job. Craig Dahl, a 13 gm starter in '10, was the back up at both spots while another '09 starter, James Butler, saw backup duty. The CB's didn't have the luxury of stability as during the season they lost 5 CB's due to injury and 6 different players started. Ronald Bartell and Bradley Fletcher began the year as the starters. Bartell broke his neck in the opener however and sat out the rest of the year. Fletcher was lost for the year (ACL) after 4 gm. Justin King stepped into the job and was repeatedly burned before his season ended abruptly due to shoulder surgery with 3 gm left. FA acquisition Al Harris tore his ACL after 9 gm and the 37 year old decided to retire. By season's end waiver wire pickups Josh Gordy and Rod Hood were the starters. Despite the revolving door at CB the ypg passing actually fell to 206 (#7) but the comp % (60.5%) and ypa (7.4) both rose with the ratio nearly equal at 21-12 and were #23 in D QBR. STL signed one of the NFL's most underrated CB's in Courtland Finnegan from TEN via FA. He allowed the lowest ypa in the league LY and will shore up one spot. Fletcher could man the other side if healthy or it could go to one of the draft's biggest enigmas Janoris Jenkins. Jenkins has 1st RD talent, but his off-the-field issues caused him to drop until day two. Fisher says he'll keep him on a tight leash. The Rams also added Montana CB Trumaine Johnson who is likely to play S. This is the defense's deepest unit.

SPECIAL TEAMS - The Rams put together #8, #13 and #8 finishes in our special teams rankings from '07-'09. The group took a step back to #20 in '10 thanks to the coverage units which both ranked #21 allowing 23.7 on KR's and 9.7 on PR's. P Donnie Jones (45.5 avg, 40.0 net) and K Josh Brown (33-39 FG) both performed admirably. LY everyone returned but STL slid to #30 as the coverage units again were suspect allowing 25.1 on KR's and 12.3 on PR's. Leading returner in '10 Danny Amendola was inj'd in the opener leaving both of the return jobs open with Miller being the top PR (16.0) and Norwood handling the KR duties (25.5) when healthy. Jones averaged 44.3 but his net fell to 37.0 thanks to 2 PR td's and he signed with HOU in FA. Brown hit 21-28 last year including just 8-14 from 40+ and was released in the offseason before finding a home with the Jets. The new STC John Fassel, who was the Raiders' STC from '09-11 and finished #27 in '09, #3 in '10 and #9 in '11, could start with rookies at both K and P in #6DC K Greg Zuerlein and UFA John Hekker. Zuerlein hit 9 FG's of over 50+ last year at Missouri Western including two 58 yarders in 1 game. Hekker will compete in camp with Tom Malone. OVERVIEW - Since 2007 the Rams have won a total of 15 games. They have also been bitten hard by the injury bug losing 103 starts to injuries in '07 (#32), 65 in '08 (#24) and 87 in '09 (#31). After a 1 year reprieve in '10 when only 32 starts were lost due to injury (#9) and they finished with their best record s/'06, they lost 91 in '11 (#32) and plummeted back to 2-14. STL did an excellent job of using a short passing, ball control offense to develop Sam Bradford in his rookie season in '10. Bradford was not happy with the loss of OC Pat Shurmur going from a QB friendly WCO to a more complicated Josh McDaniels' system. He struggled behind a porous OL (NFL worst 55 sacks) with a decimated receiving corps before a lingering ankle injury finished off his season. Fisher says he's throwing the '11 season out and has reiterated that Bradford is still the franchise QB. Steven Jackson managed his 7th straight 1,000 yd season behind the questionable OL. LY we wrote that thanks to a brutal start to the schedule the Rams could realistically be 1-6 when they took on ARZ in their first division game of the year. They were and by that time injuries had already taken their toll. This year they get a big coaching upgrade in Fisher and should have better health. All of the key indicators are pointing upwards (see division forecast). Last year Cincy was the Most Improved team combined in those indicators and this year the Rams are that team and will they duplicate the Bengals success of going from a losing record to the playoffs. The schedule gets easier (#1 to #13) and the Rams will be a much more competitive team this year with Jeff Fisher stepping into a great situation.

Here is my look into the crystal ball for the 2012 NFL season. Over the last 3 seasons I have picked 23 of the 36 playoff teams and was the only magazine to pick the New Orleans Saints to win the NFC South in their Super Bowl Championship season of 2009. Last year I had BOTH #1 playoff seeds correctly pegged with New England in the AFC and Green Bay in the NFC. I almost had a magazine forecast sweep as I correctly picked Alabama to win the National Championship but had NE to win the NFL (SB loser). This year the teams that just missed the playoffs were DEN and KC in the AFC and DET and DAL who lost out on NFC tie-breakers. An interesting story was the Jets, who won their 5th straight 1st or 2nd round playoff game, had that streak end at NE in the Division Round. In the AFC the top two teams both advanced to the finals with Houston coming up just short. In the NFC the defending SB champs were the #5 seed with CHI snaring the final spot in week 17 on SNF at DET. The NFC's top two seeds also advanced to the title game. GB beat PHI in Lambeau Field in an epic duel of West Coast Offenses. NE and GB last met in the SB in 1996 which was also played in New Orleans (XXXI). GB was a 2 td favorite and won by 14 over Parcells' Patriots. This time the Patriots become the third Super Bowl loser to win the following season's Super Bowl and FIRST since Miami did it with their perfect 17-0 season in 1972, a streak of 40 years!

Fantasy Football Guide

By: Erik Kuselias

Erik Kuselias has been one of the leading Fantasy Football experts in the nation for over a decade. Most notably, while at ESPN (2003-2010) Kuselias was asked to create, host and lead ESPN's first season long Fantasy Football show "Fantasy Football Now.' In its first season, the show was nominated and won ESPN's First Fantasy Emmy, claiming honors for Outstanding New Show. With Kuselias, the show moved from an ESPN.com venture over to television garnering huge ratings on ESPN2, and "Fantasy Football Now" became one of the leading shows anywhere on fantasy football.

Originally, Kuselias came to ESPN in 2003, where he was tapped to host the nationally syndicated, afternoon radio program "SportsBash with Erik Kuselias". The show became the fastest growing national sports talk radio show in the nation, growing from 90 cities to over 225 affiliates in just three years.

After his stint on ESPN Radio, in 2007, Kuselias was named to host ESPN's latest daily studio television show "NASCAR NOW". Kuselias led the show in its inaugural season, where it was nominated for an Emmy for "Best Studio Show", the only time it has been nominated for such recognition.

Kuselias was also asked to come back to nationally syndicated radio full-time, and he hosted "The Erik Kuselias Show" from 2007-2010.

In 2009, Kuselias was asked to become the main host for "College Football Live". Over his eighteen month reign as the primary host, "College Football Live" increased its viewership by 18%.

Kuselias has also been an integral part of several other ESPN shows, appearing regularly on programs such as "Mike and Mike in the Morning", "The Herd with Colin Cowherd", "First Take", "1st and 10", "Rome is Burning", and "SportsCenter".

In 2011, Kuselias signed on with The Golf Channel to host "Morning Drive," a daily talk show that covers golf as well as other sports. After a successful run there, Kuselias made the jump to NBC in 2012, hosting "NBC Sports Talk".

Kuselias is also a lifetime member of MENSA, the High IQ society. Before a career in sports, Kuselias was a practicing Attorney. He attended Brown University, The University of Michigan Law School, and received his Masters Degree from the Columbia University School of Journalism.

STRATEGIES OF FANTASY FOOTBALL

The following pages offer strategies that will help make 2012 your Super Bowl year. They consist of strategies for preparing for the draft, strategies during the draft and game day strategies. None of these strategies are set in stone. Use them as guides and keep them in mind as you look through the 2012 season.

PREPARING FOR THE DRAFT

1) STUDY, STUDY, STUDY!!!
The more you know about the players available in the draft, the easier it will be to field a competitive team. This is especially true in the later stages after the Top 100 players have been selected. If your league has 12 teams & 15 players on each team, you must have a list of at least 263 players. A sound rule is to rank your top 32 quarterbacks, 60 running backs, 75 receivers, 30 tight ends, 30 kickers & 30 defenses.

2) KNOW YOUR SCORING SYSTEM
Make sure you take into account the scoring system your Fantasy Football League uses when ranking your players. For example, if you are in a league that uses the Basic Scoring Method, you would want to lower the rankings of those players that are used between the twenties & rack up yards but get taken out of the game in the red zone. Conversely, you would raise those players who may not be as productive yardage-wise but get the ball when the team is close to the goal line.

3) MOCK DRAFT
Running a mock draft lets you predict the players that you might expect to choose from when your pick comes. If you do this for the first several rounds, it allows you to formulate a draft strategy before the draft even begins. To be as effective as possible be realistic when doing your preparations, if you have the twelfth pick in the draft, chances are very good that not all 11 owners picking in front of you will "miss" picking up Titans RB Chris Johnson.

4) PRIORITIZE POSITIONS
You must evaluate the NFL talent pool prior to your draft, making note of the elite players at each position. If you feel there are 20 quality running backs & only 6 top quarterbacks, your emphasis should be on drafting a QB first & picking up your running back in the next rounds. Have a strategy!

5) LISTEN TO COMPETING TEAM OWNERS
If you can get a feel for what your fellow owners are going to do on draft day, you can adjust your draft strategies accordingly. If the person drafting first comes to the draft wearing a Chargers jersey, it is probably safe to say that you're going to have to look for a different quarterback other than Philip Rivers. The Fantasy Football Draft is as much about predicting when a player will be selected & waiting as long as possible to draft him, while scooping up other key players before someone else picks them up, as it is about drafting the best available players.

6) LOOK AT THE OFFENSIVE LINE
Yes we know that offensive linemen don't score very often, but consider this. If a running back loses 3/5 of his blocking corps, his numbers will most likely go down. The same is true if a quarterback loses two excellent pass blockers. It helps to have an idea of how each team's offense shapes up for the upcoming year.

7) PAY ATTENTION TO BYE WEEKS
When the Texans joined the league in 2002 there again was an even number of teams, which means the NFL is back to the mid-90's schedule model, with most byes in mid-season. That will help late in the season when the Fantasy Playoffs roll around. Refer to the Draft Day Reference Page to see who's on bye each week.

DRAFT DAY STRATEGIES

1) MARQUEE NFL PLAYERS AREN'T ALWAYS THE BEST FFL PLAYERS
This is a game of stats, don't draft for intangibles. Remember, you only accumulate points when your players score a lot of points or gain a lot of yards! Big name players late in their careers are at best backup fodder.

2) WATCH ACQUIRING TOO MANY PLAYERS WITH THE SAME BYE WEEK
The bye week used to be scheduled on a division by division basis but the NFL has changed that policy. However, you still must pay attention to bye weeks. Having both of your QB's take the same week off will make things difficult especially if the majority of QB's are drafted by teams in the league. You may end up having to pick up the NFL's last ranked QB with the outlook of few points or have to pay more than necessary in a trade as other owners see your predicament.

3) BE CAREFUL WHEN ACQUIRING PLAYERS FROM THE SAME TEAM
If two or three players are drafted from the same NFL team, you could also run into problems during bye weeks. Even with a team that scores a lot like the Saints or Vikings, if that team has a poor week & doesn't score much with two or three players on your roster, you could be in for a bad week. If that happens in the fantasy playoffs, your season would probably be over.

4) LOOK FOR CONSISTENT PLAYERS
Players that score 1 td three out of four weeks are more valuable than the player that scores 3 td's one week but doesn't score again for four weeks.

5) LOOK FOR DURABLE PLAYERS
It is, of course, impossible to predict injuries, just ask anyone that had Peyton Manning & was scrambling for a QB to start last season. However, if a player consistently sits out several games a year due to injuries they might be considered a bigger risk than the player who usually plays the entire 16 game schedule.

6) TRY TO MAKE YOUR RB's & WR's THE "GO TO" GUYS ON THEIR TEAMS
Simply put, these are the players that score the most & get the most yards. The best scenario is that the "Go To" WR has a solid compliment to offset double teams & to keep defenses from keying on them. Unfortunately, this is not always the case.

7) KEEP TRACK OF WHAT IS GOING ON DURING THE DRAFT
This could help you decide which player to choose. As an example say you have the 3rd to last pick of the 2nd round & then therefore the 3rd pick of the 3rd round. You went with a WR with your 1st pick & are deciding between a QB & RB. Keeping track of what other owners have taken you note that the two owners that are choosing after you have both taken a QB already. Therefore, the odds are that you would be able to take the RB now & not worry about losing the QB of your choice. Create a simple graph of all the teams in your league with the team numbers on top and positions (QB, RB, WR, etc) on the side. Check off when each team selects a position. With a quick look you will be able to tell who is in need of what position.

8) KICKERS DO MATTER!
Just like in the NFL, good kickers can win or lose close games for you. A Top 5 PK can give you about a 3 point edge each week. While drafting a kicker before the 5th round is ordinarily inadvisable, if you're not passing on a solid RB or receiver, any time after that should be OK. Once one is taken, there is often a run on kickers.

9) DEFENSE / SPECIAL TEAMS
Make sure to take a look at the personnel here. Are the return men still with the team? Has the defensive personnel changed or are they basically intact? Have the defensive coordinator or special teams coaches left, which could mean a different philosophy? Knowing your scoring system is very important here as some leagues have a premium on sacks while in others points allowed are key, thereby making defensive rankings decidedly different. All these items should be reviewed prior to making your rankings.

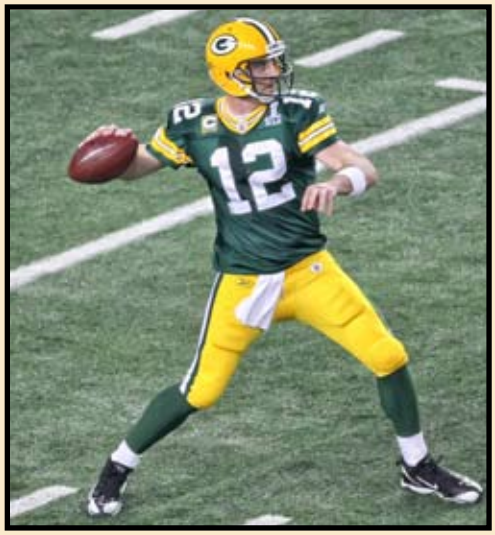

10) BE AWARE OF A TEAM'S REALISTIC PLAYOFF CHANCES
NFL teams that clinch home field early historically will rest their players during weeks that you are in your Fantasy Football playoffs & quite often, your Super Bowl. Many times, drafting a good player on a team that should have to work for a playoff spot will ensure that your player is on the field for your Super Bowl. A great situation happened last year when both QB's Matthew Stafford (520 yds vs GB) & Carson Palmer (417 yds vs SD) had great performances In the final week of the regular season as they were trying to lead their respective teams to the playoffs. Team owners with those two players probably won their Super Bowl. Keep that in mind as the season progresses.

For Game Day...
PLAY THE RIGHT PLAYERS Know what team your players are playing against & play your 2nd & 3rd stringers vs weaker opponents. But keep your starters in the game.

In closing, there is definitely a degree of luck that goes into playing Fantasy Football, but the more prepared you are, the more you will increase your chances of being successful. When vying for your Fantasy Football Championship, go into your draft prepared & end the season a winner!

TOP QUARTERBACKS FOR 2012

Usually an owner's draft position determines how fast he goes for a QB. Those drafting early will go for one of the high profile players while others look for value early. It's important to have a backup ready & don't be afraid to check the waiver wire for those outperforming their preseason rankings.

TOP RUNNING BACKS FOR 2012

Running Backs are the most important position in fantasy football. They are one of the most reliable factors in scoring leagues & are good for bonus points in yardage leagues. RB's can play in all sorts of weather conditions & a pair of quality RB's can survive injuries and inconsistent performances by other players on a fantasy roster.

TOP WIDE RECEIVERS FOR 2012

Unless you are able to take one of the top WR's in this ranking owners would be better off focusing on the elite tandem QB's and WR's. Afterwards WR are interchangeable as the draft moves on especially in the later rounds.

Last 14 Years Matchups on Every FBS Game This Year... Only at PhilSteele.com

PhilSteele.com is loaded with information but the chart above is my favorite type of info on the site and it is exclusively at PhilSteele.com. When you click on this year's schedule for each team you can click on any opponent and the past matchups chart will pop up. I used the Alabama/Auburn matchup above as an example as it is one of the top rivalry games. The chart not only gives you the score of each of the past 14 years but it gives you the complete box score and much more. You will notice the matchup above is from the Alabama team page. Therefore green numbers are good for Alabama and red numbers are bad. At a glance you can see that Alabama had a streak of 6 straight losses from '02-'07 but has won 2 of the last 3 since. A check of the last column quickly shows you 5 green numbers in the last 10 years. This highlights the fact that the Tide, despite their 7 losses, outgained the Tigers in those games and many by wide margins. If you look at the ranked columns to the left you see that at least one of the teams has been ranked #2 or higher in 4 of the last 7 years and surprisingly neither was ranked in either '03 or '98. The "Upset" column lets you quickly see how many upsets there have been in the series (3) the last 14 years and the final column shows you who had the yardage edge. This is available RIGHT NOW for EVERY FBS game being played this year! Go to PhilSteele.com and become an expert on every matchup for 2011!

TOP TIGHT ENDS FOR 2012

A good TE can be as effective as a #2 WR for a fantasy football team. Owners should be aware that when the run on TE's starts, as they often have, a domino effect occurs in the middle rounds of the draft. Just be careful not to reach for a TE if a better RB prospect is available.

TOP KICKERS FOR 2012

A kicker's worth is determined year-to-year, based on the offense he is with & whether he is in any sort of slump. Usually, there is a run on kickers in the mid-rounds, but unless an owner can snag one of the top kickers, they are better off focusing on the remaining starting RB's or a WR/TE prospect.

QB's: Last year Kevin Kolb came into the season highly touted but not highly proven. He had three 300 yd passing games in his 7 career starts before last season and largely disappointed in his initial year in the desert. In fact, the team played better after he went down with injury. Specifically ARZ won 7 of their last 9 games and backup John Skelton was the guy in 8 of those 9 contests. Coach Ken Whisenhunt told me this was an open QB competition but you get the feeling that somehow, someway Kolb will be the starter. Whoever is the starter will have some weapons, including the great Larry Fitzgerald and 1st RD pick Michael Floyd out of Notre Dame. Consider Kolb a backup in only the deepest of leagues.

RB's: Beanie Wells missed 2 games due to injury last year and this seems to go with the territory. Moreover, he only had two 100 yd rushing performances. That being said, ARZ does like to run the ball in close. From the 1, ARZ ran the ball 75% of the time and did not have a single completion on any pass play. Therefore, expect more Beanie at the goal line and I expect his td's to improve. I like Wells more than most people do.

WR's: Larry Fitzgerald is All-Planet and last year caught 80 passes for 1,411 yards and 8 td's despite having "challenges at QB," challenges being another word for "two guys who often couldn't play dead in a cowboy movie." Fitzgerald finished as the #5 fantasy receiver and had the 4th most targets at the position. He is a 1st RD selection in almost every format. Michael Floyd was drafted in the 1st RD by ARZ and has a chance to be a solid 1st year addition. The only thing that concerns me about Fitzgerald is that he did not have a single game with double digit catches. Floyd could be to Larry Fitzgerald what Julio Jones was to Roddy White last season. I like the idea of grabbing Floyd late in drafts.

TE's: Todd Heap is still the TE and you still don't want him on your roster. He can't stay healthy, he's not the player he once was and the QB situation is not favorable.

DEFENSE/ST: You have to love Patrick Peterson in the return game. Special teams were a big reason the team ended up 8-8. Peterson returned 4 punts for td's which probably won't happen again. The D was mediocre at best but they do play in a relatively weak division. The team re-signed Calais Campbell. Overall the Cardinals should match their middle of the pack finish from a year ago.

KICKER: If you look up "mediocre kicker" in the dictionary, it's Jay Feely waving back at you. He is the ultimate in solid but probably will never be spectacular. He's the reason why you wait until the end to draft kickers. Someone like Feely (if not Jay Feely himself) will be available.

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

- Before you assume Kevin Kolb will be the guy, don't forget that John Skelton went 6-2 as a starter in 2011.
- Larry Fitzgerald did not have a double digit catch game the entire year.
- From the goal line, Arizona tried 3 pass plays last year, all 3 were unsuccessful. They had 9 running plays, six went for td's.
- Only 8 NFL RB's had double digit rushing td's. Beanie Wells was one of them.

QB's: Matt Ryan simply doesn't get enough respect either as an NFL QB or a fantasy QB. As an NFL QB, he was the 3rd overall pick in the draft from Boston College, took over a franchise that was the NFL's version of Siberia after the Michael Vick dogfighting debacle and has not only turned the culture around but is 41-19 as a starter leading the team to elite status. Sure, they lost to the Giants and the Packers the last 2 years but both of those teams went on to win a Super Bowl. I will be one of the few people who put Matt Ryan into the top 10 of fantasy QB's but a guy who has weapons by the name of Roddy White, Julio Jones and Tony Gonzalez can't be all that deep in your rankings. Plus Matt Ryan was the 8th fantasy QB last year. Does anybody really expect him to be worse considering his weapons? I think 4,200 yards, 30 td's and 15 turnovers "basically his numbers a year ago" sound about right. The only thing that scares me a little is the O-line allowed 26 sacks and 84 QB hits (top 10 in the league).

RB's: People are dying to usher out the Michael Turner era. These are the same people who have been telling you for the last 3 years that Michael Turner is too high. The same people that have lost their leagues because they've passed on guys like Turner who put up 1,300 yards rushing and double digit td's. Sure, Michael Turner won't help you in the pass game, but the rushing yards and the td's will be there. In fact, Turner got a huge percentage of his team's carries inside the 5 and only 1 other RB scored a rushing td inside the 5 all year long for the Falcons. Book Turner for his 1,200+ rushing yards and double digit td's once again.

WR's: Some people thought that Julio Jones' arrival in Atlanta would limit Roddy White's chances. As you saw from my rankings in last year's magazine I was not one of them. I thought Roddy White would once again lead the NFL in targets and he did with 179 and when Julio Jones emerged and started to understand the offense, Roddy White was even better having double digit receptions in half of the team's final 6 regular season games. Expect Roddy White to be around 100 receptions, 1,300 yards and 8 td's once again. Julio Jones finished 20th among WR's in standard fantasy scoring. What's most impressive about this stat is that he basically missed 4 games. If you project out White's points per game and account for Julio Jones' growing in the ATL offense, it's easy to see him in the top 10 or 12 WR's in the NFL.

TE's: Tony Gonzalez is nothing if not consistent. Although he had more than 7 catches in only 1 game and only 100 yards receiving in 1 game (in fact Tony Gonzalez has exactly two 100 yard receiving games the last 3 seasons) he somehow put the stats in the numbers and always finishes in the top 5 in points, last year being the 4th best TE. I think Gonzalez should be ranked somewhere between 8 and 12 on your TE board.

DEFENSE/ST: The ATL D probably won't be your starting D but is a very adequate backup. Even on a bye, or if your starting D underperforms. Mike Nolan is a good DC but needs to get the team more of a pass rush. The Falcons were 29th in 3rd down D last season. This unit should not be significantly better or worse than last year.

KICKER: Matt Bryant made 27 of 29 FG attempts last season and at one point set the franchise record with 30 consecutive FG's made. He is a definite top 10 kicker and a very good selection. In fact, in 2010 he was the team's MVP. Say that sentence out loud. On a team with Matt Ryan, Roddy White and Michael Turner, kicker was the team's MVP, not too shabby.

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

- Roddy White led the NFL in targets last year.
- RB Michael Turner scored every rushing td inside the 5 yd line last year by a RB except for 1. In '10 Turner led the team with 68 redzone touches, he's the guy.
- Tony Gonzalez had 116 targets and finished in the top 5 in TE receptions.

QB's: Joe Flacco was durable last year. In fact he took every snap at QB for the Ravens. One reason he was durable, he certainly wasn't getting beat up around the goal line. In 37 plays inside the 5 last year the Ravens ran it about 65% of the time, a decent percentage. Flacco's durability was one reason BAL had a very nice season last year, winning the AFC North Title and sweeping the division for the 1st time in franchise history. They were also undefeated at home and have reached the playoffs four years in a row. From a fantasy perspective, Joe Flacco is pretty much who you would expect Joe Flacco to be. He was within 5 points plus or minus of Ryan Fitzpatrick, Alex Smith, Andy Dalton and Josh Freeman. He'll probably be in that tier of players that are good enough to be your backup but not enough to win you the championship. I have him ranked as high as the 16th QB, meaning he is the exact average NFL fantasy starter.

RB's: Ray Rice is anything but average. You know I loved Rice like we were related coming into last year saying I was willing to bet my team on him. Rice got 20 or more carries in 6 of the last 7 weeks and won an awful lot of teams a fantasy championship. Now he's the goal line back too and is obviously one of the league's most versatile players. He is my #2 ranked RB.

WR's: Anquan Boldin is a guy who will disappoint you. In last year's magazine I mentioned that in the final 9 games of the season, he was beyond abysmal averaging less than 3 catches per game and scoring only 2 td's. I warned he might fade down the stretch. In fact, Boldin did more than fade. He didn't catch more than 5 passes in any game of his last 6 games. He is not in my top 30 WR's. Neither is Torrey Smith who is a hot, trendy pick for some this year. I think he will be solid but not spectacular and should be seen as a 3 or 4 WR at best.

TE's: I like the production that this position puts out. In fact, if I could combine Ed Dickson and Dennis Pitta, I would have a fantasy TE worth owning but unless you are in a league that will let you combine their stats you don't want either TE on your roster.

DEFENSE/ST: I know Terrell Suggs is out for a while but this is still a defense worth owning. Haloti Ngata is a battler, Ray Lewis is still on the field and this defense still gives people fits. The Ravens were the 3rd ranked D last year and I expect them to preform at about the same level this year.

KICKER: Billy Cundiff is the grand marshall in the parade of fantasy mediocrity. You would never go out of your way to draft Cundiff, nor would you cry in your post draft beer if he were your kicker.

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

- Joe Flacco took every snap last season. Ray Rice had at least 20 carries in 6 of the last 7 games and Anquan Boldin didn't catch more than 5 passes in any game of the second half of the season.
- Baltimore had 37 plays inside the 5 yd line last year and ran it 65% of the time, a decent percentage. Contrast that to Buffalo who had 35 plays inside the 5 and only ran it 18 times or about 51% of the time.
- Among RB's, Ray Rice had the 2nd most targets, the 2nd most rec and 2nd most yards (behind Darren Sproles in all 3 categories).
- The Ravens were only 9 total points away from being the top rated fantasy defense last year.

QB's: In last year's magazine I joked that Ryan Fitzpatrick went to Harvard, and if I want a Harvard guy he should be operating on me, representing me in court or doing my taxes. Smart guys didn't need to be my fantasy QB. Despite the face that he is very possibly a rocket scientist, Ryan Fitzpatrick was not smart with the football leading the NFL in int's throwing 23 picks. The one thing I really do like about his situation is that Buffalo likes to throw it inside the 5. RB's only toted the rock 8 times in 26 plays inside the opponents' 5.

RB's: Fred Jackson. Ordinary name, ordinary game. The positives for Jackson is when the team does hand the ball off at the goal line he will basically get every single carry. The bad news is the O-line is still way below average and for the 3rd straight year the Bills will probably rank last or near last in plays run inside the opponents 5. That means Jackson will once again struggle to score td's having only 6 last season. He also won't help you much in the pass game. I will rank Frank Jackson a little lower than most folks will.

WR's: The Bills retained Stevie Johnson who was a free agent. This seems to be a good, solid match for both player and team. I rank Johnson just inside my top 25. On the positive side, I like the fact that he is the #1 option for his team. On the negative he's good but not great. My report on Johnson in last year's magazine was that I don't expect him to score 10 td's again, but he should have been very close to 82 catches and 1,073 yards. Johnson was right there with 76 catches and 1,004 yards and the td's did in fact drop from 10 to 7. I expect very similar production this year from Mr Johnson.

TE: Scott Chandler is a big boy and a fairly versatile player. That being said, make sure he's on someone else's roster on draft day.

DEFENSE/ST: The Bills knew they needed help last year. They haven't reached the post season in 12 years, the longest skid in the NFL and a large part of the blame fell on the defense's shoulders. The Bills' defense gave up almost 6,000 yards and the 434 points yielded were the 2nd worst performance in the history of the NFL. Dave Wannstedt was brought in to go over the D and say what you want about the "Stash" as a head coach, he is a solid DC. He also got a wonderful present in Mario Williams who should help out. Additionally, Marcell Dareus, a top 3 pick in the 2011 draft, could be a surprise player. The Bills won't be awful on defense and should be considered average.

KICKER: Ryan Lindell missed half the year with a broken shoulder but is a very good player and was re-signed despite having the ability to leave as a FA. The problem is that he has bad weather and an inconsistent offense and should be considered as a #2 kicker.

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

- The Bills were tied for #2 with 7 defensive/return td's last season.
- Ryan Fitzpatrick led the NFL with 23 int's and essentially had a 1-1 ratio which is far different than Aaron Rodgers 48-6 or 8-1 ratio (includes rushing td's for Rodgers).
- Buffalo only ran the ball 10 times inside the 5 yard line all year long but they did hand off 63% of the time at the goal line where Fred Jackson received every carry but two.

QB's: One of the biggest questions of the fantasy offseason is how will Cam Newton do in his sophomore campaign. He had an unbelievable rookie season under OC Rob Chudzinski, who was retained. His year was highlighted by his NFL record 14 rushing td's but Newton was not unbelievable through the entire year. In the 2H of the season he eclipsed 215 yards passing only twice and his td/int ratio was a very mediocre 21-17. Newton's ability to score rushing td's was derived from the fact that they gave him the ball near the goal line. As long as Cam Newton is a boy dog warrior beast and getting the rushing td's, he will have significant rushing value at the QB position. If he doesn't find the endzone with his feet, he will become one of the all-time busts of this coming season.

RB's: DeAngelo Williams is a mere shell of the player who scored 20 td's a few years back (2008). He was disappointing in '09 and '10 and last year was outside the top 25 for fantasy RB's. In fact Williams only carried the ball once inside the 5 the entire season. Let somebody else take him. Jonathan Stewart is a better player, but only a slightly better fantasy player (in fact, last year DeAngelo Williams was the 26th RB, Stewart the 25th). Their stats get pillaged by the Cam Newton rushing td's.

WR's: You know that Steve Smith can put up yards in bunches and amassed 1,394 last year which landed him a nice contract in the offseason. He only had 79 receptions but I'm encouraged by the 129 targets. Smith is a borderline #1. Brandon LaFell, on the other side, is solid but certainly not spectacular and should only be considered in very deep leagues.

TE's: Greg Olsen had 90 targets last year but caught only 45 passes which is a horrendous percentage (50%). Compare that to say, Antonio Gates who had 90 targets and 64 catches (71%). Olsen was the 17th best TE last year and should probably finish right about there in 2012.

DEFENSE/ST: The defense is simply putrid. If they are on your fantasy roster, I will find out where you live, drag you out to your front lawn and beat you with a bag of nickels until they are cut from your fantasy roster. I know they added #1 DC Luke Kuechly and Charles Johnson is a legitimate player but there is just not enough there.

KICKER: Orlindo Mare is a 2nd tier kicker. In fact, his family was so happy I rated him 2nd tier they printed up shirts saying exactly that. The truth is he's probably more like a 3rd or 4th tier kicker.

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

- Sure Cam Newton threw for more than 4,000 yards but that barely put him in the top 10.
- Steve Smith had five 100 yard receiving games in the first half of the season but only 1 in the second. On 17 plays from the 1 yd line, Cam Newton touched the ball on 10 of those. The other 7 all went to Jonathan Stewart who only scored twice; put another way, Stewart was the goal line back and was stopped short of the goal line 71% of the time.
- Carolina ran 24 plays inside the 5 and Cam Newton had the ball in his hands on 20 of those plays. The other 4, they only scored 1 td.
- DeAngelo Williams only touched the ball once inside the 5 the entire season.
- The Panthers defense only had 1 defensive/return td last season tying them for worst in the NFL.

QB's: I rank Jay Cutler as the 13th overall QB and probably have him a couple of slots higher than most people. But remember, the Bears were 7-3 in 2011 when Cutler suffered a broken thumb and he didn't play the rest of the season. The team tanked in his absence. I assume the O-line will be better as well. Gabe Carimi (2011 #1DC out of Wisc) only played 2 games before his season ended with a dislocated kneecap. If the tackle situation gets straightened out, Cutler will be protected and he will be very dangerous in Mike Tice's system. As much as people like to say Cutler will turn it over, he had nearly a 2-1 ratio before his season abruptly ended.

RB's: Another big question looming is what will happen with Matt Forté and his possible holdout. I rank Forté as the 7th overall RB because I think he will sign and love his versatility. Not only was Forté right around 1,000 yards rushing, but he was in the top 5 in RB/rec yards and in the top 5 in RB targets. He did this despite missing 4 games. Projected out, he probably would have led RB's in all receiving categories. The only downside to Forté is that he's dreadful near the goal line. Two years ago he scored on just 1 attempt inside the opponent's 5 and last year he was 0-5 inside the 5 and only punched in 1 opportunity out of 12 inside the opponents 10. This makes Michael Bush a very attractive option in deep leagues. Bush will find pay dirt scoring 21 td's in part time action in his career and running for 461 yds in a 4 game span in OAK when Darren McFadden went down LY.

WR's: Jay Cutler and Brandon Marshall. Sing it with me: "reunited and it feels so good." Brandon Marshall had 145 targets and over 1,200 yards receiving last year in Miami. With Cutler as his QB in Denver in 2008 Marshall had 104 rec's for 1,265 yds and 6 td's. I'm higher on Marshall than just about any other publication ranking him as my 6th overall receiver. Earl Bennett, Devin Hester and company are like the band playing behind Britney Spears - you don't really notice them. At 6'3" rookie #2 DC Alshon Jeffery gives Cutler another tall target around the goal line. He was considered a 1st rd prospect until SC's QB problems and his own weight issues caused him to fall.

TE's: The TE position in CHI is a bit of a mystery. Kellen Davis and Matt Spaeth will share duties but neither is a guy you would particularly like to have on your fantasy roster.

DEFENSE/ST: I do like Devin Hester as my returnman. I particularly like the fact that the Bears had 9 td's from this unit last year, far and away the best in the NFL. This helped propel CHI to be the 2nd overall D (and in fact was my defense in more than half of my personal leagues). I recommend them again but don't think they will finish in the top 3.

KICKER: Robbie Gould has been in CHI longer than corrupt politics and for good reason - he's a good player. He doesn't miss a lot of kicks, he's pretty good from long yardage and isn't much affected by the cold or the wind. He was one of the top 10 kickers last year and should be again this year.

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

- Matt Forté has been traditionally bad on the goal line. In 2010 Matt Forté scored on just 1 of 10 attempts inside the opponents 5. Last year was just as bad. Forté did not score from the 1, was 0-5 inside the opp 5 and 1-12 inside the 10.
- Michael Bush is better than you think. Last year for the Raiders he had 461 yards over a 4 game span with McFadden out.
- The Bears were the 2nd ranked fantasy D last year and were less than 1/2 point per game behind the 49ers who finished #1.
- The Bears led the NFL with 9 defensive/return td's last season.
- Devin Hester has 18 career return td's which is one away from tying Deion Sanders' NFL record.

CINCINNATI BENGALS

PS '12 OFF RANK #22
PS '12 DEF RANK #15

RUSH ATT%/RANK	RUSH YDS%/RANK	PASS ATT%/RANK	PASS YDS/RANK	2011 NUMBERS/RANK PLAYS/GAME	YARDS/PLAY	YARDS/POINT
46%/12	35%/15	54%/21	65%/18	63.4/18	5.0/23	14.9/9

QB's: The Bengals made the playoffs last year and Andy Dalton and AJ Green became the first rookie QB/WR duo to make the Pro Bowl. He was also the first QB not drafted in the 1st round to start every regular season game and lead his team to the playoffs in his rookie season. That being said, he's probably a better NFL player than fantasy player and should only be considered a bad #2 starter.

RB's: Cincinnati now has a law firm. BenJarvis Green-Ellis was signed as a FA away from the NE Patriots and don't sleep on him. He was top 5 in rushing td's last year and has a good nose for the end zone. This certainly makes him an attractive flex play and he will probably go lower than he should in most fantasy leagues.

WR's: AJ Green is a stud that tied for the AFC lead in rec's of 40 or more yards with 7. I rank Green as a low end #1/high end #2 receiver and expect him to improve on his 65 catches. I like his 116 targets. The other receivers on the roster are not worth owning although Jordan Shipley is sort of tempting in a very (I stress very) deep league.

TE's: I like Jermaine Gresham - so sue me (see, I kept the legal theme going here in Cincinnati). What's not to like? 92 targets, 6 td's (heck, only 2 TE's caught more than 8) and a QB who is going to grow and is smart. Smart QB's throw the ball to the TE. Don't be surprised if Jermaine Gresham is the backup TE on every team I have.

DEFENSE/ST: DC Mike Zimmer is an excellent coach and I'm surprised he hasn't been offered a head coaching gig yet. They also have some athletes on the defense including Thomas Howard, who led the team in tackles with 99. The defense is now supplemented by 1st Rnd pick CB Dre Kirkpatrick out of Alabama. I don't particularly love this unit enough to rank them in the top 10 despite the fact they finished as the #9 overall defense last year. I think they are a mid level #2 defense.

KICKER: Local boy makes pretty good. That would be the story line with Mike Nugent, the Ohio State product who is now kicking in that same state. Nugent finished in the top 10 last year and set a team record for FG's with 33 but he faltered down the stretch and should be considered a #2 fantasy kicker.

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

• Jerome Simpson is no longer with the club. He had over 100 targets last year.

• Jermaine Gresham had at least 3 catches in every game he played in but 1 and that was in week 2. Only one Bengal caught more than 6 passes in any game in the second half of the season and that was Jerome Simpson, who is no longer on the team.

• The Good news for BenJarvis Green-Ellis is the Bengals run it 70% of the time at the goal line. Moreover Andy Dalton is not great inside the 5 where he completed 8 passes in 18 attempts.

• BenJarvis Green-Ellis has 24 rushing td's over the last 2 years but that was with the Patriots.

CLEVELAND BROWNS

PS '12 DEF RANK #24

RUSH		PASS		• 2011 NUMBERS/RANK •
ATT%/RANK	YDS%/RANK	ATT%/RANK	YDS/RANK	PLAYS/GAME	YARDS/PLAY	YARDS/POINT
42%/20	33%/19	58%/13	67%/14	64.0/12	4.5/30	21.2/30

QB's: Cleveland Rocks. No two ways about it. So says Drew Carey, so says Erik Kuselias. Too bad they are just not a little better on the football field. 4-12 in Pat Shurmur's first year, 0-6 in the division. Poor OC Brad Childress has been given young talent including QB Brandon Weeden who (in one of the most overhyped stories in years) will be 29 in October. I don't like rookies, I don't particularly like the Cleveland offense so Brandon Weeden should only be drafted in a 3QB league when your first 2 guys are very safe.

RB's: Trent Richardson was the 3rd overall pick in the draft out of Alabama. He is a man-child and in fact should get the rock more than any other rookie. Cleveland is no stranger to having RB's exceed expectations (see Peyton Hillis) and I expect Richardson to do exactly the same.

WR's: You don't want 2 day old sushi, you don't want to ask directions from somebody who is not from that town and you don't want a Cleveland Browns WR. Drafting a CLE WR anywhere but in the deepest of leagues is like asking a woman with a bump "when are you expecting?" You just don't do it. In fact, nobody caught more than 6 passes in any game and the entire CLE arsenal had exactly one 100 yard receiving game in 2011 (Greg Little in Wk 15).

TE's: Explaining how strange you are to someone you've just met is not an easy task. Often I use this example "when I'm driving alone and I need to crack myself up, I reenact the scene from Coming to America where Eddie Murphy introduces RANDY WATSON." I like Randy Watson a lot better than I like Benjamin Watson. We can all do better at the TE position.

DEFENSE/ST: Cleveland was in the bottom 3rd of defenses last year and this was despite the fact that Dick Jauron's crew ranked 2nd in pass defense facing Roethlisberger twice, Ray Rice twice and AJ Green twice plus this year they will see Michael Vick, Eli Manning, Tony Romo and Carson Palmer which means that this unit will probably be floundering around the 20th best.

KICKER: I like Phil Dawson - he's a pro. He just has no chance at being on one of my fantasy teams.

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

- The receiving corps is simply unremarkable. Nobody caught more than 6 passes in any game and the entire corps only had one 100 yard receiving game for the full season (Greg Little, Wk 15).
- Cleveland will run the ball at the goal line, good news for Trent Richardson. In fact, they ran it every single time at the goal line the entire year except for one play. Plus, there is nobody on the roster to take goal line carries away from Richardson.
- Cleveland scored on only 8 of 36 plays inside the opponents 5.
- The Browns' defense only had 1 defensive/return td last season tying them for worst in the NFL.

QB's: I make no secret of the fact that as a fantasy expert, I like Tony Romo a lot more than most people and last year once again he paid off for me. I took some flack when I pointed out in last year's magazine that per start, Romo has been better in his career from a fantasy perspective than Peyton Manning. Last year Romo had a huge campaign with almost 4,200 yards passing, 32 total td's and only 10 int's. He was simply playing as well as any QB in the league. Plus, Dallas likes to keep the ball in Romo's hands near the goal line. The Cowboys passed 50% of the time from the 1 and they put the ball in Romo's hands almost 70% of the time inside the 5. That makes me warm and toasty at night, like my own set of feety pajamas.

RB's: Don't sleep on DeMarco Murray. Dallas RB's last year had 6 different 100 yard games and Murray has real ability. Sure, Dallas hasn't had a 1,000 yard rusher since 2006 and when RB's got the rock inside the 5, they only scored on 1 of 11 att's, but I think Murray will be a solid play.

WR's: Last year I said Miles Austin "could be a risky pick as a #1 receiver" and wondered if he would be able to stay healthy. He missed a total of six games and didn't have more than 5 catches or 65 yards in the last 11 weeks. Conversely, I love Dez Bryant and really feel that 2012 will be his breakout year. I'm buying, I'm all in, just select him and thank me.

TE's: You look up "A-" in a dictionary Jason Witten will be there waving back at you. He's durable, playing all 16 regular season games since 2004 and has had at least 950 receiving yards in each of the last 5 seasons. He's also led the Cowboys in receptions for the last six seasons and despite the fact it seems he's played forever, he's only 30 years old. Feel free to count him in the top 5 among his position in both catches and yards.

DEFENSE/ST: If you love Rex Ryan, you'll really love his brother Rob Ryan. But I'm not sure no matter how much you love Rob Ryan, if you can bring yourself to profess undying devotion to this unit. I think it'll be better than last year, when they were the 17th overall unit. Their failure was largely based on the fact that they only had one return or defensive td and that number can fluctuate. What I do like about the Dallas' defense is DeMarcus Ware and his 19.5 sacks, which were 2nd in the league. Expect Dallas to be a high end #2 D.

KICKER: Dan Bailey is a good sleeper kicker. He made 32 of 38 FG att's as a rookie last season including 2 of 4 from 50+ while also nailing 3 game winners. Dallas will score points and Bailey could end up on several of my teams.

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

- Jason Witten caught at least 4 passes or had 85 yards receiving in every game but one. Witten has played in all 16 games every year since 2004 and has had at least 900 receiving yards in each of the last 5 seasons.
- Miles Austin missed 6 games but keep in mind, he didn't have more than 5 catches or 65 yards in the last 11 weeks.
- Per start Tony Romo has been better than Peyton Manning. Yep, better than Peyton Manning from a fantasy perspective. The Cowboys know they don't have a goal line back, they passed it 60% of the time from the opponents' 1 and on 45 plays inside the opponents 5, the QB had the ball in his hands on 31 of those plays (translates to almost 70%).
- The Cowboys' defense only had 1 defensive/return td last season tying them for last in the NFL.

QB's: I hear they signed some guy named Peyton Manning. Maybe he'll be okay. I do know this: the philosophy will change now that 18's in town. Denver ran every single play last year from the 1 yard line. You know the deal with Peyton Manning. He's 6'5" 230 lbs with a rocket arm. After a perfect attendance record at school for 13 consecutive seasons, he didn't play a down last year. Some are saying that John Fox is the mountain version of "ground and pound" but Fox lived up to his personnel. He was the guy who made Jake Delhomme a star (say that last sentence out loud twice). I like Manning, I'll bet on him to bounce back.

RB's: I won't give you the tired, overused cliche, "What'chu talkin' 'bout, Willis?" joke. I'll let the less clever go that route. I will point out that McGahee is now on the other side of 30 which is considered old for a RB. It's not quite dog years, which would make him 210 but it's not considered spry either. McGahee is a flex play.

WR's: The WR corps in Denver is another very interesting fantasy question. Demaryius Thomas was a 1st Rnd pick in 2010 and came on in the second half of the year. Including playoffs, in his final seven games, he averaged 5 catches for over 100 yards and scored 4 td's. I'm buying Demaryius Thomas. Eric Decker seems to be that comfortable shoe that Peyton Manning likes to have. No, he's not Marvin Harrison but he can be more than Brandon Stokley. He scored 8 td's last year and that should go up. Buy Decker and thank me later.

TE: I like a guy that Peyton Manning trusts and Peyton Manning trusts Jacob Tamme. Tamme had 67 catches with Manning back in 2010 and if Manning trusts him, I trust him. I will be higher on Tamme then almost everybody else anywhere. If he's your TE and can get him late or cheap, you should be pretty happy.

DEFENSE/ST: Denver was the 21st ranked unit. This was not deceptive. I know people talked about the huge renaissance the def had once Tebow took the reigns and others are pointing to Dennis Allen's influence on the defense but I'm not buying. I love Champ Bailey, Elvis Dumervil and Von Miller, the rest of the group shots me awake at night in a cold sweat.

KICKER: While Tim Tebow earned some "Mr. Clutch" references a year ago, Matt Prater was right there with him with 4 walk-off kicks which didn't even include a 59 yarder that sent the Bears game into OT. While Prater had just 87 and 76 points the last 2 seasons, the addition of Manning at QB may see his productivity jump up closer to the level of his 2009 output when he tallied 122 points.

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

- Peyton Manning played every game for 13 straight years before missing last season with a neck injury. He's been sacked 231 times which is less than half of what Brett Favre (525) and John Elway (518) suffered.
- If you think John Fox is the mountain version of ground and pound, he was the head coach when Jake Delhomme threw for almost 3,900 yards and 29 td's.
- The Broncos ran the football every single play from the opponents 1 yard line but keep in mind that is when they had Tim Tebow. This year, it's coming back from injury Peyton Manning.

DETROIT LIONS

PS '12 DEF RANK #17

QB's: Matthew Stafford had 275+ yards passing in all but one game in the second half of the season. He also surpassed the 300 yard mark in 6 of the final 8. Plus he threw at least 1 td pass in every contest. He is simply a stud who eclipsed 5,000 yards and put up 41 six packs.

RB's: The Lions play like they're allergic to running the football. I never understood the hype around Jahvid Best. It seemed like it was coming from folks who had never watched much film. In fact in the magazine last year I said "I just don't think Best is ever going to be a healthy 16 game, 25 touch guy" and "despite the fact he's considered a speed RB, less than 8% of his runs went for more than 10 yards." Best, of course, got injured and won't be cleared for contact until June. The other RB Mikel Leshoure has had legal trouble (ok, multiple legal troubles) and might not be available for chunks of time.

WR's: Calvin Johnson is the #1 WR. Last year in the magazine I said that I was very bullish on Calvin Johnson and I ranked him higher than most everyone else. Let's move on. The rest of the group is okay. Nate Burleson, Titus Young and Ryan Broyles are all #4 receivers in deep leagues.

TE's: Why don't more people get on the Brandon Pettigrew bandwagon? What's not to like? In 2010 he was in the top 3 in TE receptions and had at least 4 grabs in 10 different games. Last year he followed that up having the 3rd most receptions again including 126 targets. He was the 11th best TE and will be better than that this year. Consider him a legitimate starter.

DEFENSES/ST: Gunther Cunningham is a very intense man and he has passed his intensity on to a defense that generated 7 defensive td's, forced 17 fumbles and planted opposing QB's 41 times. This, despite the fact Ndamukong Suh only had 4 sacks (down from 10 from the previous year). In fact, Suh had more personal foul penalties than sacks! The Lions' defense probably over achieved a little last year and I will not call for them to match their 8th place finish in the final defensive rankings. I Consider the Lions a low end #1, high end #2 defense.

KICKER: Jason Hanson's 126 points last season on FG's/PAT's were the most he's had since 1995! While he'll be 42 prior to the season, fantasy owners won't have to worry about any diminished leg strength issues on long FG's with him (5-7 from 50+ yards last year.) The Lions offense promises to put him in favorable ranges and he's easily a top 10 placekicker in 2012.

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

- Nate Burleson had 110 targets last year while Young finished in the top 50 in overall fantasy points among WR's.
- Matthew Stafford threw for at least 275 yards in 7 of the last 8 games of the season and had at least 300 yards passing in 6 of the final 8 games of the season. Stafford threw at least 1 td pass in every game last season.
- Brandon Pettigrew has been in the top 3 in rec for TE's each of the last 2 years (come on, there's no way you knew that one). Calvin Johnson was targeted 8 different times inside the 5.
- The Lions will try to run the football in for td's. They had 6 different rushes at the goal line and 17 different rushes inside the 5. If the Lion RB's don't score td's, it's not the play caller's fault.
- The Lions had 7 defensive/return td's last season.

RUSH		PASS		• 2011 NUMBERS/RANK •
ATT%/RANK	YDS%/RANK	ATT%/RANK	YDS/RANK	PLAYS/GAME	YARDS/PLAY	YARDS/POINT
42%/23	24%/30	58%/10	76%/3	61.8/28	6.6/2	11.6/1

QB's: Aaron Rodgers is the best player on the planet. He's the MVP, led his team to a 15-1 regular season record and engineered an offense that scored 560 points which was 2nd in the history of the NFL. His 45 td passes vs six int's is better than what your nerdy 12 year old nephew can do on a video game. Add in his 3 rushing td's for a 48-6 ratio and it's comical. He's a #1 player in any format.

RB's: Ryan Grant is gone and so James Starks becomes at least mildly interesting. There are a couple of problems, however. First, Coach Mike McCarthy doesn't seem to need to have one main RB. In fact no RB had more than 15 carries in any game last year. Second, near the goal line John Kuhn becomes a force. He had every RB carry from the 1 last year. This means Starks probably won't score a lot of td's and you know my mantra: "if you don't score td's, you can't play on my fantasy team".

WR's: Greg Jennings missed the last 3 weeks and was still a top 20 performer. If you extrapolate out his statistics, he falls inside the top 10. He should be considered a low end #1. Jordy Nelson is a more interesting case. Only Calvin Johnson had more receiving td's (16) than Jordy Nelson's 15. Nelson was one of only three receivers with double digits td's. I don't particularly think that Nelson will get anywhere near the 15 td's but I do think that Nelson is a good player. In fact in last year's magazine I said "go look at what Jordy Nelson did in the playoffs last year helping Green Bay make their run to a Super Bowl championship" in recommending that you draft him. I hope that you did.

TE's: I love me some Jermichael Finley. Tall, athletic, strong and somebody that Aaron Rodgers trusts. I think he will go up in every category off last year and is one of the players that is due for a legitimate breakout campaign. That being said, he was in the top 5 last year and had the 3rd most td's among TE's. I expect Finley to pay huge dividends this season.

DEFENSE/ST: Dom Capers is a good coordinator but the Packers struggled at times on defense. They gave up the most passing yards in NFL history, only had 29 sacks and allowed more than 70 passes of over 20 yards. As a result, their first 6 picks in the NFL draft were all from defensive players. Still, the unit is probably a tad bit overrated and probably a little closer to their 13th place finish in standard scoring from last year.

KICKER: Mason Crosby is a really good player. A career high FG % in 2011, Green Bay scores a lot of points, Crosby seems relatively unaffected by the wind and cold weather that might belie a Green Bay kicker. He is top 5 at his position.

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

- The Packers were tied for #2 with 7 defensive/return td's last season.
- Aaron Rogers accounted for 48 td's while only throwing 6 int's and he didn't play the final week of the year vs DET who gave up 6 td passes to his backup Matt Flynn. Aaron Rogers had multiple td passes every week but 1.
- No RB for the Packers had 15 carries in any game last season. Rogers has had 16 rushing td's over the last 4 seasons.
- John Coon had every single RB carry at the goal line last year. Once GB got away from the goal line, it was pass, pass, pass. From the 5 yard line in, 24 pass plays, only 5 rushes.

QB's: Matt Schaub missed the last six regular season games with an injury. Early in his career he had a bit of an injury history but in 2010 had made all 16 starts. When he plays, he throws for a bunch of yards and is very productive. He will be a good value when he's taken between the 12th and 15th QB in your draft.

RB's: Arian Foster is my #1 ranked RB. The Texans averaged over 150 yards rushing and they led the league in time of possession. Foster put up monster numbers despite the fact he missed 3 games. If you project out his numbers, he would lap the field. One reason he's such a threat is that he contributes in the pass game and was top 3 in receiving yards among RB's despite missing those 3 contests. Also, he scores td's, having 12 in 13 games. Ben Tate is not a terrible backup. You definitely want to handcuff Foster with Tate in deeper leagues.

RB Arian Foster

WR's It seems like no matter what the position, we're talking about the fact that some Texan missed time and Andre Johnson was no exception. He missed 9 games due to injuries but he still has incredible ability. I know he burned a lot of people last year but he is still a premier force. I'm not a big Kevin Walter fan and DeVier Posey leaves me wanting more. Johnson is the only WR worth owning here.

TE's: Now that Joel Dreessen is gone, I think Owen Daniels' value increases. He had 84 targets last year, which could amount to 100 this year. Owen Daniels is a low end #1 TE who will be good value.

DEFENSE/ST: Wade Phillips is a GREAT DC. He's just not a particularly impressive head coach. Phillips took this defense from 30th to 2nd in yards allowed and that was with Mario Williams missing 11 games. JJ Watt and Brian Cushing lead a group of studs. This defense finished in the top 5 in fantasy points last year despite only having 2 defensive/return td's. They could easily finish in the top 5 again and should be considered a #1 defense in all formats.

KICKER: Neil Rackers set the team record in points and then promptly left for Washington. Randy Bullock is the new kicker and could be a nice little sleeper as your #2 (if your league requires you to draft 2 kickers).

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

- The Texans defense finished in the top 5 in fantasy points and before you say, "Wait a minute, they lost Mario Williams to Buffalo via Free Agency," remember that he missed 11 games last year.
- Andre Johnson was only targeted inside the 5 one time last year. At the goal line the Texans like to run it. They ran the football 88% of the time at the goal line.

QB's: These are not your father's Indianapolis Colts. In fact they are not even your older brother's Indianapolis Colts. The team will look completely different on offense this year starting with the #1 overall pick Andrew Luck. I believe Luck will be a great player someday but given his O-line and inexperience in the league, I don't think this will be the year to have him as the face of your fantasy team. Currently I slot Luck as the 23rd overall QB. I do think it will come quickly though for Luck. His OC is Bruce Arians who also tutored Ben Roethlisberger and some guy named Peyton Manning.

WR Reggie Wayne

RB's: I don't hate Donald Brown. In fact I'll have him a little higher than most folks. He averaged almost 5 yards per carry last year and is reputable. Consider him a decent flex play, but not a starter at the position. Joseph Addai is now in New England so he's out of the way. The rest of the competition is simply not of high NFL quality.

WR's: Reggie Wayne hasn't missed a game in 10 years and has 8 straight years of at least 75 catches and 960 yards. He had 131 targets last year which puts him in the Top 10 and ahead of guys like Jordy Nelson, Steve Smith, Percy Harvin, Mike Wallace and AJ Green. That being said, I consider Wayne a low end #2 at best. Austin Collie is on the other side and has had numerous concussions and you have to wonder if he's anything more than a one week stop gap if you get stuck.

TE's: The Colts seemingly like smart guys. They took the Stanford kid #1 overall and then later drafted his teammate in the 2nd round, TE Coby Fleener. Fleener is athletic and will make an immediate impact. He's not a #1 TE but Fleener is a very solid number two.

DEFENSE/ST: The Colts were 2nd worst in the NFL last year from a fantasy perspective. I'd rather you think about taking a bath with a plugged in toaster than draft this unit.

KICKER: Adam Vinatieri is now entrenched in Indianapolis, the problem is that he's just not in the league anymore. Someday he will be in Canton giving a Hall of Fame speech. He probably won't recognize this season in his address. Find a different kicker.

QB's: Everything is new in Jacksonville. New owner, new uniforms, new coaching staff, the problem is it's the same ole' Blaine Gabbert at QB. Yes, I know it's only year two but time doesn't exactly fly when you're not having fun. The Jags were last in the NFL in virtually every meaningful passing statistic and after hearing one of my brother's say that Blaine Gabbert "couldn't play dead in a cowboy movie" I got a good laugh but didn't have a good retort. Look elsewhere.

RB's: Maurice Jones-Drew is a holdout and has 2 years left on his deal. This could get ugly. If he does decide that he wants to play, however, he is a boy-dog warrior beast. In fact, all but one goal line carry went to Maurice Jones-Drew last year. Moreover, every RB carry inside the 5 went to Jones-Drew except for one. I like guys who get the ball at the goal line plus Jones-Drew won't hurt you as a receiver either. Finally, in addition to being part of the pass game and the definitive goal line back, Jones-Drew also totes the rock. He was #1 carrying the football with 343 rushes last season, a whopping 42 more than anyone else in football. This is all a long way of me saying Jones-Drew is a workhorse, he's good and he's a 1st round pick.

WR's: It looks a little bit different in Jacksonville this year. Sure, Mike Thomas is back but Lee Evans was brought in as a free agent, Laurent Robinson was given a 5 year, 32.5 million dollar contract and the Jags traded up to draft Justin Blackmon from Oklahoma St. The unit will be better than their performance and you may want them on your team next year.

TE's: Marcedes Lewis emerged in 2010 scoring double digit td's and perhaps one of the most curious fantasy developments LY was that he played in 15 games and didn't catch a single td pass, a goose egg, a donut, zip, zilch, zero. In all likelihood he'll be somewhere in the middle. What's more troublesome is the fact that in 15 games last year Lewis only caught more than 4 passes once and only had more than 50 yards receiving twice. Look elsewhere.

DEFENSE/ST: This is perhaps the strength of the Jacksonville team from a fantasy perspective. The Jags were just outside the top 10 last year in fantasy points. In fact, they were 5 points out of being in the top 10 in the final standings. That being said, you can probably wait on drafting Jacksonville. If your league takes 2 defenses and you're stacked everywhere else, in the final round you can sneak Jacksonville onto your roster.

KICKER: If you are a major league pitcher the 3 dirtiest words are "Doctor James Andrews" (who I'm sure is a very nice man). In football the 2 dirtiest words might be "franchise tag." Jacksonville threw the dreaded franchise tag on their veteran kicker Josh Scobee and while Scobee is a solid player, he is not a particularly great fantasy kicker. You should consider him a reach as a #2 kicker in a deep league.

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

- Laurent Robinson had 11 t'ds last year with the Cowboys. Only Jordy Nelson and Calvin Johnson had more rec td's among WRs.
- Marcedes Lewis went from double digit td's in 2010 to none last year.
- Maurice Jones-Drew had every goal line carry but one last year and every RB carry inside the 5 (excluding the 1).
- Blane Gabbert had 413 attempts last year and only threw 12 td passes.
- Only 2 players in the NFL had more than 300 rushes last year, Maurice Jones-Drew had the most attempts with 343. Michael Turner was 2nd, barely cracking the 300 mark with 301.

KANSAS CITY CHIEFS

PS '12 OFF RANK #14
PS '12 DEF RANK #9

QB's: Matt Cassel's season ended in Wk 10 but through 10 weeks he was not exactly impressive. Cassel had zero 300 yard games and has struggled without former OC Charlie Weis. I rank Cassel as my 26th best fantasy QB, which means he probably won't be on your team.

RB's: Jamaal Charles missed essentially all of 2011 with a knee injury but is expected to return. It took until summer to get him to be cleared to play and there is definitely some concern as to how he will preform. Partly as a result of that, the KC Chiefs have brought in Peyton Hillis, who dealt with a hamstring injury last season and couldn't follow up on his magical 2010 campaign. Hillis is a nice vulture pick especially considering Charles is small and will never be considered a goal line back. Moreover, every single time the Chiefs ran the ball from the 1 last year, they scored. That is good news for Hillis owners.

WR's: In 2010 Dwyane Bowe scored 15 td's which was 3 more than anybody else in the NFL! Last year Bowe snuck just inside the top 20 receivers and his td's dropped to 5 (QB inconsistency). He did however have over 80 catches, over 1,100 yards receiving and 141 targets. If the td's can creep up to 8 or 9, Bowe should creep up to a solid #2 WR. The rest of the group isn't noteworthy, although you might want to take a flyer on Steve Breaston very late in a very deep league.

WR Dwayne Bowe

TE's: Tony Moeaki missed all of last year and he returns. The Chiefs also bring in Kevin Boss who was released by the Oakland Raiders. Neither makes me "giddy as a school girl," and neither will make my top 20 TE rankings.

DEFENSE/ST: The Chiefs were the 18th ranked fantasy D last year but there is reason to think they could be better. The LB corps is very good and Tamba Hali and Justin Houston combined for 17.5 of the team's 29 sacks. If the Chiefs can stop the run a little better, they can perhaps be a solid second defense on a standard fantasy team.

KICKER: Ryan Succop is the very definition of solid but that is the very reason why you would never draft him before the very last round.

QB's: The Dolphins started the season 0-7 then finished a respectable 6-3. Shockingly though, the Dolphins decided to clean house and did not consider the end of the year success a building block. It starts with a new QB, Ryan Tannehill, who was drafted as the #8 overall pick out of Texas A&M. Look, we all know Tannehill will be the eventual starter as OC Mike Sherman was his college coach but they will likely start the year with Matt Moore and they also brought in David Garrard. In any event, you don't want anybody from this group on your team this year.

RB's: Reggie Bush rushed for over 1,000 yards last year and finished as the 12th overall fantasy RB. I don't expect him to replicate those numbers. I do expect Daniel Thomas, last year's 2nd pick, to exceed his 581 yards and there's almost no way he will not score a single rushing td on 165 carries again. Thomas is a very good late sleeper pick.

WR's: Davone Bess had well over 100 targets in 2010 and now that Brandon Marshall has moved on to Chicago, I expect Bess to get significant looks again. He's an underrated commodity that should be considered a low end #3, high end #4 receiver. Legedu Naanee comes in from San Diego and becomes interesting as well in very deep leagues.

TE: Anthony Fasano doesn't catch a lot of passes but he makes the most of his opportunities. Fasano only had 32 grabs but did score 5 td's. Considering only 3 TE's caught 8 or more td's, he becomes a low end #2 selection.

DEFENSE/ST: The Miami Dolphins were the 20th ranked fantasy defense at the end of last year in part because they only had one defensive/return td the entire season. If that number goes up, and this unit continues to improve, they could be a low end #2 defense. Keep advised though, that coordinator Kevin Coyle will change the Fish from a 3-4 to a 4-3 scheme. Fortunately, they still have Cameron Wake who has averaged almost 10 sacks per year over the last 3 years. In the end though, there are probably better units to own than the Dolphins.

KICKER: Dan Carpenter is good. He was the 15th ranked fantasy kicker last season and should perform right about there this year. If your league only selects one kicker, you can probably do better. If they select two, he's a very solid #2.

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

- Brandon Marshall is gone and in '10 Davone Bess had 125 targets and 79 receptions. He should be a reception machine.
- Miami will throw the football close to the goal line. Inside the 5 (excluding from the 1 yd line), Miami att'd to throw the football 30 times as opposed to only 9 runs and on the 9 running plays, they failed to score a td on 8 of them. Also, Daniel Thomas is a big boy but has not figured out how to use that girth to hit paydirt. Thomas was 0-7 from inside the 5 and 0-4 from the 1 yd line last year.
- Daniel Thomas did not have a rushing td in 165 attempts.
- The Dolphins defense only had 1 defensive/return td last season tying them for worst in the NFL.

QB's: Last year at this time, fans of the Norsemen had a bounce in their step because Donovan McNabb was their QB. In last year's magazine I said "he is simply overrated at this point in his career" and "taking a flyer on Christian Ponder wouldn't be the worst thing in the world." This year it's Ponder's show. He was the very definition of mediocre last year completing right around 55% of his passes and being a "even Steven" with 13 td's and 13 int's. He gets help with the Vikings taking USC OT Matt Kalil with the 4th overall pick in the draft and I think the Vikings will be improved along the line. Suffice it to say, Ponder's numbers will improve but he will not be fantasy royalty.

RB's: Adrian Peterson missed 4 of his last 6 games and is coming off major injury, specifically a torn left ACL last December. He says he will be ready to go earlier than expected but it is doubtful that he will be ready for the start of the season. His backup, Toby Gerhart, averaged 80 yards per contest in the games Peterson missed and had over 100 rushing yards in Wk 15 vs Washington. Two things I like about Gerhart. First, Minnesota ran the ball 75% of the time they were at the goal line giving Gerhart excellent opportunities to score some td's. Second, Gerhart had 3 receiving td's last year and caught over 80% of the balls targeted his way so he will make an impact in the pass game as well. I would be comfortable if you drafted both players on your team because Peterson may ultimately win you a fantasy title.

WR's: Percy Harvin is a jitterbug. He had more than 1,200 yards from scrimmage last year and simply makes plays. In fact, Harvin was the 8th ranked receiver in the final fantasy standings. He had 122 targets, 87 catches and almost 1,000 yards. Plus he picked up a couple of rushing td's, something most receivers won't do. I like Harvin as a solid #2. The rest of the WR corps is mediocre at best. Jerome Simpson comes over from Cincinnati, Michael Jenkins is in the mix as well but nobody stands out other than Harvin.

TE's: There is a bit of a log jam. Kyle Rudolph is an unbelievable athlete but he is now joined by fellow Notre Damer, John Carlson who signs as a free agent after leaving the Seahawks. Neither guy should really be your starter.

DEFENSE/ST: The Vikings ranked in the bottom quarter of units. They simply are not good enough to make your fantasy roster. Go elsewhere.

KICKER: In 2010 Ryan Longwell was almost perfect. In 2011 he was a little shaky. In 2012 he won't be with the Vikings having been released. It looks like it will be the Blair Walsh project (yes, I know that was a little easy but every once and a while you have to pick the low hanging fruit) but I will not be taking Blair Walsh on any of my fantasy teams.

QB's: Tom Brady is going to the Hall of Fame and is someone that you can put on your team at any point and have a chance to win. In fact, in three of his last four years when he was not battling serious injury, he averaged 42 td passes per year. Last year, he was a monster in the second half and in seven of his last nine games he had more than 300 yards passing. Draft Brady and sleep well at night.

RB's: BenJarvus Green-Ellis had been a td machine for the Patriots, having double digit td's each of the last 2 years. That slack will be picked up by someone else because New England scores rushing td's. Virtually every year this unit combines for 20 td's with one player having more than 10. This year it is likely to be Stevan Ridley, who will be very undervalued. Sure, veteran Matt Light retired but Josh McDaniels is back at the helm as the OC which means everybody's numbers might go up. Remember, he was the OC back in 2007 when New England set records. The thing you have to worry about with New England's run game, is yards. They had only one 100 yard rusher all year last year. Joseph Addai comes into the mix but you have to wonder how much he has left and if he will be able to make any impact.

WR's: Jabar Gaffney comes over from Washington and Brandon Lloyd signs as a free agent from St Louis. Brandon Lloyd can definitely play and 2 years ago led the NFL in receiving yards. He should be a very attractive, low end #2. Wes Welker is one of the top WR's on the board. If you are in a PPR league, he might be #1. Welker had 6 or more catches in 13 of his 16 games but is probably the player whose value slides the most base upon whether or not you play in the PPR format. The question with the WR corps is how many td's? They certainly don't get the easy ones. In 25 plays run at the goal line last year by the Patriots, only one play was an attempted throw to a WR (say that sentence out loud again and let it marinate).

TE's: At TE there are two and both are worth owning. First Rob Gronkowski. He was approximately 50 points better than any other TE in football and over 100 fantasy points better than any TE not named Jimmy Graham. 124 targets, 90 catches, which was 2nd among TE's and 17 td's which were 6 more than anyone else. He also had the most receiving yards among TE's with 1,327. He is a beast. Can you imagine what his numbers would be if not for Aaron Hernandez playing that position on the other side. Hernandez was the 3rd ranked fantasy TE last year, had 111 targets, was Top 5 in TE rec's with 79 and scored 7 td's in his own right. I think Hernandez comes back down a little bit and I don't expect Gronkowski to be anywhere near 17 td's but they are still both elite.

DEFENSE/ST: The Patriots defense was bad last year. In a 32 team league they ranked 31st in Def ypg. Almost everyone slumped and struggled. As a result, you would think the Patriots would have been an awful defense. Instead they were really still mediocre finishing 19th but their name is better than their performance, let somebody else take this unit.

KICKER: Stephen Gostkowski is a stud. He can be my fantasy kicker anytime. Don't reach for him but if he's sitting there on the board, grab him and thank me later. He ranks as my #1 overall kicker based upon his con-

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

- Brandon Lloyd was Top 5 in NFL targets last year with 150.
- Only 2 players had at least 100 catches (Wes Welker 122, Roddy White ATL 100).
- Wes Welker, Rob Gronkowski and Aaron Hernandez had two-thirds of Brady's targets. Brady threw a career high 611 passes last year.
- Gronkowski has 28 td's in 2 seasons as a TE. Say that sentence out loud again.
- Tom Brady was actually better in the second half of the season throwing for at least 300 yards in 7 of the last 9 games. Wes Welker had at least 6 catches in 13 of 16 games. The Patriots have had a person rush for double digit td's in each of the last 2 years. NE ran 25 plays at the goal line last year and only 1 targeted a WR - that's ANY WR.
- Tom Brady actually had 3 rushing td's last year.
- Rob Gronkowski had 1,300+ yards receiving (so did New Orleans's Jimmy Graham) while no other TE even hit 1,000.
- Aaron Hernandez had the 4th most receiving yards by any TE last year (910). He was also Top 5 in receptions by TE's.

QB's: Drew Brees is simply a stud. Forget the bounty program, the Sean Payton suspension, the Jonathan Vilma suspension, the Will Smith suspension or the fact that the Louisiana state legislature voted 28-1 to ask Roger Goodell to take it easy on their Saints. Drew Brees isn't taking it easy on anybody. He broke Dan Marino's passing record by putting up almost 5,500 yards for the year and had 46 td passes to boot. The Saints averaged 335 passing yards per game with Brees at the helm. He's great.

RB's: You look up RB-by-committee and it's the Saints guys waving back at you. They are productive, ranked inside the top 10 in the league with over 130 rushing yards per game. Mark Ingram, Pierre Thomas and Darren Sproles all contribute. Heck, Chris Ivory led the team in carries in 5 of the last 6 games. Darren Sproles is probably the most desirable of the bunch having finished as the 8th best fantasy RB last year. He won the RB quadruple crown leading all RB's in targets (111), receptions (87), receiving yards (710) and td's (7). Throw in 600 yards rushing and couple of td's and Darren Sproles is very valuable. Obviously even more valuable in a PPR format. Speaking of PPR, over the last 2 years Pierre Thomas has caught more than 90% of the passes thrown his way, Wow! Mark Ingram is solid but certainly not spectacular. Perhaps he will break out of the pack. The good news is that if they do establish one RB (like Mark Ingram) they like to run the ball in close. Of their 7 goal line plays last year, 5 were rushes by the RB's.

WR's: Marques Colston is very consistent. At least 70 grabs, 1,000 yards and 7 td's in 5 of his first 6 years in the league. He was a bonafide #1 and keep in mind when you look at his year end stats, he missed 2 games. The rest of the Saints' WR corps is by committee and it's risky to count on anybody. Lance Moore, Devery Henderson and Company can be great one week and disappear the next.

TE's: Jimmy Graham - boy wonder. Last year I ranked him as a #1 TE and was basically the only publication to do so. This year he is my #2 overall TE, coming off his year where he was #1 in catches among TE's with 99 and #1 in targets with 149. Add in the fact that he was 2nd in yards and td's and he becomes a star. In fact, if you take out NE Gronk's year, Jimmy Graham would have led TE's in every single category and done so by a mile.

DEFENSE/ST: The Saints defense is decimated, they are in a lot of shoot outs and they don't get an awful lot of turnovers. As a result, they were one of the 5 worst fantasy defenses in the NFL last year. Stay away.

KICKER: Feel free to grab the Saints kicker, Garrett Hartley. The problem is that Hartley has been injury prone and John Kasay was re-signed this spring. All Kasay did last year was set the team record with 147 points and made 28-34 FG attempts and gave them a nice veteran presence.

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

- It's not going to really help you in fantasy but it's crazy to note that the Louisiana state senate voted 28-1 to implore Roger Goodell to reconsider his penalty vs the Saints.
- Drew Brees completed more than 71% of his passes last year
- On a team with Darren Sproles, Pierre Thomas and Mark Ingram, Chris Ivory led the team in totes 5 of the last 6 games.
- Before you think NO is just pass-happy, they ran the football 71% of the time at the goal line.
- Darren Sproles led all RB's in targets, receptions, receiving yards and receiving td's.
- Jimmy Grant had 149 targets last year, 23 more than any other TE.

QB's: Eli Manning is 31 and when you think durability, you think about his older brother Peyton but while Peyton missed the entire year last year, Eli Manning has now started 121 straight games. Plus, he's really coming into his own as an elite fantasy player. Almost 5,000 yards, 30 total td's and the int's dropped down to 16. Eli is a bonafide #1 and should be considered anywhere between the 7th and 10th best fantasy QB. I'm not concerned about the fact that James Brewer is the RT, and while the team lost Brandon Jacobs and Mario Manningham, they did bring in RB David Wilson and WR Rueben Randle via the draft.

RB's: Ahmad Bradshaw always has better numbers than you'll think. He'll do the same thing this year. I will rank him higher than most folks, and he will pay dividends once again. He was in the Top 20 last year despite the fact that he missed 4 gms. If you extrapolate out his numbers over a full ssn, he would have been well inside the Top 15. Grab him now, thank me later. Plus, he's good around the goal line and the Giants like to run it in close giving the ball to the RB 9 of 12 plays at the 1.

WR's: Hakeem Nicks missed 1 game and broke his metatarsal in May but I'm still buying. He's tough to cover, he is fast in the open field and he's got a QB who knows how to get him the ball. Nicks should be considered a Top 10 receiver. Victor Cruz is a more curious case. He only had 2 catches in his first 2 games and was basically a non factor until Wk 3 and then he exploded finishing in the Top 5 in fantasy WR's, Top 3 in td's scored by WR's and 3rd in receiving yards. I drop Cruz down a little bit and call him a borderline #1, high end #2 starter.

TE's: Martellus Bennett comes over from Dallas signing with the Giants as a free agent. Bennett was highly touted coming out of college and has ability. I like him better than most folks and think he's a good flyer pick.

DEFENSE/ST: The Giants' defense is simply overrated. They were 2 points away from being one of the 10 worst defenses in fantasy football. Sure they have Justin Tuck and Jason Pierre-Paul on the ends and they'll get some sacks, but it's not a great defense and should be on somebody else's team.

KICKER: Lawrence Tynes is steady Eddie in terms of points. He'll miss some short FG's and if that counts against your league's scoring, you may want to go elsewhere. Otherwise, he's very mediocre.

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

- The Giants were a measly 2 points away from being one of the 10 worst fantasy units last year on defense.
- Eli Manning has played in 121 straight games. When calculating what Victor Cruz did last year, keep in mind he only had 2 catches through the first 2 games. In the redzone, the Giants only run the football if they are really close. At the goal line they ran it 9 out of 12 plays. When they weren't on the 1, but inside the 5, they passed 16 of 23 plays.
- The Giants' defense only had 1 defensive/return td last season tying them for worst in the NFL.

QB's: I make no secret of the fact that I don't think Mark Sanchez is a franchise QB. Fortunately, I have a lot of facts and ammunition to counteract anybody who would even suggest otherwise. Sure, Sanchez has stepped up big in some playoff games and yes, he was the 10th fantasy QB last year. But the arrival of Tim Tebow should hurt his numbers. Part of the reason Sanchez ended up on the top 10 was that he tied Tebow for 2nd with 6 rushing td's. With Tebow in town, don't expect that number to be the same. What will probably be the same is the 26 turnovers from Sanchez last year which is shockingly high. I expect his production to come down and Tebow at some point to be given an opportunity to play. As far as Tebow is concerned, he's never going to throw for a lot of yards and certainly won't throw for a lot of td's. He did have over 650 yards rushing and scored 6 td's and will probably be able to get you some points with his legs. In the end, however, there are better options in your league.

RB's: Shonn Greene seems to be the man now that LaDainian Tomlinson is gone and Greene will get a lot of carries. Moreover, he should get some yardage this year. In fact, in 8 of their last 12 games, Greene had at least 70 yards rushing. The problem is that he's not very good at the goal line. Greene was 40% from the 1 yard line. Everyone else on the team was over 70%. This does not bode well if you like guys who score td's, and certainly I do.

WR's: Santonio Holmes doesn't score much and has had 6 or less td's in every one of his NFL seasons except 2, and in those 2, he only scored 8. Add in the fact he only had 654 yards receiving last year and the arrival of Tebow and Holmes and almost everybody else in that pass game is exactly what their name suggests, a "pass." Plaxico Burress leaves and now Jeremy Kerley, Chaz Schilens and Stephen Hill will try and pick up the slack. Let them do it before you buy.

TE's: Dustin Keller was a surprise last year and in a positive way. Keller ended up in the top 10 for fantasy points for TE's with 116 targets, 65 catches and over 800 yards. In fact, he averaged 5 receptions per game over his last 7. I think Keller drops down a bit and becomes a solid #2.

DEFENSE/ST: The Jets gave up more than 350 points and more than 125 than they yielded in HC Rex Ryan's first season. They are getting old and they can't back up the swagger. In fact, they were torched by Philadelphia and the NY Giants in big spots in December when they lost 3 straight to end their season. I still love Darrelle Revis and think the Jets are a #1 unit but they are not in contention for the #1 spot (yes, I just went Luda on you there).

KICKER: Nick Folk will miss some kicks (6 last year, 9 the year before) and had less than 20 FG's. He's a #2 kicker and should be ranked somewhere around 15.

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

- Mark Sanchez was one of the top 10 fantasy QB's last season but read the fine print. The biggest reason he made the top 10 was 6 rushing td's, the exact number Tim Tebow had and Tebow is now a Jet.
- Tim Tebow has rushed for 6 td's in each of the last 2 seasons, in 2010 he did it in only 3 games.
- In 8 of the last 12 games Shonn Greene had at least 70 yards rushing. Dustin Keller averaged 5 grabs per game over the last 7. Greene is not a goal line back. He scored on 40% of his attempts from the 1 yard line. The other ball carriers scored on over 70% of their attempts.
- Mark Sanchez threw 18 int's and had a whopping 8 fumbles, by far the most of any QB.
- Tim Tebow had 6 rushing td's last year, but he also fumbled 6 times last year as well.

QB's: Carson Palmer was signed midseason and then had a bye to get his sea legs. He had at least 250 yards passing in 6 of his final 9 games and in one of the 3 he failed to hit 250, he had 247. Plus, Palmer can take it in at the goal line and may sneak his way for 2 or 3 extra td's with his legs. I know he threw only 13 td's and 16 int's but he'll be better this year. That being said, don't confuse yourself, I'm not saying he should be your fantasy starter, but he could be your fantasy backup.

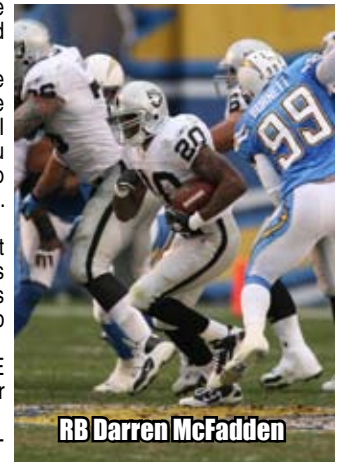

RB's: Darren McFadden was averaging 21 touches a game before his season ended and he clearly has ability but you always know there is an injury risk. In last year's magazine I said "if I drafted McFadden I would make sure that Michael Bush ended up on my roster as well." You certainly needed him. The good news for McFadden is the Raiders do like to run it inside the 5. Of their 28 plays inside the 5, 23 were rushes. Good news IF he can stay healthy.

WR's Darrius Heyward-Bey won't get the most attention but he had at least 5 catches and 75 yards in 3 of the last 4 games. I think the unit as a whole will be better. The same can be said for Denarius Moore who is probably the best of the lot. These are all #3 receivers but could end up being good flex plays.

TE's: Brandon Myers and David Ausberry will battle it out for the TE job. One of them will start. Neither better be starting for you on your fantasy roster.

DEFENSE/ST: The Raiders were P-U-trid last year on defense finishing in the bottom 5 of the NFL. There wasn't much to like. They'll be better this year but not THAT much better.

KICKER: Sebastian Janikowski "a nice polish boy" (that's what my mom calls him, she's polish) can kick it a country mile. He was a former 1st round pick out of Florida St and has actually lived up to what you would want out of a 1st round pick. He went to the Pro Bowl last year, tied the NFL record with a 63 yard FG and is very accurate. Kee doggies for everybody. Sebas is legit.

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

- Carson Palmer is better than you think. He had at least 250 yards passing in 6 of his last 9 games after the bye and in one of the 3 where he failed to hit 250, he tallied 247.
- Darrius Heyward-Bey had at least 5 catches and 75 yards receiving in 3 of his last 4 games.
- Half the plays from the goal line were QB sneaks for Oakland and from inside the 5, OAK ran it 82% of the time.

QB's: I'm going out on a limb, right here, right now. Michael Vick has a resurgent year and will outperform where he's drafted. In fact I have him ranked as one of the Top 5 QB's in fantasy. He missed 3 games last year and still finished just 5 points out of the Top 10. Extrapolate those numbers out and he would have been close to the Top 5. Despite missing 3 games he had 589 yards rushing. He only had 1 rushing td (for example Mark Sanchez had 6 and Tom Brady 3). That number will go up as will the passing yards. In 2010 his lowest passing yardage in any complete game played was 218 as Adam Sandler says in the Hanukkah song "not too shabby". Legs, arms, versatility and the question is health. Last year when people were calling him a top flight QB I backed off saying that there was no way he would play more than 14 games. This year I'm back on Vick when everyone else is off.

RB's: LeSean McCoy was the #2 fantasy RB last year. He scored 17 rushing td's, 5 more than anyone else and had 20 td's total. A monster year in anyone's book. He will not have the same td production this year. I do like the fact that he has had 160 targets over the last 2 years and you can expect him to be versatile and help out in the pass game. He's clearly a 1st round pick, the question is simply, how high?

WR's: Jeremy Maclin missed the same 3 games that Michael Vick missed yet Maclin still had 97 targets, more than 850 yards and was 9 points out of being in the Top 25 of fantasy WR's. He'll make the Top 25 this year and is an excellent flex play. DeSean Jackson isn't big, he's missed games in each of the last 3 years, he's a terrible option in a PPR league (he's never caught 60 passes in any year, he's not a td machine and has never had double digit td's) and is simply overrated because he's exciting and people want his electric ability. He's good having finished as the 27th fantasy WR last year, but he's not better than that.

TE's: Brent Celek exceeded expectations coming on fast to finish in the Top 10 among fantasy TE's. 96 targets and over 800 yards receiving were very solid numbers but he's never been Michael Vick's favorite. If Vick stays healthy, I think Celek is a bit overrated. I think of him as a high end #2 as opposed to #1 plus he's not going to score a lot of td's. In 11 goal line plays last year the Eagles ran it 10 times and that means Celek is likely blocking and not jumping up and down waving his arms in the endzone when the Eagles are in close.

DEFENSE/ST: The Eagles lost 8 of their first 12 games last year but finished strong winning their final 4 and giving up just 46 total points in those 4 wins. They led the league with 50 sacks last year and if they can cut down on the 27 td passes they gave up, the Eagles can be a very nice bargain as a defense. Consider them a legitimate starting defense in your fantasy league. Plus they added DeMeco Ryans from Houston. I like where this unit is headed.

KICKER: Alex Henery did pretty well in 2011 as a rookie kicker for a cold weather team replacing a long-time fantasy producer in David Akers. He scored 118 pts and only missed 3 FG's hitting 5 of 6 from 40+ for leagues that place a value on distance kicks. He has a ton of potential in 2012 as the Eagles have some serious explosive ability on paper. He should have a nice overall season and is worth a look. Owners need to make sure they monitor Vick's health as if he goes down, then picking up a week to week matchup kicker is a good idea as the offense may not put Henery in position to succeed.

QB's: Quick, what was Pittsburgh's record last year? Answer: 12-4. It seems like every year we question this team in the offseason yet every year they are right there battling it out for the overall #1 seed in the AFC. Part of the reason has been Roethlisberger's 61% or better completion % in each of the last 3 years and when you look at his numbers from last year, remember that he missed a game. Roethlisberger is now 30 but I think he'll have a very nice year. The Steelers selected OL in both the 1st and 2nd rounds of the NFL draft plus their new OC is Todd Haley, who will put Roethlisberger in a position to succeed.

RB's: Todd Haley likes to run and this means that Isaac Redman could be one of the best values in any draft. Redman had 17 carries for 121 yards in the Steelers playoff game last year and 19 carries for 92 yards in the finale vs Cleveland when he took over for Rashard Mendenhall (out after ACL surgery). Therefore, if you give Redman the ball, he'll give you some production. Plus, the starting RB (whoever it may have been) got every single rush at the goal line. There is no FB to vulture easy td's away. I like Redman more than most.

WR's: If you are in a PPR league, you probably don't like Mike Wallace as much as most. Even in a non-PPR, I think he's a little overrated. Antonio Brown, meanwhile, will be a bit underrated. Consider this: in 9 of the last 11 games of 2011 Brown either had more catches, more yards or both when you compare him side to side with Wallace. He just may be the better player this year. Both had 1,000 yards, both had value. Brown just has more value because Wallace has the bigger name. Hines Ward retired but this is not much of a loss. He gave them almost no production last year and had become, from a fantasy prospective anyway, a non-factor.

TE's: Heath Miller is steady, heady and ready. The problem is he's ready to block, he's ready to catch a 6 yard out and he's not ready for big plays or lots of td's. Therefore, Heath Miller is a solid #2 TE at best. In the end you could probably do better.

DEFENSE/ST: Pittsburgh is the most consistent bet on the board. I rank San Francisco #1 but Pittsburgh is the steadiest. Great players, great scheme, a Hall of Fame DC, they will hold opponents to single digit points and ranked #1 in fewest yards and points allowed in the NFL last year. The names are all reputable in James Harrison, LaMarr Woodley, Troy Polamalu, Ryan Clark, Ike Taylor, Lawrence Timmons. This group is studly and can be my defense anytime.

KICKERS: I don't like the stadium, I don't like the weather and I'm not particularly fond of Shaun Suisham. They also signed rookie Grant Ressel as a free agent so who knows what they are going to do. I know what you're going to do with the Pittsburgh kicking game - PUNT!

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

- Ben Roethlisberger has completed at least 61% of his passes in 3 straight yrs. He's also missed at least 1 game in all 3 yrs.
- From the goal line, the Steelers give the rock to their RB. Of their 11 goal line plays last year the starting RB was called upon 7 times, very good news if Redmon gets the job.
- In 9 of the last 11 games, Antonio Brown had more catches, yards or both than Mike Wallace.
- Heinz Field is known as the graveyard of kickers and though Suisham hit 10-14 at home, he was only 1-5 was from 40+.
- Sure, I love the Pittsburgh defense but thanks in part to injuries among the front line starters Seattle, Detroit and Cincinnati all finished ahead of the Steelers in terms of total fantasy points last year.

QB's: Philip Rivers had 25 turnovers last year which was uncharacteristic but he did produce more than 4,600 passing yards and 28 total td's throwing it a whopping 582 times. That landed him inside the Top 10 for fantasy QB's which is about where he should be again. Rivers has thrown at least 27 td passes in 4 straight years. Seven of his last 9 games, Rivers had at least 270 yards passing and is a yardage machine.

RB's: This is a very interesting position in fact it is one of the most interesting in football. I know Ryan Mathews has burned more owners than a hot stove but he has shown glimpses when healthy and now Mike Tolbert's td ability is not only out of San Diego, but he's playing FB in Carolina. I am exceptionally high on Ryan Mathews. He only played 14 games last year but had at least 15 touches in every one of those games but 1. That should go up significantly which means a lot more fantasy points. The concern with Mathews is he had exactly zero touches at the goal line but last year 6 of their 8 goal line plays put the ball in another RB's hands. If he can score from close in, he should have an unbelievable season and don't discount what he's done previously. He did have 1,546 yards from scrimmage and rushed for over 1,000 yards.

WR's: Vincent Jackson is gone taking his talents to Tampa (didn't someone else take their talents to Florida a few years back?). Robert Meachem and Eddie Royal come on board to compliment Malcom Floyd. Floyd's production should increase over last year's 856 yards receiving and 5 td's as he only had 70 targets, that should go up to 100. Floyd, who was the 32nd ranked fantasy WR at the end of the year last season should be somewhere around #20 this year.

TE's: Antonio Gates actually might be getting healthier as he gets older. He's been bothered by a toe injury that has kept him from being an absolute elite TE. Instead, he's only been really good, finishing last year as the 7th best TE despite missing 3 games. If he plays all 16 games, he's a top 3 guy. The only concern is 2 of SD's Pro Bowl linemen are now out of the equation as LT Marcus McNeill was cut and LG Kris Dielman called it a career. You have to wonder if Gates will have the time to get downfield.

DEFENSE/ST: A few years ago San Diego's D was elite and two years ago they were actually the #1 ranked D (non fantasy) but last year they were 25th out of 32 teams in terms of fantasy points. Their secondary is awful, they can't stop anybody on 3rd down and they haven't fixed their gapping holes. Go to a different team for your D.

KICKER: Nate Kaeding returns after essentially being out all of last season with a knee injury. He is very good and very accurate. He's a better-than-you-realize kicker that should be thought of as a low end #1. I won't be disappointed if Kaeding is on your team.

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

- Ryan Mathews split time LY with Mike Tolbert but in the 14 gms that he did play, he had at least 15 touches in every game but one.
- Philip Rivers had at least 270 yards passing in 7 of his last 9 games and has thrown at least 27 td passes in 4 straight years.
- It's still to be seen if Ryan Mathews could be the goal line back. He did not have a single touch for the opponents 1 yd line last year as all six carries went to somebody else.
- Ryan Mathrews was top 5 in receiving yards among RB's last year.

PS '12 OFF RANK #16
PS '12 DEF RANK #1

RUSH ATT%/RANK	RUSH YDS%/RANK	PASS ATT%/RANK	PASS YDS/RANK	2011 NUMBERS/RANK PLAYS/GAME	YARDS/PLAY	YARDS/POINT
52%/3	41%/5	48%/30	59%/28	62.1/25	5.0/24	13.1/2

QB's: I know Alex Smith didn't put up monster stats and San Francisco was in the bottom 3 in the NFL in passing but in the first 2 rounds of the draft, they selected Illinois WR AJ Jenkins and Oregon RB LaMichael James who should be a pass catching speed threat. Smith's 17 td's should go up but so should his 5 int's. He is a borderline #2 or good #3 QB but really no better. Don't let the 13-3 record fool you, this is not an elite pass game.

RB's: Frank Gore is not good at the goal line. Gore only scored twice on 7 attempts while the rest of the team produced 5 td's and 8 attempts. Plus, he's getting older and is no longer a real threat in the pass game. Gore did not have a single 100 yard game in his last 10 (including the playoffs) and only caught 17 passes all season long (none for td's). Unlike some other RB's, Gore played in 16 games yet the production simply was not there. The production should go down once again and Gore, who finished 13th in fantasy points by a RB, will probably be outside the top 50 this year.

WR's: Michael Crabtree always reminds me of the old Little Rascals skit "Oh Miss Crabtree, there's something heavy on my heart." Anyone feeling me? Crabtree is a good player but not a particularly great fantasy player. In fact, he only had one 100 yard receiving game while everybody else at the WR position had none. That's the same amount as me, you and your Aunt Mildred. Randy Moss comes aboard and he's at least interesting but you have to wonder if he'll be consistent enough to catch enough balls week in and week out or make enough big plays to warrant serious consideration.

TE's: Vernon Davis had two 100 yard games last year but his production doesn't seem to be going the right way. In 2009 he had almost 80 catches, nearly 1,000 yards and scored 13 td's. In 2010 he caught 22 less passes and had 6 fewer td's. In 2011 he fell again to 67 catches for less than 800 yards and 6 td's meaning he was less than a handful of points away from falling out of the top 10. People will probably overpay for Davis who should now be considered solid but not spectacular.

DEFENSE/ST: Talk about a rebound. There was once a pitcher in major league baseball named Bret Saberhagen who was great every other year. The 49ers must have been a fan. In 2009 they were tremendous, one of the real sleepers. Coming into 2010, they were very hyped and very bad. Last year people got off the 49ers defensive bandwagon and low and behold they were the #1 fantasy unit. Considering their schedule and their personnel with Patrick Willis and folks, they once again come in as my #1 unit but I don't think that this is a dominant group. They created 38 turnovers last year and you have to wonder if they will be able to do that again. On the bright side, Willis did miss 4 games last year and will probably be healthier this season. I don't like the schedule outside the division with New England, Green Bay, Detroit, New Orleans and the Giants as they feature the 5 best QB's in the NFL, who will all get their crack at the 49ers. Thank you first place schedule.

KICKER: I was wrong about David Akers and did not recommend him last year. All he did was set an NFL single season record with 44 made FG's, 55 FG's attempted and 166 points scored (without a td). Akers is elite but I don't think he will again be #1 like last year when he was a full 32 points better than any other kicker.

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

- Michael Crabtree caught 115 targets last season but finished outside the top 30 in WR fantasy points.
- Alex Smith threw only 5 int's all last year.
- Alex Smith has completed more than 60% of his passes in 2 of the last 3 years (59.6% in the other).
- Including the playoffs, Frank Gore did not have a 100 yard rushing game in his last 10. As for 100 yard receiving games, Vernon Davis had 2, Michael Crabtree had 1 and everyone else combined for none. Gore was not good at the goal line last season either as he converted just 2 of 7 carries while the rest of the rushers were 4 out of 8.

QB's: Matt Flynn was brought into the fold largely off his 6 td pass performance in the final week of the season (think about that). Aaron Rodgers threw 45 td passes in 15 games and then Matt Flynn threw 6 in his sole start. I know there is talk of Russell Wilson and Tarvaris Jackson but in the end it will be Flynn. He will be okay, not great and should not be banked on to bring you fantasy goodness.

RB's: Marshawn Lynch was a very pleasant surprise last year. I recommended him in last year's magazine saying "Seattle's made a commitment to their O-line all through the draft and through free agency so Lynch should be better" and I had him more highly ranked than just any other publication. He responded carrying the ball 285 times for over 1,200 yards and scored 12 td's. He had at least 19 rushes every week in the 2nd half of the season. He is a Top 10 RB. Lynch touched the ball 11 times inside the 5 and scored 7. That is a great percentage by a guy who will fight hard for the tough yards.

WR's: Sidney Rice is the best of a group that includes Doug Baldwin, Ben Obomanu and BMW (big Mike Williams). For Mike Williams if you play in a PPR League, he will be more of a reception guy than a deep threat guy. Also, check his weight. He's been known to show up out of shape and if he's out of shape, you don't want him on your roster.

TE's: John Carlson left via free agency to go to Minnesota. The team traded for Kellen Winslow in May, who has been excellent in the redzone throughout his career and coach Pete Carroll mentioned they need to get him the ball near the goal line. I think Winslow will have a huge year from Matt Flynn and will be one of the best values on the TE board.

DEFENSE/ST: It's loud in that building, they have terrific fans and they get an awful lot of free false start penalties and it probably actually translates into a couple of extra sacks for that defense at home but a couple of extra sacks was not why Seattle was the 4th overall defense last year. They allowed just 2 players to rush more than 100 yards and they re-signed their brick wall DE Red Bryant. This is a very good unit and is a low end #1 and will be good value.

KICKER: Steven Hauschka is the kicker but you don't want him as he's disheartening to say and an even harder name to play.

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

• Seattle's Def/ST's had the 4th most fantasy points of any team last season.

• Marshawn Lynch had at least 19 rushes every single week in the second half of the season and now he's got a better contract. Be careful about him staying healthy. Lynch had a nose for the goal line as he touched the ball 11 times inside the opponents 5 and scored on 7 of those plays.

• Kellen Winslow had 75 grabs last year on 121 targets. Those 121 targets were just 3 less than Rob Gronkowski and more than Aaron Hernandez, Tony Gonzalez, Jermichael Finley, Jason Witten, Antonio Gates and Vernon Davis.

ST LOUIS RAMS

PS '12 OFF RANK #30
PS '12 DEF RANK #29

RUSH ATT%/RANK	RUSH YDS%/RANK	PASS ATT%/RANK	PASS YDS/RANK	• 2011 NUMBERS/RANK • PLAYS/GAME	YARDS/PLAY	YARDS/POINT
43%/19	37%/11	57%/14	63%/22	63.3/19	4.5/31	23.4/31

QB's: Jeff Fisher is now the head man in St Louis and he's going to need some help. The Rams averaged 3 wins per year over the last 5 seasons but keep this in mind - in 2010 they actually made the playoffs and a huge reason was Sam Bradford. Believe it or not, Bradford was in the Top 3 in NFL pass attempts that season heaving it 590 times. His completion % was 60%. Last year in the magazine I said if he was a Harry Potter character he'd be "Samuel Bradford, Lord of the checkdown." Still, you could see the progress. Now Brian Schottenheimer is the OC and Bradford is healthy again. I know he lost Brandon Lloyd as a free agent to the Patriots but Bradford will have a lot of completions and a lot of yards but not crazy td's.

RB's: As mentioned, Brian Schottenheimer is the new OC and this should make Steven Jackson very happy. Jackson is almost 30 but has suddenly become a bit more durable and has only missed 2 games in the last 3 years and has 7 consecutive 1,000 yard rushing seasons. His td total is always a little low, but don't be surprised if Jackson once again winds up as a Top 10 fantasy RB as he did a year ago. He's also not putrid in the pass game and had 42 grabs and 58 targets last year. As mentioned, the td's are low (total of 6) and if that could ever get to 10, he would be a steal. The concern with td's is Jackson only touched the ball for 6 plays inside the 5 all year long.

WR's: Danny Amendola seemed to be the best option in a very thin crop of WR's. Steve Smith comes into the fold but other than Amendola and Smith, it's Brian Quick and Chris Givens, not exactly household names. Heck, they are not even household names in their own households. Expect Amendola to be the poor man's Wes Welker but in a PPR league, he becomes reasonably valuable. Just keep in mind, it's Bradford's 3rd offensive system in 3 years and that's not easy on anyone but if anybody can find the possession receiver, it's a guy who likes to checkdown who is in his first year of the new system.

TE's: Lance Kendricks is the TE in St Louis and that means nothing for you if you are a fantasy player. He should not be on your team and should be outside the Top 20 rankings or at best right on the cusp.

DEFENSE/ST: In 2010 the run D was excellent and cut the rushing td's from 50 the previous 2 years to 7 but last year the defense was poor against the run again. They've added veteran CB Cortland Finnegan who should help the overall defense but in the end, this is not a great unit. Go somewhere else as the Rams had been one of the hot dozen fantasy units last season.

KICKER: Josh Brown was released and they turn the kicking duties over to Greg Zuerlein who is a 6th round pick out of Missouri Western St. He set an NCAA Div II record with 21 FG's in a row last season, 9 which were over 50 yards. Still, until the offense gets better, you don't want him.

QB's: Josh Freeman was unbelievable in 2010, 25 td's only 6 picks. Sure the yardage wasn't great but you could see that the kid had real ability. He's big, he's strong, he's tough. Then 2011 hit. Ten losses in a row, 16 td's, 22 picks and Freeman's season fell with a thud. He should be in-between 2010 and 2011 and the new OC Mike Sullivan should help. Sullivan has been with Eli Manning the last 2 seasons and that certainly won't hurt. Quick note: of the 20 plays Tampa ran inside the 5, all but 4 resulted in Josh Freeman having the ball in his hands. He didn't throw more than 2 td's in any game, but that should change this year. I'm betting on a little bit of a bounce back.

RB's: LeGarrette Blount was somebody that I liked coming into last year but Blount only had 1 game over 25 yards in the last 5, this is not good. What's even worse is that the team drafted Doug Martin in the 1st RD out of Boise St who will probably end up as the starter. Neither guy should be considered a top 25 RB until the situation shakes out.

WR Mike Williams

WR's: The Buc WR's last year had exactly zero 100 yard games. Uggh. But make way for Vincent Jackson who should help. He is an absolute stud and should help increase Freeman's performance. It probably won't do much for Mike Williams or Arrelious Benn who should both be solid if not spectacular in their roles.

TE's: Kellen Winslow was traded to Seattle in May. The Bucs then signed Dallas Clark. Who knows if he can stay healthy. When he plays, he is a good player. The question is how long will he be on the field and how much does he have left. Take a flyer on Dallas Clark as your #2 TE. If he comes up big you can trade your #1 and get better value at a different position.

DEFENSE/ST: Avoid the Bucs when it comes to drafting defenses. They were the worst unit in fantasy football despite having 4 defense/return td's. They only scored 46 points the entire year. If you take out the 4 td's, that means it was really low. Friends don't let friends draft a Tampa Bay defense.

KICKER: Connor Barth comes back after being exceptionally accurate last year connecting on 26 of 28 FG attempts. He ended up as the 18th overall kicker and should probably sit between 15 and 18 once again. A solid #2 kicker at best.

- Freeman didn't throw more than 2 td passes in a game LY. LeGarrette Blount only had 1 game over 25 rushing yards in his last 5. No WR had a 100 yard game last year for Tampa. Josh Freeman had 80% of the carries at the GL.

QB's: This is one of the most difficult teams to project. Mike Munchak leads this team in the 2nd year and at QB they may not make a decision on who will be the starter for a while. Matt Hasselbeck didn't sign until the lockout ended last year but it looks like it will be Jake Locker who ultimately has the reins. I wouldn't draft either Titans QB, plain and simple.

RB's: Chris Johnson was an absolute fantasy team killer in the first half of 2011 but came on a bit in the 2nd half with over 100 total yards in 6 of his last 9 games. He should be better this year and the addition of LG Steve Hutchinson who was released by the Vikings should help. A lot of what happened last year to Johnson may be attributed to his long holdout and he will be ready to atone for it this season.

WR's: I picked Kenny Britt as one of my absolute breakout players last year and he played two MONSTER games before his season ended in Wk 3. I think I actually cried a little when I saw that he was done for the season because he was going to be something special. A torn ACL is certainly not easy to come back from and he's already having some other issues. He suddenly looks like a guy who misses a lot of time after sitting out 17 games in the last 2 years. Although it saddens me to admit, Britt probably isn't one of the top 20 guys that you should be drafting. He's a gamble and a flex play at this point in time. Nate Washington had a very reputable year especially after Britt went down. Washington was one of the 15 best fantasy receivers last year and in 121 targets had over 1,000 yards, 74 catches and 7 td's. He will play better than you think and will be a good value when you take him as your #3 receiver. Speedy rookie Kendall Wright was described as "explosive" by Hasselbeck in OTA's and he's worth a look especially if Britt's knee isn't 100% in the preseason as the Titans have said that they will open up the pass game this year.

TE's: Last year I said Jared Cook was a good sleeper who would come on at the end of the year. Two of his last 3 games included a 9 catch, 103 yard effort and an 8 catch, 169 yard effort. OC Chris Palmer likes to use 2 base TE's and I think Cook will be a good value pick this year. Feel free to draft him as a high #2 TE.

DEFENSE/ST: Cortland Finnegan leaves after signing a FA deal with the Rams and this group is not particularly impressive. If you look up "average fantasy defense" in the dictionary, it says "see Tennessee Titans". That's about where they will be again this season. If you get stuck, I guess you can play them in a pinch but I wouldn't want to be going to war with this group week in and week out.

KICKER: Rob Bironas is a P-R-O. He made 29-32 FG attempts last year including 6-7 from 50+. I'm not sure how much the Titans will score this year but Bironas (who finished 9th in fantasy scoring last year) should be somewhere around the 10th to the 15th best kicker.

QB's: Robert Griffin III is the present and the future in Washington. He's smart, he's talented, he can fly and he's a physical marvel. The question just seems to be how quickly will OC Kyle Shanahan be able to make him a star? I like Griffin more than most and perhaps I'm feeling a little of what Cam Newton did last year but I have Griffin as my 15th overall QB.

RB's: Roy Helu gets the reigns. Or in other words, Hello Helu. Most people couldn't pick Helu out of a lineup if the other person was their postman but anybody who has the job on a Mike Shanahan coached team certainly has value. I expect him to get the rock. Mike Shanahan is not going to stand for what happened last year where the Redkins lost 10 of their final 12, dropping his record to 11-21 during his tenure in Washington. I think Helu is part of the solution. The only concern with Helu is he only had 1 td in 6 attempts inside the 5 last year. He'll have to get better.

WR's: Pierre Garcon comes on board and there is a lot to like with Garcon in this spot. He was in the Top 10 in targets last year with 134 and finished in the Top 25 in terms of overall fantasy points among WR's. I think once again he will be a bad 2 or good flex play and will probably outperform where he is drafted in most leagues. Santana Moss doesn't have much value any more and neither does Josh Morgan, it's really only Garcon.

LB Brian Orakpo

TE's: For years Chris Cooley was the guy. Now it's Fred Davis. Davis was the 20th ranked overall fantasy TE last year and had just about 800 yards receiving on 88 targets. He's going to have to do better than the 3 td's and I believe he will with Griffin at QB.

DEFENSE/ST: Jim Haslett may not have been a great head coach but he is a very good coordinator and the defense, which was 2nd worst in the NFL, moved all the way up into the top half of the rankings last season. The unit didn't particular perform well from a fantasy perspective but if you're looking for a 2nd defense, I suppose Washington could be your group.

KICKER: Neil Rackers is a very good kicker. Rackers made 32-38 FG's last year for the Texans and signed an offseason deal with Washington. He makes them better and is worth owning as your kicker in a deeper league and certainly could be the #2 kicker on any team.

ERIK'S CRAZY NOTES:

• Roy Helu may have the job but doesn't necessarily have a nose for the goal line scoring only once all year inside the opponents' 5 (17%).

• The Redskins' defense only had 1 defensive/return td last season tying them for worst in the NFL.

WE VALUE YOUR OPINION!

Every year we include a questionnaire so our readers can tell us what they liked best and what they did not use. We also ask for their input on what new features they would like to see included in the next year's magazine. WE WANT YOUR OPINION! What are your favorite sections? What would you like to see in next year's book? To have a direct impact on the contents of the 2013 Phil Steele's Pro Football magazine, simply fill out the questionnaire below. You must mail this to Phil Steele Publications, 25935 Detroit Road Suite 183, Cleveland, OH 44145. Limit one completed questionnaire per address/customer. Thank you in advance for your opinions.
